küveç survives in SW Az. küvec; Osm. güvec 'a flat, shallow earthenware cooking pot'. The exact meaning in Xak. is obscure; as Brockelmann points out al-nayraki is an error for al-nayzakı (Dozy II 631); the meaning is prob. 'a curb bit'. The connection between the two meanings is obscure. The spelling with -w- in Kaş. is deliberate, since it is under the heading fa'al mina'l-wāw, but cf. küveçliĝ. The word may be foreign; cf. kuzec. Xak. x1 küveç yügün: al-licāmi'l-nayzaki (so read) 'a curb bit(?)' Kaş. III 163; Xwar. xiv küveçniĝ (so spelt) aĝzi açılıms erdi 'the mouth of a cooking pot was open' (and a sparrow fell in it and died) Nahc. 193, 6; o.o. 28, 17; 29, 17.

E I küde-, read tentatively in Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. U IV 8, 36, is an error for bödu-; the line reads oyun oynayu böđiyu ayaların yapınıp 'playing games, dancing, singing, and clapping their hands'.

2 *küde:- See küde-gü; küde:n.

E kötl- it is suggested in Hüen-ts., p. 25, note 146 that this is a V. of which kötür- is the Caus. f.; prima facie it is improbable that the basic f. of a V. as common as kötür- should be Hap. leg., but the only suggested occurrence of this V. is in Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. VU?D keten Hap. leg.; so vocalized in the MS, but if it is a Dev. In the geographical usage sometimes treated as a N. and given Suff. S ködez- 'to watch over' and the like; n.o.a.b. Unquestionably a metathesis of közed-, q.v.; the semantic similarity with küd- is purely coincidental, since morphologically the two words could not be connected. Xak. x1 ol mapa: közeddi: 'he looked after (the thing) for my sake' (hafaza'l-say' li-acit); and one says ol meni: közeddi: intazarami 'he waited for me' (or 'looked for me'); this V. is constructed from (tubnā 'an) both (concepts) al-hifz and al-intizār; its origin is köz attı: 'he cast his eyes' on something to look after it; this is also in the V. közettil: Kaş. II 86 (köde:zür (sic), ködezmek); teprı: meni: közeddi: hafazam'illāh II 162, 6; yavlak ködez tilıgnı:

kök, etc. Preliminary note. There is great difficulty in determining how many early Turkish words of this general form there were and what were the qualities of their vowels and final consonants. Nawā'i had the same difficulty, see the quotn. fr. the Muḥākimate'l-luġatayn in Vel., p. 370 (top) where five alternative meanings are given:—'sky, melody, seam, cauterization (see 4 kök) and vegetation'. After the correction mentioned under kek has been made Kaş. lists three words with a short vowel and ten (some alternative meanings of the same word) with a long one. The first three mean 'pain, suffering' (kü:k or kü:g?); 'root' (kök) and 'thong' (kök) respectively. There is also another apparently early word meaning 'seam' or the like (kök). If this really is the word in Uyğ. it can hardly be a l.-w. fr. Pe. kü:k 'basting', and in that event the Pe. word may be a Turkish l.-w., but the status of the word is a little uncertain. Of the second ten the first (and so presumably the next six) are described as ending in -g, and the eighth (and so presumably the other two) as ending in -k. The first two 'metre' and 'melody' are alternative translations of the same word kü:g and the third 'a popular joke' is prob. an extended meaning of it. The fourth and fifth relating to animals were also certainly kü:g. The sixth and seventh, 'rust' and 'freckles', must be alternative translations of the same word which does not seem to be traceable elsewhere, but was perhaps kü:g. The eighth and ninth 'sky' and 'sky coloured' are alternative translations of kö:k. The last entry is a phr. meaning 'a village headman' otherwise traced only in KB; it is possible that the first element is the same word as the preceding.

VU 5 kök in the phr. kök ayuk; pec. to Xak. Ayuk is otherwise unknown, and its meaning obscure; it is not therefore possible to say whether kök:k in this phr. has one of its normal meanings. Xak. xi kök ayuk (spelt as one word, but immediately follows 4 kök:k) 'the title given to the headmen of villages and Türkmen (tribes)' (akābiratu'l-rasātiq wa'l-turkmān) *Kaş. VUF 1 kü:g 'Song, melody', and the like; l.-w. fr. Chinese ch'ü, Middle Chinese h'ok, 'song' (Giles 3,062). Survives in most NE languages; NC Kir., Kzx.; SC Uzb. as kü, küg, küy; l.-w. in Pe. as kük in such phr. as kük hardan 'to tune (an instrument)'. Uyg. viii ff. Man. tükedi Afrin Çor Tegin küġi 'here ends Afrin Çor Tegin's hymn' M II 8, 19; a.o.(?) do. 7, 1-2 (takşut): Xak. xi kü:g ('with -g') aruđul-şir 'the metre of a poem'; one says bu: yıl ne: kü:g; üzge: ol 'what is the metre of this poem?' VU 2 kü:g immediately follows the two entries of 1 kü:g; and is prob. merely an extended meaning of that word, since there is a similar combination of meanings in Khak. Xak. xi kü:g the word for any 'joke' (ađluka) which circulates among the people of any town during some year and is passed from mouth to mouth; hence one says bu: yıl kü:g keldi: 'this year's joke has arrived' *Kaş. ?D 3 kü:g (no doubt Dev. 4 kü:g survives in the NC Kir. phr. kü:gö kel- (of sheep and other female animals) 'to be on heat, ready to be mated'; Kzx. küy (see 3 kü:g;) seems to have the same meaning, cf. küylö- (of cattle, sheep and dogs) 'to mate' R II 1420. Xak. xi kü:g şifādu'l-kabş wa'l-rwūsüş fi awānihi şātiya(n), 'the mating of PU 5 kü:g Hap. leg. in both senses; for 'rust' the ordinary words are bas and 2 tat; there is no generally accepted Turkish word for 'freckle'; SW Osm. uses çil:l, but most languages use words derived, with some phonetic changes, fr. PU kük (or 6 kü:g?) 'suffering, distress'; prob. n.o.a.b.; R II 1417 notes a NC Kzx.(?) phr. kily kör- 'to suffer pain, or distress', but there is no other trace of it and there are in NC several words with a similar meaning which go back to kün-. D kekliḡ P.N./A. fr. kek; 'spiteful, revengeful'; practically syn. w. öçlüḡ, and in the early period usually used in Hend. w. it. Survives only(?) in NC Kır. kektü:; Kzx. kekti. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. TT VIII N:8 (öçlüḡ); Xak. XI Kaş. II 283 (kek).

(D) keklik 'partridge'; prob. A.N. (Cone N.) fr. kek as an onomatopoeic for the partridge's call. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE. There is another word for 'partridge' not noted before the medieval period, see çitl. Acc. to Red. in Osm. keklik is 'partridge' in general and 'the red-legged partridge' in particular and çil is 'the common grey partridge' and 'the francolin'. See Doerfer III 1639. Uyğ. Dis. V. GGL-

D kökle-, etc. Preliminary note. Kaş. lists Den. V. s fr. 3 kök and 1 and 3 kü:g and Refl. Den. V. s fr. 1 kök and 5 kü:g; the basic form of the first survives in NE. There is in KB a Den. V. fr. 4 kö:k. There is in Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A M III 29, 10 (iii) a word kökleyür of which the meaning is entirely obscure. These seem to be the only early words of this form. San. 307r. 26 lists a Den. V. fr. 2 kök which s.i.s.m.l.

D 1 kökle- Den. V. fr. 3 kök; 'to fasten with thongs'. Survives in NC Kir. köktö- and perhaps some other languages unless these are Den. V. s fr. 2 kök. Xak. XI ol eđer kökle:di: şadda rapta'l-sarc 'he tightened the thong of the saddle' Kaş. III 300 (kökle:r, kökle:me:k).

D 2 kökle- (ğ-) Den. V. fr. 4 kö:k; 'to be blue, grey, green, etc.' Survives in NC Kir. köktö-; SC Uzb. kükla- and perhaps elsewhere, but kö:ker-, q.v., is commoner in this sense. Xak. XI KB (hear the words of) kart köklemiş 'the old greyheaded man' 1492.

D 1 kügle- Den. V. fr. 1 kü:g; 'to sing' and the like. Survives in NC Kir. kü:lö:-/küylö- 'to tune' (a musical instrument); SW Osm. kökle- ditto (unless the latter is a Den. V. fr. Pe. kük). Xak. XI er kügle:di: tağannä'l-racul bi-ğniya wa axraca lahn fil-ğinā 'the man sang a song and brought out the melody in singing it' Kaş. III 301 (kügle:r, kügle:me:k); Çağ. xv ff. kükle- ('with k-k-') söz çal- 'to play (or tune?) a musical instrument' Vel. 369 (quotns.); kükle- sâz-ra kük hadan 'to tune a musical instrument' San. 307r. 26 (quotns.).

D 2 kügle- Den. V. fr. 3 kü:g; 'to graze'. As pasture is green there was an obvious temptation to regard this V. as identical with 2 kökle-; this seems to be at the back of the entry kökle- 'to graze, put cattle out to graze' in Vam. 330, reproduced in R II 1227 as 'Çağ., Bokhara'; but the Refl. f. küylen- (of cattle) 'to be well-nourished' in NC Kzx. preserves the earlier form. Xak. XI yilkı: kügle:di: ibtaqalati'l-dawâbb wa akalati'l-rabi 'the cattle grazed and eat the spring pasture' Kaş. III 300 (kügle:r, kügle:me:k).

D köklet- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of 1 kökle-; this V. is listed under the cross-heading -D- (for the third consonant) which suggests that the original entry had kökdet-; the alternative form is morphologically inexplicable. The -d- suggests that the original form of 3 kök was kög but the modern NC forms do not support this. See şığtat-. Xak. XI ol eđer yalığın köklettı: 'he ordered that the straps of his saddle-bow should be tightened' (bi-şadd); kökdedti: (sic) alternative form (luğā) Kaş. II 327 (kökletür, kökletme:k).

D 1 köklen- Refl. Den. V. fr. 1 kök; survives in SW Osm. köklen- 'to take root, be firmly established'. The basic form survives in NE Alt., Tel. köktö- 'to be related to (someone)' R II 1228. Xak. XI er kökledi: ta'ağgala'l-racul 'the man was well rooted' (i.e. of good family); also used for 'to stay in one place' (ğaniya) Kaş. II 253 (köklenür, köklenme:k).

D 2 köklen- Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of 1 kökle-. Xak. XI eđer kökledi: 'the thongs of the saddle were tightened' (suddat) Kaş. II 253 (no Aor. or Infin.; followed by 1 köklen-).

D 1 küglen- (kü:glen-) Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of 1 kügle-. Xak. XI er küglendi: 'the man sang' (ğannā); originally küglendi: Kaş. II 253 (küglentür, küglenme:k); o.o. II 255, 9; III 131 (1 kü:g).

VUD 2 küglen- (kü:glen-) Hap. leg.; Refl. Den. V. fr. 5 kü:g Xak. XI yüzi: anıy küglendi: 'freckles (al-kulfa) appeared on his face'; originally küglendi: Kaş. II 253 (no Aor. or Infin.; followed by 1 küglen-).

D 1 kökleş- Recip. Den. V. fr. 1 kök; cf. 1 köklen-. Survives in SW Osm., where it is syn. w. köklen-. Xak. XI ol anıy birle: kökleşdi: taşabbata bihi wa taşabbaka 'he clung to him and wrapped himself round him'; there is a dialect form köktaşdi: (2 kökleş- follows here) Bulğar XI ol anıy birle: kökleşdi: ta'ağgala ma'ahu 'aqda'l-ayıra 'he made a tribal union with him' Kaş. II 224 (kökleşür, köklesme:k; one of the four Bulğar words in Kaş.).

D 2 kökleş- Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of 1 kökle-. Xak. XI ol apar eđer kökleşdi: 'he helped him to tighten (fı şadd) the thongs of the saddle-bow' Kaş. II 224 (no Aor. or Infin.; see 1 kökleş-).

VU kökmek quite clearly legible in the photograph; according to Mal. (note op. cit.) it survives in SE Sarığ Yuğur as keğmek; Keri kökmek 'a kind of deer'; in Malov, Yazyk zheltykh uigurov, Alma Ata, 1957, p. 65 it appears as kegmik 'A kind of stag (Chinese chi nien) the size of a female donkey'. O. Kir. 1x ff. (I killed seven wolves, but) barsığ kökmekig öltürmedim 'did not kill leopards or stags' Mal. 11, 10.

PUD kükmek/kükme:n (?kügmek/küg-men) Hap. leg.; Den. N./A.s fr. kük (6 küg); the latter in this entry is unvocalized, and misvocalized in the main entry; these words seem to be vocalized with fatha but there is no doubt that the vowel was rounded. The second form seems to be the name, customarily transcribed kögmen of the Tannu Tuva mountains mentioned in Türkü VIII I E 17, etc., T 23, 28; if so the second consonant is -g-. Xak. XI kükmek er 'a man who has been tested (harasathu) by circumstances and endured sufferings (al-miḥna) and become hardened (ištadda) by them'; its origin is kük al-miḥna; this Adj. (sifāt, sic) is irregular (cā'at sādḡ); the regular form (al-qiyās) is kükme:n Kaş. I 479.

PU kēgen one of several words for 'illness, disease', or the like; pec. to Uyğ. and usually used in Hend. w. I iḡ; the spelling in Suv., if correctly transcribed, points to -é- rather than -i-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (the dhāraṇi will be effective) alku kēgeninte yılki kara kēgeninte iḡ kem 'in all cases of disease, the diseases of cattle and common people(?), illnesses (Hend.)' (discomfort, danger, pain) U II 73, I (iii) ff.; (demons) kezik iḡ kēgen kilḡuçi 'who cause epidemic(?) diseases' TT V 8, 83; açın iḡ kēgen (sic, spelt as one word) aḡasın amırtıḡurdaçı 'reducing the danger of hunger, pain and disease (Hend.)' Suv. 399, 18.

VUD köge:n the -ö- is shown in Kom. but this may be a dialect form since the word seems to be a Dev. N. fr. kü:-, the -ü- in which is fixed by 3 küiḡ, 2 kügle:-. This word has nothing to do with Kıp. (PU) kö:ken 'plum, peach' in Hou., Id., Tuh. which is a l.-w. connected with Ar. xawx, which is said to be an Aramaic l.-w. (see Hou., p. 100), perhaps through some Iranian intermediary. Xak. XI köge:n ribāḡu'l-bahm wa ribāḡu'l-ḡalāyib 'inda'l-ḡalb 'a noose to control calves, colts, etc.', and milch cows, etc. at milking time': yél köge:n qaves quzah 'rain-bow' (lit. 'a noose on the wind') Kaş. I 415; Kom. XIV kögen 'a rope for tying lambs and kids' CCG; Gr.

S kökü:n See köke:gün.

PUD kikiñç A Dev. N., but w. no obvious connection w. kik-; 'reply', nearly always in the phr. kikiñç bér- 'to give a reply'. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. Man. dımdarlar inça kikiñç bérdirler 'the Elect gave the following reply' TT II 6, 2; Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A (if anyone asks how he killed the demon) inça kikiñç bérḡil MI I 19, 11-12; a.o. do. 37, 19. Bud. (then his father the king hearing this petition) neḡ kikiñç (Pellist transcribes hēginç) bérü umadı 'could not give any reply' PP 15, 8 (see note thereon); (after a question, the Buddha) şlok takşutın inça tēp kikiñç yarlıkadı 'deigned to give the following reply

PU(D) kikne:- Hap. leg. ?; morphologically could be Den. V. in -e- fr. kēgen; the meaning can only be conjectured, but is clearly pejorative. Xak. kekre: 'an acrid, or bitter, plant', usually one eaten by livestock. Survives in SE Türkü kekre 'ergot' BŞ 525; SW Osm., Tkm. kekre 'a bitter plant; acrid, bitter'. Hou. 21, 22* and some modern NC, SC and NW languages; the origin of this word is obscure; it is apparently neither Mong. nor Iranian, and it is hard to see how it could be connected with kögüz, same meaning, through some L/R Turkish language, but the Çuv. form of that word is kākār, *Ash. PU kögür- n.o.a.b.; the Türkü text is not very clear, and the Uyğ. ones open to some doubt; the meaning of kıgür- would suit all the passages; these may in fact be misreadings of word or in some cases mistranscriptions of kötür-. D kökre- (-ğ-) Den. V. fr. 4 kök:k; etymologically the basic meaning must be 'to thunder'; also used for 'to make a loud noise', in various contexts. kim properly only the Interrogative Pron. 'who?', parallel to ne: 'what?', but, unlike ne, never used as an Interrog. Adj. The concept of Relative Prons. was entirely foreign to Turkish, in which Participles and the like are used where Indo-European languages use Relative Prons.,

E 2 kün has been read in various passages, almost certainly wrongly. In O. Kir. ix ff. the word read kün in Mal. 3, 1 etc. is in fact spelt k i n and seems to be ekin, q.v. The phr., or word, transcribed él kün in KB and several later authorities seems to be in fact élgün, i.e. 1 é:l, q.v., with the Collective Suff. -gün. It is possible that the word transcribed küydeki and listed under 1 küy, q.v., should in fact be transcribed kündeki, which was F. W. K. Müller's reading. If so, this kün seems to be a l.-w. fr. Chinese k'un 'the door to the women's apartments' (Giles 6,550). See Doerfer III 1689, which is partly based on unreliable authorities.

ke:nç (ğ-) 'the young', of human beings or animals. As such survives only(?) in SW Osm. genc, same meaning. It became a l.-w. in Mong. as kence 'small, feeble' (Kow. 2446; Haltd 182), and the Çağ. form below and SC Uzb. kenja, 'the youngest child (boy or girl) in a family', are reborrowings fr. VUD kénik- (g-) in a note on V.s ending in -k Kaş. says that these fall into two classes; (a) basic V.s like aşuk- and çülük-; (b) V.s in which the Suff. indicates that the Subject of the V. is unable to achieve his desires, like bastk- der. fr. bas-, usuk- der. fr. us-, kirik- and this V. The first two are Emphatic/Pass. forms, but kirik- is a Den. V. fr. kir-, and it is likely that this V. too, which has a çanma over the kāf is a Den. V., since there is obviously no semantic connection with kön-, and the obvious explanation is that it is a Den. V. fr. 2 kén. The only other known occurrence is in KB 4389 where the Fergana MS. has kinilse, the Cairo MS. kī[ga]pse and the Vienna MS. has a word which might be kenikse but looks more like könikse Xak. D kerük (g-) Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. ker-; lit. 'stretched out', hence 'broad, long'. Survives only in NC XIX Kzx. kērik (of journey) 'long' R II 1096 (not in the XX dicts.). In Kaş. the word, although vocalized hé:rik, rhymes with sevük, nelük, be:đük and must originally have been kerük which is morphologically correct. Xak. xı in a verse containing several corruptions translated 'my friend, how did you get to us and cross the long deserts (al-mafāwiza'l-madiida) and' ya:zi: kerük (MS. balzi: hé:rik) 'high mountains', *Kaş. D körüg (g-) Dev. N. fr. kör-; 'observer, spy'. Pec. to Türkü? Türkü VIII Oğuzdantan körüg kelti: 'a spy came from the Oğuz' T 8; o.o. T 9, 29, 33; in each case a phr. like 'their report (sav) was so-and-so' follows.

?D körük 'bellows'; this might be a Dev. N. (N.I.), but the only authority for körü- 'to blow with the bellows' is Red. 1589 and this may be merely a back-formation. S.i.a.m.l.g. except SC; SW Tkm. körük (prob. a false long vowel). The only meaning of körük in Vel. and the second meaning in San. is 'a hen which has stopped laying'; this meaning survives in SW Tkm. kürk; in San. 305r. 26 it is said that the word, prob. kürk/kürük, is described as Persian in the Burhān-i Qāti'; this is prob. correct; it does not seem to be Turkish. Xak. xı körük al-himluc wa min-fāxu'l-haddād 'a blacksmith's bellows' (Hend.) *Kaş. kerki: 'an adze'. Survives with this meaning in SE Türki: NC Kir.; al-qaddūm has other meanings ('axe, hatchet'), but the word prob. always meant 'adze'. No obvious Turkish etymology, perhaps a l.-w. Xak. xı kerki: *al-qaddūm Kaş. XVIII kerki, in Rūmi, 'a mattock (iṣa) with which builders break up tiles and do other work' San. 300v. 7 (Sami 1158 'a large axe'; not in Red.).

PU?F körge: almost the only Gancak word which is not Hap. leg.; prob. a l.-w., but not, like kendük, demonstrably Iranian. Survives(?) in NW Kırım körge 'cup' R II 1251. Gancak xı körge: 'a dish (al-ṭabaq) made of

I 430: Çağ. xv ff. körge* (?or körece; 'with k- and -ğ-') 'a table (şandali) on which decanters, jugs, and cups are put at a zarft'; also 'a wine decanter or jug' (şarâb zarft . . . belbele ma'nâsına Vel. 367 (quotns.); körece (spelt) 'a table (kursi) on which jugs and wine decanters are placed' (same quotns.); the Rûmî author made a mistake in translating it 'jug, decanter' San. 305v. 4.

D körgü: (ğ-) Dev. N. fr. kör-; lit. 'the act of seeing' or the like. A rare word which seems to survive only in SW Osm. görgü 'experience, breeding, good manners' (fr. kör- in the sense of 'to experience something'); Tkm. görgül/görgü 'pain, suffering' (cf. the Türkü phr. I emgek kör- 'to experience suffering'). Türkü VIII (you yourselves have offended against your wise xağan . . .) körgü:nin üçü:n İğdirmiş 'who nourished you because you looked to (i.e. obeyed) him' *I E 23, II E 19: Xak. D körkdeş Hap. leg. ?; N. of Assocn. fr. körk; 'of the same shape, a replica'. In a note on this passage, Hüen-tz., p. 25, note 156, v. G. suggests that the word actually means nirmānakaya, the first of the Buddha's three bodies, the 'shadow body' which he can assume for certain purposes; this seems to be a mistake; the replicas were no doubt nirmānakāyas, but the Turkish for that word was belgürtme (q.v.) etöz. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (just as the Buddhas, when they have entered nirvāna, by exercising their authority to ask for divine favour, in accordance with the wishes of mankind, by various distinguished rebirths) yarukluğ körkdeşlerin orun orun sayu kodu yarıkap 'deign to place their shining replicas in all places, Suv. 64, 6 ff.

kisi: 'wife'; cf. kis; kisi: is the older and prob. the original form. f is not a Xak. sound (see Studies, p. 167) and, even if it is taken as a scription of v, the consonantal cluster -yv- is otherwise known only in ayva: which is prob. a l.-w. Moreover, it can be explained as a Refl. Den. V. of küyüm which seems to be a genuine word although it is an unvocalized Hap. leg. This word has therefore been entered as küymen-.

D kezig (ğ-) Dev. N. fr. kez-; with a rather wide range of meanings, none very closely related to those of kez-, of which the basic connotation seems to be intermittence, 'a turn (which comes from time to time); an intermittent illness'. The word is spelt kezig in TT VIII and rhymes with ışig in KB which seems to confirm the -ğ-, but some modern forms point to an alternative final -k, perhaps going back to a parallel form kezek, a Dev. N. in -ek, but it is impossible to associate particular meanings with these alternatives. D keziğ (ğ-) Pass. Dev. N. fr. kez-; lit. 'something which is moved to and fro'; 'a weaver's shuttle'. Survives only(?) in SE Türki küzük 'shuttle' BŞ 557. Xak. xı keziğ the translation is corrupt; 'read huwa (MS. fi) alatu'l-hā'ik bi'l- (MS. al-xuyūfi'l-mun'aqida ba'duhā 'alā ba'd bihā yuffarraqu'l-sadā'l-a'lā mina'l-asfal a weaver's instrument with thread wrapped over and over round it with which the upper and lower

D közün- (g-) Refl. f. of köz-, presumably a very old alternative pronunciation of kör-, which is obviously connected etymologically with 1 köz; syn. w. körün-, 'to be visible, to appear'. (or, for Intrans. V.s, an Intrans.) Suff.; this word must therefore lit. mean 'something which is seen', perhaps with the application of 'something which is seen from within the building' rather than 'something you see out of'; the later meaning 'aperture' and the like is obviously a metaph. extension. It is generally believed, and is no doubt true, that no native Turkish word begins with l-; all the words listed below are either demonstrably l.-w.s or of a kind which might reasonably be supposed to be l.-w.s. It is also possible that there are some l.-w.s listed above in which the initial l- is preceded by a prosthetic vowel. If so, these would be parallel to the l.-w.s with initial r- preceded by a prosthetic vowel, see R. Some Chinese and Indian l.-w.s with initial l- which occur only in Uyğ. texts have not been included below since they never became fully naturalized in Turkish.

No native Turkish word except a few onomatopoeics, particles, etc., originally began with m-, but in most Turkish languages initial b-, when followed by a nasal within the body of the word (but not in Suff.), is changed to m- by assimilation. In a few languages, like Xwar. XIII(?), this change has taken place even when there is no nasal in the word. Words with initial m-, of which the original form has not survived, are listed here as main entries; the remainder are entered here only w. cross-references.

1 ma:/1 me: perhaps an abbreviation of yéme:; an Enclitic with several functions. (1) in some cases it is best translated 'and' or 'too', and indeed has been treated by some authorities as an independent word, although there is no real doubt that it is an enclitic. (2) in others it hardly seems to do more than give some emphasis to the preceding word. (3) attached to the Interrogatives, kim, ne, etc. it turns them into indefinite relatives, e.g. neçe: 'how much?', neçe:me: 'however much'. It disappeared in the medieval period except in a few words like ne:me:, q.v., in which it has become fused with the preceding word to form a new word. It is discussed at length in v. G. ATG, paras. 291, 352; Brockelmann, para. 144b. Üyg. VIII ff. Man.-A kaltı/ınça kaltı . . . ançulayu ma 'just as . . . so also' MI 13, 10; 14, 13; 17, 16: Bud. 2 ma:/2 me: an Exclamation, 'here you are!; take this!', and the like; s.i.a.m.l.g. sometimes as ma, sometimes me. Xak. XI the word is entered twice, once as mim alif hā, sometimes abbreviated to mim hā, and once as mim alif; both might represent me: but ma: is more probable, at any rate for the first; ma:(h) an Exclamation (harf) meaning hunāka wa xud 'here you are; take it'; one says this when handing something over (inda munāwalatı'l-şay) . . . to save time one sometimes says ma(h) Kaş. III 118; ma: (or me:?) an Exclamation meaning 'take it'; hence one says ma: xud wa hāka 'take it, here you are'; it is said both with hā and with alif ma(h); examples of alternative spellings with initial hā and alif in Ar. follow III 213.

The only basic Turkish words beginning with n- are ne; and neç, and even neç may be ultimately der. fr. ne. The other words listed below are either der. f.s, Sec. f.s, or l.-w.s. Several other l.-w.s occur in Uyg., some frequently, but are not listed below since they never occur except in Man. or Bud. religious works and so never really became part of the language. These include Sanskrit l.-w.s like namo 'homage' and nirvan 'nirvāna', and Iranian (mostly Sogdian) l.-w.s like niğoşak 'Hearer' (a Man. technical term), noş 'elixir', and nızvani 'emotion, passion'. In the latest Uyg. texts and in later languages there are also a few Mong. l.-w.s like nökör 'personal servant, friend' and in the Islamic period many Ar. and Pe. l.-w.s; the only one likely to cause confusion is Pe nā 'not', which occurs as early as KB 17, 18, etc., usually with a Neg. ne: originally an Interrog. Pron. 'what?' used in speaking of inanimate objects in the same way that kim is used of animate beings, and like that word also used as a Pron. As well as the derivatives below some oblique cases are almost used as Adv.s. The word and its der. f.s are discussed at length in v. G. ATG, see Index, p. 212. F no:m the Greek word nomos properly 'law' was a l.-w. in Syriac and was adopted by the Manichaeans as a technical term with a rather wider meaning 'law, doctrine', etc.; from this it passed to Sogdian as nwm and was used in Buddhist texts to translate Sanskrit dharma, which has an even wider range of meanings.

In Turkish it is used in both Man. and Bud. texts with a similarly wide range of meanings. It is not connected with Tokharian A nom mentioned in TT X 58 note; this is a pure Tokharian word meaning (and cognate to the English word) 'name'. It became an early l.-w in Mong. where it came to mean 'law; scripture; religion; book', etc. NE Tel. nom 'law' R III 695; Tuv. nom 'book' are reborrowings fr. Mong. and not survivals. Initial r-, like initial l-, q.v., was a sound entirely foreign to the Turkish language and any l-w. with initial r- which became established in the early language assumed a prosthetic l-, e.g. ertini, erej. There is a sprinkling of Indian and Iranian l-w.s in some Man. and Bud. texts without the prosthetic vowel, e.g. ratni, the Tokharian form of Sanskrit ratna, which later became ertini, but these are not listed here since they never became at home in Turkish. In the Moslem period a number of Arabic and Persian l-w.s entered the language unchanged, but those used in popular speech usually assumed a sa:p (sap) 'the handle (of a sword, knife, etc.)'; s.i.a.m.l.g. with this and extended meanings. sa:v 'a speech', etc.; the difference between this word and söz, if it is not simply one of chronology or dialect (söz is rather rare in the early period), seems to be one of quantity; sa:v seems to mean 'a (full-length) speech; a narrative or story, a message', while söz seems to mean basically 'a single word, or short utterance'. sap-, sep- Preliminary note. There is great confusion about V.s of these two forms. The only certain form in Türkü is sep- 'to repair (something broken)', and the only certain form in Uyğ. sap- 'to instil, graft', and the like, although 'to equip, fit out' was almost certainly sep-. Kaş. lists only sap- and translates it (1) 'to thread (a needle)'; (2) 'to repair (something broken)', but distinguishes between saptur- 'to order to repair' and septür- 'to order to provide a dowry', obviously a Caus. f. of sep- which is homophonous w. sep 'a dowry'. On this basis therefore it looks as if the Türkü word was misspelt and Kaş.'s two meanings go back to some common origin. Sap- 'to thread (a needle), to inoculate, graft' survives in SE Türki: perhaps NW Kaz. R IV 401: and SW Tkm.; sep- 'to equip' is not noted again. In the mediæval period two apparently new V.s appeared, sap- 'to go astray, deviate', and the like, which is noted in XIX NC Kzx. and NW Kaz. in R IV 402 and survives in SW Osm., and sep- 'to scatter (solid matter, e.g. seed), to sow; to sprinkle (liquids), to irrigate', which is practically syn. w. saç- and s.i.a.m.l.g. (in SW serp-).

D sa:vcı:- N.Ag. fr. sa:v; normally 'messenger', and so a less distinguished term than yala:vaç (a l.-w., q.v.); but as in this meaning it corresponded to Ar. rasül it was used by early Moslem Turks for 'the Prophet'; in this sense it was soon displaced by the Pe. l.-w. payğambar and now survives only(?) in NE Tob. sawcı 'go-between' R IV 431. Türkü viii ff. a sa:vcı: on a yellow horse and a yala:vaç on a bay horse bring good news Irkb 11; a.o. do. 55: Uyg. viii ff. Bud. (if we have gone from one town, country, or realm to another as a) (VU) tiñçi sa:vcı 'messenger' (i.e. making mischief) TT IV 10, 21 (tiñçi is Hap. leg., prob. a N.Ag. fr. a Chinese l.-w.): Xak. xi sa:vcı: 'a prophet' (al-rasül) from among the prophets of God; its base is sa:v meaning 'news, a statement, a proverb', and the prophet communicates these things Kaş. III 441 (and see Oğuz); a.o. III 154 (sa:v): KB sa:vcı 'the Prophet' (Muhammad) 30, 388: xiii(?)

Tef. sa:vcı 'prophet', once in the Hend. yala:vaç payğambar sa:vcı 257; xiv Muh.(?) (in a list of occupations) rasül 'messenger, envoy' sawcı: Rif. 156 (mis-spelt su:vcı); Mel. 57, 12 (elçit): Oğuz xi sa:vcı: al-rasül wahu'a'l-safir 'messenger, envoy', who travels between the families of an intended bridegroom and bride with messages Kaş. III 441; a.o. III 154 (after sa:v) same translation, adding 'because he reports the statements of one to the other and vice versa, as I have explained'; not here described as Oğuz: Xwar. xiii sa:vcı (with triply dotted wāw) 'prophet' Ali 48: Kip. xiv şawcı: (-c) 'one concerned with disputes (mansüb ilâ'l-da'wa), in the sense of differences between two adversaries; such a person must be a qadı; and şawcı: is used for 'prophet' (al-nabi); they say sawcımuz 'our prophet' meaning 'the Prophet', God bless him Id. 61.

D suvcı: N.Ag. fr. su:v; s.i.s.m.l. for 'water-seller, water-carrier, mariner, swimmer', etc. Uyg. viii ff. Bud. kim yérçi suvcı kemici bar erser 'if there are any guides, pilots, or boatmen' PP 22, 4-5; a.o. do. 23, 8; Civ. (in a charter of immunities) borlukıpa ögen kesgüçler suvcı klrmedin 'the people who cut the streams and the water superintendent must not enter his vineyard' UŞp. 88, 45-6 (as the V. is kes- 'to cut', not kaz- 'to dig'), the first were presumably labourers who cut the banks to release irrigation water): Çağ. xv ff. sucı (spelt) sāqı wa ābdār 'cup-bearer; butler' San. 239r. 9 (quotns.).

D sevit Caus. Dev. N. fr. sev-, lit. 'one who causes love', rather than 'one who loves'; 'the planet Venus'. For practical purposes Hap. leg., the only other occurrence being in the passage in Rbg. quoted fr. KB, R IV 501, and prob. a word invented by the author of KB. Cf. çolpan. Xak. xi KB sevük yüz urundi beşinci Sevit, seve baktı erse sen özni avit 'fifth, Venus put her lovely face (in the sky); when she looks lovingly at you, enjoy yourself' 135.

PUF sibüt Hap. leg.; no doubt a l.-w., presumably, in Kaşğar, Indo-Iranian; cf. Pe. sibitt 'dill, Anethum graveolens'. Kaşğar xi sibüt al-kusbara 'coriander' Kaş. I 356.

D savdıç prima facie a Den. N. in -dıç, cf. tardıç, sağıdıç, but there is no semantic connection w. sa:v and it may be, like other names of artefacts, a l.-w. Cf. savdıçlan-, which fixes the vowels. N.o.a.b. Xak. xi savdıç al-gaf'atu'llati turmal mina'l-ağşân 'a basket plaited from twigs', used for carrying fruit, etc. Kaş. I 455.

D sabit:- (or sapit:-?) Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of sabi:-. Xak. xi at kuđruk sabıttı: 'the horse waved (harraka) its tail'; and one says it kuđruk sabıttı: 'the dog wagged (başbaşa) its tail' Kaş. II 298 (sabıtur, sabıtma:k); bu: at of kuđruk sabıtğın 'this horse is constantly waving its tail'; also of a dog when it wags its tail, when it asks for food or sees its people (ahlahu) and fawns on them I 513.

D sevit- Caus. f. of sev-; 'to make (other people) love (oneself)'. N.o.a.b., but fairly common in KB. Cf. sevtür-. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. (Queen Bhadrā every day made gracious affectionate speeches to the king) etözin sevitğelir ücün 'in order to make him love her body' U III 54, 16-17; o.o. TT V 28, 119 etc. (ayat-): Xak. D suvat- Caus. f. of suva-; as such n.o.a.b., but other later forms of this V. and suvğar- form parallel Caus. f.s subat-, suvart-, etc. w. similar and extended meanings. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. U I 29, 6-7 (u:ğ): Çağ. xv ff. suwat- Caus. f.; andüd kardan 'to order to plaster' San. 247v. 23.

PUD subıt- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of subıt-; cf. subırla-. Xak. XI ol ne:gni subıttı: 'he tapered (allala) the thing, that is constricted its sides and lengthened it' (yuhaddid tarfahu tea yutarovillahu), as, for example, a nail Kaş. II 298 (subıtur, subıtma:k).

D saptur- Caus. f. of sap-; n.o.a.b. in its original meaning but s.i.s.m.l. as the Caus. f. of sap- in its later meanings. Xak. XI ol mağa: kuş kanatın sapturdı: 'he ordered me to join up (i.e. mend, bi-waql) the falcon's (al-bāzi) wing' (etc.); also used for mending (rafā) anything Kaş. II 183 (sapturur, sapturmark): (Kip. XIV saptur- ankaba ğayrahu 'to lead someone astray' Id. 56).

D septür- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of sep-; precedes saptur- in Kaş. Xak. XI ol (sic, superfluous) teñri: seni: mağa: sevtürdi: 'God put love for you (mağabbatak) in my heart' *Kaş. D sapığ Dev. N. fr. sap-; 'something joined to something else' and the like. In Uyg. only in the phr. ulağ sapığ '(endless) succession'. N.o.a.b. Uyg. VIII ff. Man.-A M III 13, 19 (ii) (I ulağ): Bud. TT VI 015, etc. (I ulağ): Xak. XI sapığ kisru'l-xibā 'the lowest flap of a tent' Kaş. I 374 (lit. something joined on to the rest of the fabric).

D suvuk (suvuk) Intrans. Dev. N./A. fr. suva-; 'fluid, liquid', and the like, with extended meanings. Survives w. the same meanings in SW Osm. sıvık (also cıvık); Tkm. suvuk. Cf. suvlağ. Kıp. XI suvuk (sic) 'anything liquid and runny' (māyi raqıq) like clotted cream and thick fruit juice when it has become runny (raqqa); hence one says suvuk yuğrut 'runny yoğurt'; suvuk kuđruk 'a long tail with very little hair on it' (qalılı'l-şa'r), like the tail of a camel; also a tree (i.e. with few leaves), etc. Kaş. III 164 (the -w- with both damna and kasra everywhere); Tkm. XIII al-xaxw wahu'l-nā'im 'soft' (opposite to 'hard' katt): şuwık (MS. şawı:k); Kıp. yuımşak Hou. 28, 1; Osm. XIV ff. sıvık 'liquid, runny'; c.i.a.p. TTS I 626; II 823; III 626; IV 690.

D sapğa:k Hap. leg.; this word occurs, in a list of words with four consonants which are arranged in strict alphabetical order, between çamğuk and saplık but is spelt başğak in the MS.; there is no doubt that it is misspelled and should be spelt sapğak; Dev. N. fr. sap-, lit. (the part of the body) 'which joins' (the upper to the lower part). Xak. XI sapğa:k mā fawqa'l-warikayn '(the part of the body) above the hips' Kaş. I 470.

Dis. V. SBÇ-

(S) sıvğa- Hap. leg.; the word is quite clear in the photograph; prima facie a Den. V. fr. sıvığ; there does not seem to be any cognate word, but the meaning is clear. Uyg. VIII ff. Man.-A (then the magicians in the city of Babylon took a bow and arrow; they strung the bow and shot at Zruş Burxan (the Prophet Zoroaster)) okı yana sıvğar öz tamırıpa tegdi 'their arrow turned to one side and penetrated his own vein' (the demon then died) Man.-uig. frag. 401, 8.

D suvğar- Trans. Den. V. fr. suw-; 'to water (livestock); to irrigate or water (land)'. S.i.a.m.l.g.; in SW Az., Osm., Tkm. suvar-; NC Kzx. suar-; NW Kk., Nog. suvğar-; Kır. Kumyık, and all other language groups suğar-. Xak. XI ol at suvğardı: 'he watered (saqiya) the horse' (etc.) Kaş. II 188 (suvğarur, suvğarmak); o.o. in grammatical examples II 44, 18 etc.: XIII(?) Tef. suvar-

'to irrigate' 276: XIV Muh. asqā'l-mā 'to irrigate' suwar- Mel. 22, 9 (istaqā'l-mā) su: tart- Rif. 103; Çağ. xv ff. suwar-suvar- 'to moisten', that is to moisten mud, etc. Vel. 301; suğar- (spelt) 'to give water' (āb dādan) to the thirsty; 'to moisten' (sirāb kardān); also pronounced suwar- San. 243v. 26 (quott.); reverse entry do. 247v. 28: Xwar. XIV suğar- 'to irrigate' Qutb 161; suvar- 'to water' (sheep) Nahc. 113, 12: Osm. XIV ff. suvar-, sometimes sivar-, 'to water', etc.; c.i.a.p. TTS I 649; II 850; III 645; IV 714.

D suvğart- Caus. f. of suvğar-; s.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI if it is desired to form a Caus. of a V. ending in -r-, -t- is added to it, and (in the Perf.) the -d- (of the Suff.) is merged with it, the result is -tt-, the -d- being assimilated, e.g. ol atın suvğarttı: 'he directed someone to water (saqiya) his horse' Kaş. II 25b, 2; n.m.e.

D suvuklık Hap. leg. ?; A.N. (Conc. N.) fr. suvuk; 'a liquid'. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. TT V 26, 100-2 (2 çuğ).

C sıpa:kur Hap. leg.; Kaş.'s etymology is possible, but surprising, since akur, q.v., a Pe. l.-w., properly means 'a stable or stall', although used in the medieval period for 'manger'. It is perhaps a l.-w., and this a false etymology. Xak. XI sıpa:kur al-mıslāt 'a nose-bag'; originally sıp akuru: mī'lāsu'l-tānī mīna'l-xayl 'a manger for a colt that has cut its first teeth' Kaş. I 487.

D sa:vıkla- Hap. leg.; the word is certainly so spelt, but there is no other trace of sa:vık, fr. which it is a Den. V. This might conceivably be a Dim. f. fr. sa:v, in which case the V. might mean 'to talk incoherently'. Uyg. VIII ff. Civ. [gap] ağzıntın ta:şğaru: üntürür: koğsar: sa:vıklar: köñli: a:da:r 'he brings up (his food), grows weak, and talks incoherently; his mind wanders' (assuming an unusual scripion of azzar:) TT VIII 13.

VUD suvıflan- Hap. leg.; Refl. Den. V. fr. suvığ Dev. N. fr. suva:-. Cf. suvuk. Xak. XI ol baliğ suvığlandı: 'he reckoned that the honey (etc.) was runny' (raqıq) Kaş. II 267 (suvığlanu:r, suvığlanma:k).

D suvğarımın- Refl. Simulative Den. V. fr. a N.S.A. fr. suvğar-; noted only in grammatical sections. Xak. XI the most correct way (of expressing the idea that a man pretends to do something but does not actually do it), and the commonest, is to add (to the Refl. f. of the V.) before the nün a mim and a şin (MS. şin), making three consonants in all, e.g. ol at suvğarımındı: 'he pretended to water (yusqi) the horse' Kaş. II 202, 12; a.o. II 261, 22; n.m.e.

D suvğarın- Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of suvğar-, used as a Simulative; in a grammatical section immediately before suvğarımın-; the MS. actually has suvğardı: but the context shows this to be an error. Xak. XI if it is desired to express the idea that a man pretends to do something but does not actually do it, one way is to add nün (to the basic V.) before the dāl (of the Perf.), e.g. ol at suvğarındı: (so read) 'he pretended to water (yusqi) the horse' Kaş. II 202, 3; n.m.e.

D suvğarış- Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of suvğar-; noted only in a grammatical section. Xak. XI if you wish to modify a V. in this section to express help (i'āna) in doing something or competition, you add şin (to the basic V.) before the dāl (of the Perf.), e.g. ol mapa: at suvğarışdı: 'he helped me to water (fi saqy) the horse' Kaş. II 201, 21; n.m.e.

D sepük Hap. leg.; Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. sep-; etymologically this should mean 'equipped, fitted out'; its exact meaning in its context is discussed under silkim, q.v. Xak. XI KB 4599 (silkim).

D seviğ, sevük Preliminary note. These two words, the first a N.Ac. in -iğ fr. sev-, 'love, loving, liking', and the second a N./A. in -ük (Passive), 'liked, beloved', must be carefully distinguished. This is not easy in der. and later forms, since seviğ became sevüiğ by labial attraction at a fairly early date. Cf. saçığ, saçuk.

D seviğ see above. N.o.a.b., displaced in the medieval period by words like sevğür, N.Ac. in -ğür, or l.-w.s. Türkü VIII ff. Man. (if we have sinned) etöz seviğince yorip 'acting in accordance with the desires of the flesh' Chuas. 196-7; Uyg. VIII ff. Man.-A etöz seviğın uvutsuz işin 'bodily love and shameless behaviour' (i.e. sexual intercourse) M I 16, 18-19; seveğ özütlüğü niğosaktar 'the Hearers with loving spirits' do. 28, 24; kentü seviğın 'because of self-love' do. 34, 19; Man. seviğ köpüllin 'with loving thoughts' M III 34, 17; Bud. PP 78, 5-6 (amrak): Civ. Seviğ Buyruk P.N. Usp. 112, 2: (XIV Muh. al-şadiq 'close friend' sewğü: Mel. 55, 1; Rif. 152: Kip. XIII (after sew-) al-mahbüb 'beloved' sewğü: Hou. 39, 16; XIV ditto Id. 54); Çağ. xv ff. see sevük: Osm. XIV and XV sevi/sevüiğ/sevüiğ 'love'; in several tex. TTS I 615; II 811; III 616; IV 678 (XIV sevğü 'beloved', once I).

D sevük see above. Uyg. VIII ff. Man.-A M I 23, 6 (ağız); o.o. do. 7 and 28: Xak. XI sevük ne:n 'a thing which is loved' (al-mahbüb) Kaş. I 390; aydım apar sevük (sic) 'I said to him "beloved!"' I 94, 2; KB sevük savcı birl 'with the beloved Prophet' 30; sevükrek atın 'his favourite horse' 315; o.o. 135 (sevit): XIII(?) Tef. sevükrek 'most loved' 265; Çağ. xv ff. sewük ('with -k') mahabbat 'love' Vel. 291 (but quott. contains sewük sewgen 'one who loves a beloved'); (sewğüm

(sic) mîhr wa mahabbat 'love' San. 258v. 29; it is not clear whether this is an error for sewgi or a mistranslation of 'my beloved': Xwar. XIV sevük 'beloved, dear' Qutb 157.

sibek the basic meaning underlying both translations seems to be 'a long object in a central position'; survives only(?) in SW Osm. sübek 'an infant's urinal in a cradle'; XX Anat. sibek (1) ditto; (2) 'the iron pivot of a hand-mill'; (3) 'the tap-root of a tree' SDD 1225; söbek (2) only, inter alia, do. 1247. Xak. XI sibek 'the pivot of a hand-mill' (qubul'-rahâ), that is the iron (rod, al-hadida) round which the upper millstone revolves; sibek 'the hollow reed (al-qaşab) which is fixed in an infant's cradle for him to urinate in' Kaş. I 389.

sa:tır Hap. leg. Xak. XI sa:tır a term of abuse (sabb) meaning 'you without a pedigree' (man lâ aşı lahu) Kaş. I 406.

F sıtır l.-w. fr. Sogdian st'yr, which is itself a l.-w. fr. Greek stater 'a silver coin'. Common in USp. and Fam. Arch. as a unit of currency, occasionally as a unit of weight. The Dat. sıtırka gives the quality of the vowels. Study of the documents shows that there were three units of currency, the bakır 'copper' representing the Chinese ch'ien 'copper cash' (Giles 1,736) of which ten were equal to a sıtır, the sıtır, and the yastuk equal to fifty sıtır. As units of weight the bakır was a Chinese 'mace' or one-tenth of an ounce, and the sıtır the Chinese liang 'ounce' (Giles 7,010). These words are discussed in F. W. K. Müller, 'Uigurische Glossen', p. 319, Festschrift für Friedrich Hirth, Berlin, 1920. L.-w. in Mong. as şicir 'refined gold, gold leaf' (Kow. 1508). Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. USp. 18, 3 (bakır), etc.—Üç sıtır tamğa kümüş do. 64, 18 seems to mean 'three sıtır in (minted) coin'—I sıtır it süttin 'one ounce of dog's milk' H I 62; xiv *Chin.-Uyğ. sok-, suk- Preliminary note. *Most modern NE, NC, SC, and NW languages distinguish between sok- 'to beat, crush, reduce to powder, forge (iron)', and the like with a Direct Object in the Acc., and suk- 'to insert, thrust (something into something else), with some connotation of force; to invite to enter, admit', and the like, with a Direct Object in the Acc. and an Indirect one in the Dat. Dis. V. SĠN-

D sağın - Preliminary note. The -k- of sakin- was voiced at an unusually early period, cf. sakinç. This may have been due to the fact that the first vowel was originally long, cf. the spellings of sakinç in TT VIII. Thus fr. XI there were two V.s sağın-. In Kaş. I sağın- is listed correctly between süsün- and soğun-; 2 sağın- is listed immediately before sakin-, three other V.s intervening between the two. Kaş.'s note shows that he was aware of the unusual status of 2 sağın-.

D I sağın - Refl. f. of sağ-; survives only(?) in SW Osm. sağın- 'to yield milk, or, metaph., moisture' RIV 265 (but few other authorities); Tkm. sağın- 'to milk for oneself'. Xak. XI er koyun sağındı: 'the man pretended to milk his sheep' Kaş. II 152 (sağınur-, sağınmak).

D 2 sağın - See sakin-.

D sakin- (sa:kın-) Refl. f. of sa:k-; originally simply 'to think'; this meaning s.i.s.m.l., but in most it has come to mean 'to think longingly about (something); to desire', or 'to think

These are meanings appropriate to sakla-, saklan- and seem to be due to a folk etymology; in Tkm. sâğın- (sic) means 'to stop and think'. VUD soğun- (soğın-)/suğun- Hap. leg.; in its first meaning Refl. f. of soğın-; the meaning of the Ar. translation of the second phr. is disputed, but a Refl. f. of suğ- in the sense of 'to drain oneself off' would suit it. Xak. VUD sokun- this V. is vocalized both sıkın- and sokun- in Kaş. but the Uyğ. phr. points clearly to the latter; in the absence of an Indirect Obj. it can be taken as sokun- rather than sukun- with the basic meaning of 'to rub oneself hard' or the like, but this is not wholly satisfactory. SW Osm. xv to xvii sokun- 'to put (an ornament) on (one's head); to plant (e.g. rose trees) in (the ground)' represents an earlier sukun-. Uyğ. I sağır 'a game battue'; n.o.a.b. Several Kip. authorities use this spelling for sığır, but that is prob. a mere error. D salıġ Dev. N. fr. sal- (this, rather than salık, was prob. the original form) with a wide potential range of meanings. In the early period it meant some form of tax, and was the common word for 'tax' in the Golden Horde, see Caferoğlu in TM IV, p. 41. It survives in this sense as səlīk in SE Tar. R IV 359; 'Türki BŞ 386. Uyğ. VIII ff. Survives for 'left-handed' in SW Osm., but all other languages seem to use some form of the Mong. word in this sense. 'The Kip. XI solak: 'the spleen' (al-tihāl); the s- is altered from t- (i.e. in tala:k, q.v.); this is like the (Ar.) word sitt for sids and fast for ḥass (another example quoted) *Kaş. D salġa: Hap. leg.; Dev. N./A. fr. sal-. Xak. XI salġa: at 'a restive (camū) horse' Kaş. I 425.

D salkım occurs in two quite different meanings (1) 'cold; hoar-frost', and the like, and rather later (2) 'something pendulous, a bunch of grapes, ear-rings', and the like. In the first sense it is syn. w. sarkım, q.v., which is prima facie a N.S.A. fr. sark-; but sark- means 'to hang limply' and the like, so is semantically the basis of salkım in its second sense. On the other hand this is also one meaning of salın-, q.v. The explanation is perhaps that salk-*, a der. f. in -k- (Intrans.) of sal-, also meant 'to hang limply' and is the basis of salkım in its second sense, and that sark- and sarkım are Sec. f.s of these words. But the connection between sal- and its derivatives and 'cold' is obscure. Salkım in the sense of 'a bunch of grapes', and the like, survives in NW Kk. solkım: SW Az. salkım; Osm., Tkm. salkım; it does not survive in the sense of 'cold', but the cognate form salkın s.i.a.m.l.g., in NE Alt., Tel. for 'a violent (cold) wind', elsewhere for 'cool', or 'cold' (weather). *Uyğ. simek this word and simekle:- raise some difficulties. Malov in Pamyatniki drevnetyurkskoi pis'mennosti, Moscow-Leningrad, 1951,

p. 420, suggested w. refce. to Suv. 5, 2 that it was identical w. Çuv. çimëk (syimek) and meant 'funeral feast'; but that word is merely the Çuv. equivalent of yemek 'food' and is quite irrelevant. In the vast majority of cases simek is used in the Hend. arığ simek and seems to mean 'copse', forest, jungle', or the like. In Suv. 602, 7 it is used by itself and cannot have this meaning. Semekle-, so spelt, in Suv. 5, 2 may be a different word. Uyğ. VIII ff. In Türkü sen was used both as Sing. and as Plur., the regular Plur. siz not being found in these texts, perhaps fortuitously, but in Xak., q.v., it was regarded as uncivil to address anyone except an inferior as sen. VUF sünzi: Hap. leg.; 'louse'. No doubt a l.-w. fr. a Chinese phr. The second syllable is the common enclitic tsü (Giles 12,317), but there are difficulties about the first. The normal Chinese word for 'louse' is shih'sé (Giles 9,929); there is an alternative word, Giles 9,930, Karlgren, Grammatica Serica Recensa, no. 506a., which has the same pronunciation, but has as its upper part a character, Karlgren, op. cit., no. 383a., which serves as a phonetic sin/sün (both current) in Giles 4,584-6/4,894-6. Prof. W. Simon says that there is no evidence that it ever had this phonetic value in Giles 9,930, but as its presence in that character is unexplained (see Karlgren, op. cit.) it seems possible that there was once a Chinese word sün, or the like, for 'louse' which was later displaced by shih'sé, a commoner word. Xak. XI sünzi: şay' min cinsi'l-barğüt wa ahsibuhul-qaml a thing of the flea family; I reckon that it is 'louse' Kaş. I 422.

F I sır originally 'lacquer', l.-w. fr. Chinese ch'i 'lacquer' (Giles 1,023; Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese ts'jat, which would have been ts'ir or the like in VIII transcriptions of Chinese in Tibetan characters, see JRAS, 1926, p. 521). S.i.a.m.l.g.; in NE, NC, NW usually 'colour, paint', in SE, SC, SW Osm. 'lacquer; glaze (on pottery); silvering (on mirrors)', and the like. Cf. sırçı: Xak. XI SIR 'viscous substances (luziçât) made of glue (al-ğirā) and daubed (yulaṭṭax) on Chinese bowls (qışā) and then carved' (or painted, yunqas); hence one says sırlıg aya:k 'a cup daubed with it, and carved (or painted)' *Kaş. VU 2 sir Hap. leg.; onomatopoeic. Xak. XI one says of the sound of a cricket (al-cudcud) sir sir etti: 'it made the sound of this onomatopoeic' (al-hikāya); also used as an onomatopoeic for the scratching (al-şarir) of a pen and the like Kaş. I 324.

PU sir (?şir) except for possible occurrences in I E 34 and Ix. 21 (see 2 irkin) this word occurs only in T in the phr. quoted below. Various explanations are thus suggested; the most plausible is that put forward by Aalto in Journal de la Société Finno-Ougrienne XI, p. 51 that it is the Sogdian word şyr, 'beautiful, good'. Türkü VIII Türkü (PU) şir bođun 'the good(?) Türkü people' T 3, 11, 60, 61, 62.

VU sor Hap. leg.; prob. a mere onomatopoeic, but cf. so:r-, which may itself have an onomatopoeic basis. Xak. XI one says er sor: sor mü:n öpti: 'the man sipped (hasā) the soup noisily' (?), MS. bi-şib, which gives no sense and is prob. an error; it is an onomatopoeic (hikāya) for the sound of the lips (al-şafah) *Kaş. sa:r-, ser- Preliminary note. *A good deal of confusion has occurred between these two V.s, chiefly owing to scribal errors in the MS. of Kaş. and misunderstandings by Atalay, but the difference is made clear by a grammatical passage, II 37 ff., on the formation of the Infin., if it is correctly translated. It states that there are two Infin. Suffs., -ma:k and -me:k, the first attached to V.s containing (1) qāf; (2) ğayn; or (3) back vowels, the second to V.s containing (1) al-kāfu'l-şulba (k); (2) al-kāfu'l-rakika (ğ); or (3) front vowels (al-kalimatu'l-rakika). Examples are given of each class, that for the last including the following; e.g. er telim serdi: 'the man endured (şabara) much', serer, sermek; since the word has front vowels, the Infin. has -me:k (kāfiya(n)); do you not see that a similar V. w. back vowels (al-muşbi'a) has an Infin. in -ma:k (al-qāfi), it is in the sentence beg anı: sardı: 'the beg reproved him' (zacarahu), sarar, sarma:k (MS. serme:k). is spelt sırlıdt:- but the Infin. is spelt sarul:-; the basic meaning is 'to be wrapped round (something)'. There is, however, one difficulty about this explanation; in Uyg. Man. a V. meaning 'to be attached to (something)' is clearly spelt sırl:-; this might be a Pass. f. of sırl:- as a metaph. application of 'to be sewn firmly to (something)', but there is no other trace of such a V.; sırl:- in some medieval and modern languages is a Sec. f. of sırdıl-, q.v. Sarul- survives as sarıl- in NW Kaz.; SW Az., Osm. and saral- in Tkm. (Uyg. VIII ff. Man. sırılmıştarka TT III 53 (II-)); Xak. XI yışığ yıgaçka: saruldi: the rope was wrapped round (iltaffa) the tree'; also used of other things (sarılır, sarıлма:k; MS. sarıl:-); and one says ya:ğ ellğe: saruldi: (MS. sırlıdt:-) 'the oil stuck to (iltafaqa) the hand'; also used when parts of something have stuck to something else, e.g. flour to felt (sarılır (sic), sarıлма:k) Kaş. II 123; XIII (?) Tef. (a fairy (peri) comes and er béllne sarılır 'embraces the man's waist' 262; Osm. XVII ikinci hişara sarılıp 'investing the second fortress' TTS IV 664).

D seril- except perhaps in Uyg. can hardly be a Pass. f. of 1 ser- (which is normally Intrans.) and presents some problems. In Kaş. it is clearly cognate to serge:k and the Pass. f. of 2 ser-. This V., w. the connotation of 'to be fickle', may be that in PP 78, 5-6 (see amrak) but the right reading there might be sarılır. In SW Az., Osm., Tkm. seril- is the Pass. f. of ser- with its meaning in those languages, and means 'to be spread out' (e.g. to dry). Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. (when I enter nirvāna, my doctrinal teaching called 'good' without being extinguished or diminished . . .) yértinçüde serilip turur 'will endure (or remain?) on earth' Suv. 164, 16-17 (cf. Civ.); Sanskrit missing serillü TT VIII F.10; a.o. PP 78, 5-6 (amrak): Civ. in TT VII 1, an astronomical text, the word used for a planet 'remaining' in a particular constellation is serer (see ser-), but in l. 46 it is serillür: Xak. XI er serildi: (translated) tamāyala'l-sakrān 'the drunken man swayed', and almost fell down; also used of anything else that sways and almost falls down Kaş. II 123 (serillür, serilme:k); a.o. I 196 (eril:-) KB (when I was angry with you, you yourself blamed me) serilidim şapa men tüğüldi yüzüğü 'I relented (lit. swayed) towards you, and you frowned at me' 795.

D sırl- See sarul:-.

D sorul- (so:ru:l-) Pass. f. of 2 so:r:-; 'to be inquired about, questioned', and the like. Survives in SW Osm. sorul-, Tkm. soral-. In other modern languages sorul- is the Pass. f. of 1 so:r:- 'to be sucked' and the like, not noted in the early period. Uyg. VIII ff. Man.-A M I 26, 27-8 (1 a:t): (Xak.) XIII (?) At. sorul:- 'to be questioned': Çağ. xv ff. sorul- (spelt) pursida şudan 'to be asked, questioned' (and makida şudan 'to be sucked') San. 240v. 10.

D sürül- Pass. f. of sür-; s.i.s.m.l. with the same range of meanings as sür-. Xak. XI at sürüldi: 'the horse was driven' (siqa); and one says er sürüldi: 'the man (etc.) was driven away' (or repulsed, turida); and one says monçuk sürüldi: 'the bead was rubbed' (or polished, suhiqa); also used when a thing rubs itself (insahaqa bi-nafsihi); Intrans. and Pass. Kaş. II 123 (sürülür, sürülme:k; for the last meaning cf. sürtül-): XIII(?) Tef. sürül- 'to be driven away' 279; Çağ. xv ff. sürül- ('with -ü-') 'to be driven away'; metaph. DF sırla- Dev. DF sırlan- Refl. f. of sırla-; s.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI aya:k sırlandı: 'the cup was smeared with viscous paste (i.e. lacquer) in order that it might be ornamented' (li-yunaqqış 'alayhi) Kaş. II 246 (sırlanu:r, sırlanmak).

PUD saziñci: Hap. leg.; this word is in a small section for words ending in -ñç- and a vowel; it follows tutunç: under the cross-heading T, and the cross-heading Z, but precedes karinça; which suggests that the Z and the -z- are errors for R and -r-; there is in fact a possible etymological link w. sarin-. The only vowel sign is a damma on the īn. There is no good morphological explanation of the word, but it might be a compound of sö:z and an abbreviated Dev. N. fr. aṅra- 'to scream'. *Xak. Preliminary note. It is reasonably certain that, apart fr. onomatopoeics and interjections, which are in a class by themselves, no pure Turkish word originally began with ş-. The other words listed below are either words in which the ş- is a Sec. f. of s-, or less often ç- or t-, or words of a kind which are likely to have been borrowed fr. some foreign language, Chinese, Tokharian, or some Iranian dialect.

MON. ŞA

F şa: Hap. leg.; perhaps a Chinese l.-w. Xak. XI şa: the word for a parti-coloured (ablaq) bird resembling a heron (mālîku'l-hazin); it has the nickname erdemsiz şa: that is 'a bird without merit' (lâ manqaba fihî) because it always flies close to the ground Kaş. III 211.

F şî: Hap. leg.; Chinese l.-w. Xak. XI şî: an exclamation used in greeting the kings of China; it is the equivalent of the Ar. phrase abayta'l-la'n 'you have rejected (or averted) the curse (or rebuke?)' Kaş. III 211.

PU şa:b Hap. leg. ?; onomatopoeic more or less syn. w. çap, q.v. Xak. XI anî: şa:b şa:b boyunla:dı: şafa'ahu bi-şavet badâ minhu 'he hit him a resounding blow on the back of the neck'; and one says ol ka:ğunuğ şa:b şa:b yé:di: 'he ate the melon smacking his lips' (bi-şib wa tamañtuq); also used when one eats anything juicy like a peach; this word agrees with Ar., because al-şib is şavtu'l-maşâfir 'the sound made by a camel's lips' Kaş. III 145.

PU?F şap Hap. leg.; if not a mere interjection an abbreviation of şa:bü:k, q.v. Cf. zep zep. Xak. XI şap harf ta'cil 'an interjection of urgency', like Ar. hallâ; hence one says şap kel 'come quickly' Kaş. I 319; a.o. do. (1 bat).

F şa:v Hap. leg.; no doubt a local word, prob. Iranian. Xak. (?) XI şa:v 'a plant like soap-wort (al-hurd) in Uç with which clothes are washed' (yurhad) Kaş. III 155.

PUSD şuvşaş- (şuvşaş-) Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of şuvşa:-. Xak. XI ol anıñ birle: şuvşadı: 'he whispered a secret word (haynama . . . bi-kalâm xafi) with him' Kaş. II 350 (şuvşasur, şuvşasma:k).

Mon. ŞD

F şad Iranian l.-w. in a form not found in any known dialect, but cognate to Saka šao, Sogdian 'şfyš, Pe. šāh, ultimately der. fr. Old Pe. ššāyāšīya. In Turkish the title, ranking prob. next after xağan and bestowed by the xağan on some close relative, younger brother or son, often carried with it the duty of ruling part of the xağan's dominions, so that 'viceroys' is perhaps the nearest English equivalent, but not an exact translation. In Turkish, apart fr. one occurrence in Uyğ. and a very dubious one in O. Kir., Mal. 2, 1, pec. to Türkü, but various Turkish şads are mentioned in the Chinese records, the word being transcribed sha, shē, or ch'a, see Chavannes, Documents sur les Tou-kiue (Turcs) occidentaux, St. Petersburg, 1900, p. 320. Cf. yabğu:. Türkü VIII tört yegirmi: yaşımka: Tarduş boğun üze şad ertim (II olurtım) 'in my 14th year I was assumed the post of) şad over the Tarduş people' I E 17, II E 15; (with my younger brother Kül Tégin and) ekî: şad birle: 'the two şads' I E 27 (II E 22); (the Türgüş xağan and his army attacked) xağanın yabğusın şadın anta: ölü:rtim 'I killed their xağan, yabğu:, and şad there' II E 28; uluğ: şad erti: 'their (the 700 men's) headman was a şad' T 5; şad atığ anta: bérmiş 'he gave him the title of şad there' Oğın 6; o.o. I N 11; I E 14, II E 12; T 31, 41, etc.; Uyğ. VIII ekî: oğlıma: yabğu: şad at bértim 'I gave my two sons the title of yabğu: and şad respectively' Şu. E 7.

PU?F şat n.o.a.b.; prob. a l.-w. Xak. XI şat al-cur'a 'bravery'; hence one says anıñ ne:

şatı: ba:r 'what bravery has he got?', implying that he has none ('alâ tarîqî'l-inkâr) Kaş. I 320: KB menîş sözleğüm özüüm yok şatı 'I do not myself dare to speak' 776.

?F şatu: 'ladder, staircase'; almost certainly a l.-w. of unknown origin. A l.-w. in Mong. (Kow. 1446, Halted 359) and Pe., see Doerfer III 1320; survives in NE Tuv. çada: SE Türki şatı/şatu Shaw; şota BŞ; şote şaring: NC Kir. şatı; Kzx. şatı: ŞC Uzb. şotı; in Kom. and Kıp. fr. xiv onwards the word for 'ladder' was ağınğaç, now obsolete; most other modern languages use başğıc, not an old word, or l.-w.s. See bağna: Uyğ. viii ff. Man. TT III 46-7 (billiglig): Xak. xı KB şatu kördüm ellig anı bağnası 'I saw a ladder with fifty rungs' 6033: Çağ. xv ff. şatu (spelt) nardubân 'ladder, staircase' San. 259r. 20 (quott.).

VUF şotı: Hap. leg.; meaning uncertain; the Ar. translation is unvocalized and the last letter undotted. Brockelmann suggests either al-jabat 'spider' or al-şibitt 'aniseed'; another possibility is al-jabab 'young sheep or bovine'. Kaş. is no doubt right in describing it as 'non-Turkish'. Xak. xı şotı: al-jabat(?) luğa gayy aşlıya 'not originally Turkish' *Kaş. Tris. ŞDB

VUF şadapıt n.o.a.b.; prob. a title of some kind compounded of şad and (VU) apıt, perhaps meaning 'the entourage of the şad' or the like. Türkü VIII (listen to me all of you, my younger brothers, sons, united clan and people) berye: şadapıt begler yırıya: tarxat buyruk begler 'the şadapı:ts and begs on the right (or to the south), the tarxans ministers and begs on the left (or to the north)' I S 1; Türkü amtı: begler késre: Tarduş begler Kül Çor başlayı: ulayı: şadapıt begler, ögre Tölis begler Apa: Tarxan başlayı: ulayı: şadapı:ıt begler 'now the Türkü begs, to the west the Tarduş begs, all the şadapı:ts and begs with Kül Çor at their head, to the east the Tölis begs, all the şadapı:ts and begs with Apa: Tarxan at their head' IIN 13-14.

PUD?F şatlan- Hap. leg.; Refl. Den. V. fr. şat; spelt şatlan- in the MS., but as it is placed between söglün- and kartan- it must begin w. ş-. In the Ar. translation ictara'a is Brockelmann's emendation of the inappropriate ihtazā in the MS. Çigil xı of bu: ıřka: şatlandı: 'he showed bravery (ictara'a) in this affair' Kaş. II 248 (şatlanur, şatlanmak).

Pec. to Uyğ Civ., where it is fairly common and often transcribed şık. It occurs in two contexts: (1) as a measure of capacity; (2) as a measure of land, based on the amount of seed required to sow it. Uyğ. viii ff. Civ. bır şık üyür bır böz 'one measure of millet and one (roll of cloth)' USp. 31, 9; o.o. do. 32, 12 and several occurrences in *Fam. VUF şimnu: l.-w. fr. Sogdian šmnw, which ultimately goes back to Avestan ayrō mainyū 'evil spirit', Pahlavi/Persian Ahriman. Henning, Mitteliranisch, p. 66, in Handbuch der Orientalistik, Section I, Vol. IV Iranistik, Pt. I Linguistik; Leiden-Cologne, 1958. Preliminary note. It can be shown by the study of Turkish loan-words in certain languages and some other evidence (see Studies, p. 124, etc.) that some words which began with y- in VIII had earlier begun with ǵ- or ñ-; where such evidence is available the original initial is added in brackets after the word. Words with initial y- have undergone exceptionally large phonetic changes in modern times; in most NE languages the y- has become c-, ç-, or some cognate sound, in NC, some NW languages, and SW Tkm. c- or j-, while in other languages, esp. SW Az., Osm., the y- has been elided, esp. fr. words beginning w. y1-ly1-. On the other hand in Xak. and one or two other languages a prosthetic y- was added to some words beginning w. vowels, esp. 1-ǵ1-. There is, however, seldom any difficulty in determining the original forms of such words.

PUF yabğu: a title of great antiquity, certainly going back to the Yüeh-chih, that is before the Christian Era, which has frequently been discussed by historians of Central Asia (for some refces. see Caf., p. 226). In the Türkü period it was, like şad, q.v., a title conferred by the xağan on close relatives and normally carried with it the duty of administering part of the xağan's dominions. Although the yabğu: is sometimes mentioned before the şad he prob. ranked below rather than above him. After the Türkü period the title seems to have lost some importance and Kaş. describes it as two ranks below the xağan, that is below the yuğruş 'vizier', q.v.; by this time the title şad had disappeared. The word is spelt yavğu: in Xak.; the pronunciation in Türkü is uncertain owing to the ambiguity of the Runic alphabet, but as it is spelt lapğu (in the Hephthalite version of the Greek alphabet) on a coin attributed by Ghirshman to a Western Türkü ruler of the mid-seventh century (see H. Ghirshman, Les Chionites-Hephthalites, Cairo, Institut français d'Archéologie orientale, 1948, p. 50) it was prob. yabğu:. It survived as the title of the supreme ruler of the Oğuz of the Aral Sea area until the tenth century, but most references to it are in non-Turkish (Chinese, Ar., Pe., etc.) texts. The Turkish refces. are assembled below. Türkü VIII (at the beginning of his reign Eleris Xağan organized his realm and inter alia) yabğu:ğ şadıg anta: bérmiş 'then appointed the yabğu: and the şad' I E 14, II E 12; Él etmiş Yabğu: oğlu: (VU) Işvara: Tamğan Çor Yabğu: inlisi: 'son of Él-etmiş Yabğu: and younger brother of Işvara: Tamğan Çor Yabğu: Öngin 4; o.o. II E 28 (şad); T 41-2; Uyg. VIII [gap] Tay Bilge: Totokiğ yabğu: ata:di: 'he nominated Tay Bilge: Totok as yabğu:' *Su. Arat, Uygurca Yazılar Arasında, İstanbul, 1937) line 12 (20) (in the reign of Kibek (?) Xan) Yabğu: Beğ kalan kesip 'when Yabğu (so spelt) Beg assessed the land tax': Xak. xi yavğu: laqab man kāna ba'da'l-xāqān bi-daracatayn minā'l-sūqa 'the title of a subject who is two ranks below the xāqān' Kaş. III 32 (followed by Yavğu: the name of a town near Barsğān, and a pass near it is called Yavğu: Art): KB (in a passage about the high ranks which people can receive) kayu yavğu yuğruş bolur él beği 'some become yavğu, or yuğruş ('vizier'), or él beği ('headman of a province' (?) 4069; a.o. 5523 (böke)).

yuvğa:, yuvka: Preliminary note. Kaş. distinguishes between these two words, placing the first under the cross-heading Ğ and the second under the cross-heading K, but in other passages the second is spelt yuvġa.

yuvġa: n.o.a.b.; al-da'i means both 'bastard' and 'adopted son'; but the meanings of yuvġad-, yuvġalan- suggest that the first is intended here. Xak. xi yuvġa: (MS. yufġa): al-da'i Kaş. III 32: KB hayusa baş egmez bodun yuvġası 'base-born people, when they grow rich, cease to be respectful' 5523.

yuvka: 'slender, insubstantial', and the like; al-daġiq and al-raġiq, both used to translate this word, are practically syn., and hard to distinguish in some places. S.i.a.m.l.g., in SE Türkü jupka: SC Uzb. yupka: SW Az. yuxa; Osm. yufka; Tkm. yuka, elsewhere yuka/yukka/yuġa/ġuka/ġuġa and the like. Türkü viii yuyka: 'thin' T 13 (uġuz); the word is quite clear on the stone, but y and v are much alike in Runic script and this is almost certainly a mason's error for yuvka: Uyġ. viii ff. Bud. D yapġuċ (?ġ-) N.I. fr. yap-; 'lid, cover', and the like; survives in NE Khak. ĉapxıs: NW Kk. Japkiş; Kaz. yapkiş; Nog. yapkiş. Cf. kapak, kapġak. Xak. xi yapġuċ (yaptaċ) in the printed text is an error) 'a small felt hood (lubāda) which shepherds wear in the rain'; yapġuċ 'a slender stick (al-qađib) used for driving donkeys, etc.' *Kaş. D yapġa:k (?ġ-) Dev. N. (connoting repeated action) fr. yap-; prob. Hap. leg.; SW Osm. yapak 'wool in the fleece' is prob. a shorter form of yapa:ku; not a later form of this word. Xak. xi yapġa:k 'a kind of trap (or net, al-fuxix) for catching birds' Kaş. III 42.

D yavġa:n Dev. N./A. (connoting repeated action) fr. yav-; survives in SW Az., Osm. yavan 'plain, dry (food) without fat or oil'. The meaning in Uyġ. is less obvious, it generally relates to mental processes and seems to mean 'coarse, unsympathetic', or the like. Uyġ. viii the phr. irig yavġan qualifying köpül or köpüllüġ occurs several times alternating w. irig sarsıġ, see sarsıġ, e.g. (the Buddha has made good and mild) irig yavġan köpüllüġ yek iċekniġ köpüllin 'the minds of the harsh and coarse-minded demons (Hend.)' TT X 13-14; o.o. do. 269, 278; TM IV 254, 89-90; U III 17, 11-13 (taya:ġu:)—yavġan turma 'offerings of plain food' Suv. 26, 19 (1 turma:): Xak. xi yavġan aş 'food (al-ta'am) which contains no meat' (lahm) *Kaş. D yapa:ku: (ġ-) morphologically obscure (-ku: is not a recognized Suffix) but obviously connected w. yap- and 2 yap, w. which it is more or less syn., and perhaps a Dev. N. fr. yapa- a Den. V. fr. the latter. It seems originally to have meant 'matted hair, or wool' (cf. yapġut) and hence 'an animal whose hair has grown long and matted' and, more specifically, 'a colt', and 'a man whose hair is long and matted', hence perhaps its use as a tribal name. It became a First Period l-w. in Mong. as da'aġa(n) 'two-year-old colt' (Haenisch 30; daġa in Kow. 1570, Halted 445); the connection w. Mong. daġaki 'a tangle or mass of hair' (Halted 445; w. Den. V. listed there and in Kow. 1581) is obscure. It survives as yapaġi in SW Az. 'the spring shearing of hair or wool'; Osm. (also yapak) 'wool in the fleece'; and as yapaġi in SW Tkm.; yabaġa/yabaġı/ĉabaġı/jabaġi, etc. in most NE, NC, NW languages, for 'colt', the ages (from 'newly born' to 'two-year-old') varying fr. language to language, see Şcherbak, p. 92. Xak. xi Yapa:ku: 'a tribe (ci) of the Turks'; yapa:ku: 'a thick mass (al-qarda) of wool or hair on the head'; (and) when it has become matted (ittabada) one says yapa:ku boldir; Yapa:ku suvi: the name of a river which flows to (alā) Özcend and Farğāna from the mountains of Kāşgar Kaş. III 36 (the Yapa:ku: (hitherto transcribed Yaba:ku:) tribe, and words in its dialect, are mentioned elsewhere in Kaş.): Çağ. xv ff. yapağ/yapak ('with -p-') kura-i asb şir-xwāra 'an unweaned colt' San. 325v. 22; Xwar. xiv yapağ koy 'a sheep with a thick fleece' Qutb 63 (-b-); Kip. XIII al-cazza mina'l-şif 'a shearing of wool' Yapa:ğu: (MS. in error baya:ğu:) Hou. 15, 5; xv uabar 'soft hair' (of the camel, etc.) yapak (-b-) Tuh. 38b. 2—hawliyu'l-xayl 'a one-year-old colt' yapağlı (sic, -b-) do. 13a. 1; Osm. XVIII yapağ/yapak . . . and, in Rūmi, paşm-i narm 'soft wool', in Ar. şif San. 325v. 22.

D yapiğliğ (?d-) P.N./A. fr. yapığ; s.i.s.m.l. in various forms and meanings. Xak. XI yapiğliğ kapuğ 'a bolted (muğlak) door' Kaş. III 49; Kom. xiv 'fitted with a cover' yabovlt CCG; Gr.

D yapa:kulak in Kaş. this word in both meanings is described as peculiar to the Yapa:ku: and Yeme:k dialects, which makes it fairly certain that it is a Dev. N./A. fr. a Den. V. fr. Yapa:ku: as a tribal name, meaning lit. (a disease or bird) 'peculiar to the Yapa:ku: country'. This would explain why it has two quite different meanings, the first Hap. leg., the second not a generic term for 'owl', which is üğli, q.v., but the name of some particular kind of owl, not always the same. In the first entry of the yā carries a çamma, but this is an obvious error since with this spelling it should have followed the second. Survives meaning 'owl', of no specified kind except where stated, in NE Bar. yapkulak R III 267; Koib. yaba:kulak do. 273; Tob. yabalak 277; SE Tar., 'Türki yapalak 'short-eared owl, Otus brachyotus' Shaw 215, etc.; NW Kk., Nog. Japalak; Kaz., Krim., Kumyk yabalak 'great owl, Bubo maximus'; SW Az. yapağ; Osm. yapalak 'great owl'. Yapa:ku: Yeme:k XI yapa:kulak al-ri'da mina'l-humma 'feverish shivering, ague'; yapa:kulak al-hāma mina'l-tayr 'owl' Kaş. III 56; Çağ. xv ff. yapalak ('with -p-') 'a yellow bird with large eyes'; the author of the Burhān-i Qāfi says that in Pe. it is called cağna, arabicized as cağnaq (same meaning) San. 325v. 25 (prob. 'great owl'); Kom. xiv 'screech-owl' yabalak CCI; Gr.: Kip. XIII al-būm 'the great owl' yabala:k Hou. 10, 8; xiv (under 'birds') al-maşşāsa wa'l- (VU) warāş 'screech-owl' ditto (vocalized yihlak) Bul. 12, 2—yabalak 'uryān (this word, der. fr. 'ariya, means 'naked'; if it could be taken as a non-Classical der. f. fr. 'arā ('ariva') to shiver', it might be linked to Kaş.'s first meaning; but it is likelier to be a quite different word or corrupt) Id. 91; xv maşşāsa yablak Tuh. 38b. 7; Osm. xvi Pe. cuğd 'owl' translated bay kuş, also called üğü and yapalak; in one dict. TTS IV 839.

yıpa:r the relationship between this word and kin, q.v., is obscure; kin has always meant 'musk', the secretion of the musk-deer and the musk-rat; yıpa:r seems originally to have meant more generally 'scent, fragrance', both of musk and of other things like flowers, esp. in the Hend.-yırd yıpa:r, but became specialized for 'musk' at an early date. 2 yat (-d) 'rain magic; rain stone'; the history of this word, which is extremely complicated, is discussed at length in Doerfer I, 157 (ca-dāmişi); as such it is n.o.a.b., but it became a Second Period l.-w. in Mong. as cada (Haenisch 84) and found its way back into Turkish in this form and as yada (see Çağ.); s.i.a.m.l. in one form or the other. D yıtıt- Caus. f. of yıtıt-; 'to sharpen'. Not well attested in the early period or widely distributed now, but survives in NE Khak. çitet-; Tuv. çidıt-: SW xx Anat. ıttıt-SDD 80z; the cognate form SW ıtıtle-; Tkm. yıtıtle- also occurs. Cf. bıle-, yanu-. Xak. (xı yıtıt- (sic) in Kaş. II 317 is a correction in a later hand of yanut-, q.v.): xııı(?) D yatığ Dev. N. fr. yat-; lit. 'lying down' and the like. S.i.s.m.l., e.g. NC Kir. jatı: NW Kk. jatıw; SW Osm. yatı; Tkm. yatıw; the specific meaning in Kaş. seems to be Hap. leg. Xak. xı yatığ al-manâm 'sleeping quarters'; hence one says anı: yatığında: tutğıl 'seize him in his sleeping quarters' Kaş. III 12: (KB not noted, yatığ in 495-6 is the Acc. of 1 yat and in the Vienna MS., 4704, an error for batığ).

VUD yatık Dev. N. in -ık (?) fr. yat-; this Suff. is very dubious in Xak., the word follows the entries of yatuk and may be a misvocalization of that word, cf. yütükle-; it is Hap. leg. in this sense; all modern forms of yatık are Sec. sf. of yatuk. Xak. xı yatık al-manam wa'l-manâm ayda(n) both 'sleep' and 'sleeping quarters'; hence one says (ol) anı: yatıkında: tuttı: 'he seized him in his sleep or in his sleeping quarters' Kaş. III 15.

D yatuk Intrans. Dev. N./A. fr. yat-; the general meaning is 'lying down, prone, prostrate' w. various special applications. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE, SE as yatik/jatik 'prostrate, horizontal, gently sloping'; metaph. 'polite, modest', and the like. Kaş.'s first meaning is difficult to connect semantically and may be a l.-w. Xak. xı yatuk the name of 'a woollen fabric' (al-şif) woven of two kinds (of thread); the warp is wool and the weft cotton; yatuk neğ 'anything thrown away and abandoned' (al-matrüh wa'l-mansi); hence 'a sluggard' (or idler, al-kaslân) is called yatuk kışı; and a section of the Oğuz who live in their towns and do not migrate to other places or engage in raids (yağzün) are called yatuk that is 'sluggards and wasters' (al-kusâld wa'l-matrühün) Kaş. III 14 (yatık follows): Çağ. xv ff. yatuk surâhi-yi pahn 'a broad squat goblet', called in Pe. bađtak ('little duck') (quotn.); the translation of yatığ/yatuk as 'a musical instrument' in the Râmî author (Vel. 407) is an error San. 326v. 22 (it is a misreading of yatuğın, a Mong. l.-w. listed in San.): Osm. xv ff. yatik/yatuk 'a broad squat goblet, or jug'; fairly common TTS I 795; II 1013; III 780; IV 855.

D yıdığ Dev. N./A. fr. yıdıt-; 'smell, odour (usually, not always, unpleasant); foul-smelling'. Survives in NE yıdığ/çıdığ/çızığ; elsewhere it is difficult to distinguish between modern forms of this word and yıd. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. TT VI 229 (ölüg), 445 (sasıg): Civ. D yoduğ Dev. N. fr. yo:d-; survives in the sense of 'destruction, extermination', and the like in NC Kır. Joyu; Kız. Joyu: NW Kk. joyıw. Cf. yodut. Xak. XI yoduğ huwa an yu'xada'l-racul bi-curm gayrihi is used when a man is caught for someone else's crime; hence one says anıg yoduğ: tokındı: aşabahu wa'ab culm gayrihi 'the evil effects of someone else's crime struck him' Kaş. III 13.

?E yodku: Hap. leg.; there is at least one other mis-spelling in this verse, and this word, which is morphologically inexplicable, is no doubt an error, prob. for kodku. Xak. XI bakmas bodun sevügsüz yodku: yüzi: (MS. yüdi): saranka: lā (VU) yaltı'ati (unvocalized,? error for yultı'ati) 'l-qarew ilā'l-baxılı'l-bağıdi (MS. bağı:ı)'l-kālıhi'l-wacch 'the people do not raise their heads(?) to the odious peevish-faced miser' Kaş. II 250, 3; n.m.c.

D yatğak Dev. N./A. (connoting habitual action) fr. yat-; lit. 'habitually lying down'. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE(?), in SE as yatkak 'slug-gard' (cf. yatuk) and elsewhere as yatak/jatak 'sleeping quarters' and usually more specifically 'bed, animal's lair, permanent settlement', and the like. Xak. XI yatğak hārisu'l-malik wa'l-hişn wa nahçıhi 'the guard (or sentry, here specifically by night) of a king, fortress, etc.'; hence one says yatğak yattı: hā'ta'l-racul hārisa(m) 'the man spent the night on guard' *Kaş. D *yadğuk Hap. leg.; Conc. N. (N.I.?) fr. ya:d-; lit. 'something which spreads out something'. Kıp. XI yayğuk şışıva today'l-faras 'the teat of a mare's udder'; some of them say yazğuk Kaş. III 27.

D yadğun Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. ya:d-; lit. 'spread out'. Survives in NE Alt., Tel. yaykın/yaykıkın; Bar. yayğın, used in the phr. yaykın (etc.) su: 'a river in flood', R III 7, and recently revived in SW Rep. Turkish as yayğın 'widely used or seen; spreading' (borrowed fr. R III 7). Xak. XI KB beğig koşni kılma ya yadğun ögüz 'do not make a beg or a river in flood your neighbour' 4546.

D yatlan- Refl. f. of 2 yatla-:; pec. to Uyğ. Bud.; in spite of the views expressed in TT X, p. 29, note 387, where the relevant quotns. are assembled, which were put forward in ignorance of the existence of 2 yat, there is no doubt that yat yatlan- was the phr. used to translate an (ultimately) Sanskrit V. meaning 'to perform magical ceremonies'; in this context there is no implication of rain magic. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (the yakşa's son for twelve years) yat yatlanğucı braman basasında barıp 'followed the braman who performed magical ceremonies' TT X 561-2; (when) anıtıyatlığ ürlüksüz yat yatlanğucı 'the magician) who performs impermanent (Sanskrit anıtıyatā) and transitory magical ceremonies' (comes and tries to steal my life) do. 539-40; o.o. D yitiln- n.o.a.b. and generally used in association w. bar-; the meaning is clearly something like 'to go away, disappear', which indicates that it is a Refl. Pass. f. of yit-, irregular since yit- is Intrans. and cannot properly form a Pass. Cf. yitilintür-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. D yokla- Preliminary note. Apart fr. the Den. V. fr. 2 yok listed below, there is clear evidence of the existence of a Den. V. fr. 1 yok:k at any rate in SW Tkm. yokla- 'to destroy, kill, expend (money)'. This Tkm. V. also means 'to remember, or commemorate', and there is a wide range of V.s fr. Çağ. onwards which have more or less similar meanings: NE Tw. çokta- 'to notice the absence of (someone or something)'; Alt. yokto- 'to feel, examine' R III 407; SE Türki yokla-ıyoklu- 'to look after, to visit (a friend to ask after his health), to inquire, verify, check'; NC Kir. jokto-, Kzx. jokta- 'to investigate, check; to discover a loss'; SC Uzb. yökla- 'to visit, inquire, investigate'; NW Kk. jokla- 'to discover the loss of something'; Nog. yokla- 'to visit'; SW Az. yoxla- 'to check, investigate, feel'; Osm. yokla- 'to feel, examine, search, try, test, visit'. While it would be just possible to regard these as Den. V.s fr. I yok:k in the sense of 'to note, or investigate, the absence of something', it is likely that some at any rate are extensions of the meaning of yoğla- which developed when, with the adoption of Islam, the practice of holding funeral feasts was dropped and forgotten.

D yokla- Den. V. fr. 2 yok; 'to rise', and the like. Survives in NE Sag., Şor (R III 2008), Tuv. çokta-, Khak. çokta- 'to go upstream'. Cf. ağ-, ün-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. yağır (d-) 'a saddle-gall'; a First Period l.-w. in Mong. w. the same meaning, da'ari (Haensch 30)/dağarı (Kov. 1582); survives w. this meaning in SE Türki yęir: NC Kır. jo:r; Kzx. jawır: NW Kk. jawır; Nog. yavır: SW Az., Osm., Tkm. yağır. The reason why in the medieval period it came to mean 'shoulder' or the like, and still has the second meaning ('a horse's) withers' in Osm., is obscure, but this perhaps evolved from 'the part of the animal where saddle-galls occur'. ?F?D ye:k 'demon, devil'; the old theory, which still has some support, is that this is a l.-w. fr. yakka, a Prakrit f. of Sanskrit yakṣa 'demon'; as such this is improbable, yakṣa itself occurs in TT VII 13, 55; 16, 17; but it might be a l.-w. fr. a Sogdian or Chinese transcription of the Sanskrit word. v.G. in TT VI, p. 61, note 131 put forward the more plausible theory that, since yek often occurs in the Hend. yek iççek, in which iççek is a Dev. N./A. in -ge:k (connoting habitual action) fr. iç- meaning 'constantly drinking', i.e. 'vampire', ye:k is a Dev. N. in -k (her theory that it is a crasis of ye:ge:k* is improbable) fr. yé:- meaning '(constantly) eating', i.e. 'glutton'. The only objections to this theory are (1) that a Dev. N./A. fr. yé:- should be yé:k (cf. 2 yé:ğ), not ye:k; (2) that an actual l.-w. ye:k might well have been taken for such a Turkish Dev. N. and iççek devised to match it, in order to represent 'demons and vampires'. For 'demon' the word is now obsolete, displaced by Mong. l.-w.s in the NE and Ar. words like şaytān, iblis elsewhere, but survives as yek 'hateful, hostile' in NE Alt., Tel., çek in Şor, çek in Sag., ditto, and çek 'glutton' in Sag., R III 316-17, 1945. Türköl VIII ff. yek 'demon' in antithesis to teprl 'god', and interchangeable w. şimnu; q.v., is common in Chuas.; yek iççek do. 144-5; Uyg. viii ff. Man.-A yek 'demon' M I 15, 19; 19, 1 etc.: Man. yek tuğum 'rebirth as a demon' TT IX 61; a.o. III 91 (oñjun): Bud. yek, spelt ye:k in TT VIII O.4, 9, is common esp. in TT X; where it occurs in lists of supernatural beings of which the Sanskrit originals are known it corresponds to yakṣa (not, as stated Kuan., p. 28, note 142-3, nāga, which corresponds to lu) U II 20, 22; 35, 19; TT VII 13, 49; Kuan. 142; o.o. TT V 10, 84 etc. (iççek): Civ. ye:k by itself and ye:k iççek are common in TT I and VII: Xak. xı ye:k al-şaytān 'the devil' Kaş. III 160 (prov.); I 266 (esnet-) and 3 o.o.: KB (the sky became dark ye:k yüzi teg 'like a devil's face' 5029; (if he has a dream) yektin bolur 'it comes from the devil' 6017: *xiii(?) The only certain survival is in NC Kzx. jlyl 'thick, dense, frequent'; apparently also survives meaning 'seam' in NE Alt., Bar., Leb., Tel. yik (also 'a cleft', e.g. in the mountains) R III 507; Koib., Sag., Şor çık do. 2111; Khak. çık; Tuv. tlg. NC Kır. BİK (also 'cleft'), and perhaps SE Türki çek BJK. SW Az., Osm. yiv, now 'scratch, groove', is the same word, see below. Uyg. viii ff. ʔD yalma: perhaps Dev. N. fr. 2 yal-; 'a thick quilted coat; linen armour(?)'. N.o.a.b.; a l.-w. in Pe. as yalma and Ar. as yalmaq both as a specifically Turkish garment, although actual translations vary. Türkü VIII I E 33 (ur-): Xak. XI yalma: al-yalmaq; the Persians took (the word) from the Turks and said yalma (with -h); then the Arabs took it from the Persians and said yalmaq turning the hā into qāf, just as they said xandaq for (Pe.) kanda and yaraq (MS. yarq) for (Pe.) yara; yalmaq is mentioned in a verse by Dūl-rumma (quoted); there is no one who says that the Turks took it from the Persians. I heard it myself used by uncivilized (aclāf) Turks in the frontier districts (aqşā-l-ğūr); they are more in need of rain-coats (al-mamīr, sic) than other people because there is more rain and snow in their country *Kaş. yalın- Preliminary note. Yalın- as the Refl. f. of 1 yal- may occur in KB and certainly survives in NE Alt., Tel. yalın- (of lightning) 'to flash' RIII 167. Yalın- as the Refl. f. of *2*yal-* is the only certainly old V., but is pec. to Xak. A third yalın- is first noted only in the medieval period; San. clearly linked it w. yalğa- and translated it (of a dog) 'to lick its master', but this translation seems to be based on this false etymology. The basic meaning seems to be rather 'to plead' and the like. If so, it is more or less syn. w. yalvar- but cannot be linked morphologically. None of these V.s provides a suitable basis for yalğu; q.v.

D 1 yalın- Refl. f. of *2*yal-*; n.o.a.b. In KB 121 the meaning might be 'may the wicked man be stripped', but the translation suggested below, which is Arat's, is likelier. Xak. XI er yalındı: 'the man (etc.) stripped himself' (ta'arrā) *Kaš. 2 yalın- 'to plead' and the like; see above. Survives as yalın- 'to plead, implore', occasionally 'to flatter' in NE Alt., Küer., Tel. R III 167: NC (jalın-): *SC Uzb. (yalın-): NW Kk. D yelne- (yélne-) Den. V. fr. yélin; pec. to Kaš. Xak. XI bé yelne:di: 'the mare's (etc.) udders swelled (? aşraqa) at the time of parturition', that is when milk became abundant (arsalat) in them Kaš. III 310 (yelner; yelne:mek); a.o. 319, 18.

PU?D yalğu:-. Xak. XI KB 5972 reads (he spent a sleepless night; the dawn broke; in the flower garden a nightingale) sumlıdı üdıklıg eşittl and then three alternative readings (Fergana MS.) köpül y.ğü:di; (Cairo MS.) köpül y.lğu:di; (Vienna MS.) turup yğ-ladı; after 'sang an unintelligible song, he heard it with delight', the Vienna text, 'and stood up and wept' is obviously wrong. Of the other two texts the Cairo one seems preferable; the Fergana one is the same with -n omitted. Arat took it to be a Den. V. fr. yalın and translated it 'caught fire'; this is possible but not very plausible since the Sec. f. yalıp is pec. to Osm. It therefore seems likely that it is a Den. V. fr. yalıp and that the phr. means 'his mind became stripped (of care)'.

VU yeme: (?yeme:) with taki:, q.v., one of the two copulas in early Turkish, used both at the beginning of the sentence, where it normally means 'and', and later, usually in the second place, where it means rather 'also, too'. yéni:- n.o.a.b.; apparently Intrans. 'in: the sense of 'to be, or become, light', cf. yénik; of Kaş.'s two etymologies the first is correct but inverted, the second impossible. Xak. XI urağut yeni:di: 'the woman gave birth and laid down her burden' (yaladat . . . wa ucaða at hamlahā); this V. is used specifically (xāşata(n)) of women only; in the case of other animals the name of the offspring (al-maḥlūd) is taken and the Suff. -la:- is added to it to give the concept of parturition (al-nitāc), e.g. of a cow one says inge:k buzağ:-la:di: 'the cow gave birth to a calf', buzağ:- with Suff. -la:- (other examples follow). There are two possible etymologies (istiyāq) of yeni:-; one is that it is derived fr. the phr. yenik neğ 'a light (al-xafif) thing', and that when she laid down her burden she became light (vaffat), yeni:di: w. a hasra on the nūn, but the regular form for this meaning would have a ḍamma (i.e. yeni:di); there is no good foundation for this statement. The other is that it is derived fr. yil:n 'a body' (al-badan) and that the woman, when she gave birth, ejected (axracat) a body (caşad) from herself. Both theories are plausible (hasan) Kaş. III 91 (yéni:r (sic), yeni:me:k); bu: urağut ol yéni:gü: (sic?, the MS. has ye/ene/ingü:) 'this woman is on the point of giving birth' (aşrafat alā'l-wilāda) III 36: KB buḍun aşığ arttı yenip yükleri 'the people's benefits increased, their burdens becoming light' 1654.

D yartumluk Hap. leg.; A.N. fr. yartum. Türkü VIII ff. the letter Tun. IV (ETY II 96) begins by reporting the arrival of four men led by a fifth, and then refers to the arrival of thirty men. Between the two, and obviously referring to the first party, are the words yartumluk erür 'they are a separate party(?)'.

?C yértinçü 'the world', and more specifically 'this world', as opposed to heaven, hell, etc.; in TT VIII spelt yértinçö/yértinçö/yértinçö. It is suggested in the Indices to TT VIII and X, perhaps on the basis of the statement in Kow. 2368 that this word as a l.-w. in Mong. is the equivalent of Tibetan hjiç-rtên, that this is a Tibetan l.-w. This is open to several objections; (1) it assumes an eroded pronunciation of the Tibetan phr. which is improbable at this early date; (2) while hjiç-rtên, lit. 'receptacle of the perishable' is the standard Tibetan phr. for 'the external world', there is no trace in the dicts. of an extended phr. containing the equivalent of -çü: (-çö); (3) there are no known Tibetan l.-w.s in early Turkish and no evidence that the Indian Buddhist terminology in Turkish was obtained through any intermediaries other than Sogdian, Tokharian and, later, Chinese. The word is much more likely to be a purely Turkish compound w. yér as the first component. As regards the second it is perhaps significant that in TT I 91 (damaged) there is an antithesis between yérde and tonçudakı, and it is possible that the second element is tançu: 'a lump of earth', q.v. ya:y there is utter confusion in the Turkish languages about the words for 'spring' and 'summer'. Since ya:z, q.v., must originally have meant 'summer', ya:y must originally have meant 'spring', which is Kaş.'s translation in the main entry and is confirmed by its use in antithesis to küz 'autumn' in one passage. But ya:la:-, q.v., always meant 'to spend the summer (somewhere)', and already in Kaş. ya:y is used for 'summer', in antithesis to kış 'winter', in some verses. In modern languages the position is even more confusing; ya:z s.i.a.m.l., but ya:y has disappeared fr. some, and in others the meanings of the two words have become inverted. The following is a representative selection of the words for 'spring' and 'summer', in that order, in modern languages:—NE Khak. casxı, çayxı; Tuv. ças, çay; SE Türki erte yaz, yaz; NC Kır. jaz, jay; Kz. jazğıturi, jaz; SC Uzb. bahor (Pe.)/ küklam, yoz; NW Kk. bahar/köklem, jaz; Kaz. yaz, cey; Kumyk yazbaş, yaz; Nog. yazlık, yaz; SW Az. bahar/yaz, yaz; Osm. ilk bahar (yay being a Sec. f. of ya: 'a bow'), yaz; Tkm. bahar/yaz, tomus. ya:z (ñ-) originally 'summer', later sometimes 'spring'; see ya:y for its history and modern forms and meanings. 1 yéz: a kind of plant; the contexts suggest that this word rather than 2 yez (Arat's choice) should be read in the Uyğ. texts below. N.o.a.b. in Turkish but perhaps a l.-w. in the Pe. word yaz 'a thorny plant set round tents as a fence; the plant şumâm' Steingass 1530 (Red. translates şumâm 'the grass Panicum dichotomum'). Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. yéz occurs in two almost identical lists of things to be offered to demons, several of them unidentified Chinese l.-w.s, bracketed words being peculiar to one list only, 'seven kısuñ, seven handfuls of barley flour, seven pieces of raw and cooked meat, (three fowls), green beans, (one reed, two flowers, one vessel of (?) water, one handful(?) of mişñ (?flour), one yéz, a torch (or lamp, yula), paper, copper (bakır, or 'liver' bağır), luklan, wheatmeal, flowers, fruit, milk, wine, beer' TT VII 24, 9 ff.; 25, 9 ff.; Kaş.'s translation would suit well here: Xak. XI yéz al-qaysüm 'southernwood, Artemisia abrotanon', a plant thinner (adaqq) and more delicate than a reed (al-qasab); curtains and screens (al-qirâm wa'l-sutra) are made from it by the nomads *Kaş. ?F 2 yez some kind of copper alloy, perhaps 'brass'; as this is not recorded before XIV it is prima facie a l.-w., but it occurs in Mong. as ces the standard word for 'copper', which is according to Dr. Róna-Tas, in (Finnno-Ugrian) Mordvin as serä, which would show that it existed at a very early period. It survives in NE Alt., Koib., Kuer., Leb., Tel. yes/yes; Khak. çis; Tuv. çes 'copper'. Cf. bakır, tuç.
