DF beglig P.N./A. fr. beg.

DF beglik A.N. (sometimes used as Conc. N.) fr. beg. These two words must be taken together since to a large extent they have the same meanings, and in most texts the scripts are too ambiguous to make it possible to determine which word is intended. The P.N./A. usually means 'having the rank, or status of beg', less often it means 'having a chief, or a husband'. The A.N. originally meant 'the rank or status of beg', or 'fit to hold such a rank'. Later it came to mean 'a district governed by a beg'. Beglig now seems to be obsolete, but beglik with various phonetic changes (see beg) s.i.a.m.l.g. except NE with some changes of meaning, e.g. in NC Kır biylik is the normal word for 'a government' and SW Osm. beylik often has that sense. VUD bögürül Hap. leg.; there is obviously a semantic and structural parallel between this bol- originally 'to become (something)', implying a change of state, in contrast to er- 'to be (something)' with the contrary implication. From a fairly early date, however, bol- began to lose its distinctive character and verge, at any rate sometimes, towards 'to be', and when some tenses of er- became obsolete they were usually replaced by tenses of bol- (but see I tur-). C.i.a.p.a.l. For unknown reasons the b- was elided in some Western languages at an early date, prob. through an intermediate form with w-. Today ol- is the only form in SW Az., Osm. (but not Tkm.) and occurs sporadically elsewhere, but only under the influence of Osm.; otherwise the form is bol- with minor phonetic changes. Türkü VIII bol- is common and always implies a change of state; e.g. (the xağan died and) boğunı: küy kul bolıt: 'his people became maidservants and slaves' I E 20, II E 17; it also occurs in the phr. yok bol- 'to cease to exist', e.g. türkü boğun yok bolmazun: 'may the Türkü people not cease to exist' I E 11, II E 10: viii ff. (the sun rose) kamağ üze: yaruk bolıt: 'it became light everywhere' IrKB 26; bir tavilkı: yüz bolıt: yüz tavilkı: miş bolıt: 'one spiraea became a hundred, and a hundred spiraea became a thousand' do. 32; a.o.o.: Man. niğoşak bolıtumuz 'we have become Hearers (l.-w.)' Chuas. 176; nede ötrü yok bolğay 'why will he cease to exist?' do. 169; antada kére ne bolğay 'what will happen after that?' do. 172; a.o.o. Üğ. viii the title of the author of the Şine-usu inscription was tepride: bolmış él étmiş bilge: xağan 'the wise xağan who came into existence in (or from?) heaven and

(but if he loses the third) bolmaz 'he cannot' TT V 26, 109-10: Civ. bol- 'to become' is common; in such phr. as maña . . . bor kergek bolup 'since I needed, or came to need, wine', USp. 1, 3, the drift in meaning is beginning: *O. bul- 'to find' with some extensions of meaning, 'to obtain' and the like. The relationship between this word and the synonymous 2 tap- is discussed in Clauson, Türkçe sözlür üzerinde araştırmalar, Jean Deny Armağanı, Ankara, 1958, p. 68; briefly bul-, though common in the earlier period, now survives only in SW Osm., all other languages, even Az., Tkm. having tap-. As bol- and bul- are normally indistinguishable graphically some occurrences of bul- may have been missed. Türkü VIII (I looked for a guide and VU) çülgi: Az eri: bultm 'found a man of the çülgi: (? , q.v.) Cf. ađır-. Türkü VIII in T 5-6 (ira:k) the last word in the sentence has been read bilser (by Radloff and Thomsen) and büşser (by Ramstedt), but the photograph shows quite clearly bölser 'if one (tries to) distinguish between' (a lean ox and a fat ox

baldır, etc. Preliminary note. Kaş. mentions five different words with these consonants variously vocalized, of which the last two present no particular problems. The first is mentioned twice, the second twice, and the third three times followed by the sentence wa hāđihil-'arba'a bi-işbā'i'l-bā' 'and these four have back vowels'; the problem is which four? The first word seems to be identical with the well-known word beltir, there is no difficulty about the difference between -d- and -t-, cf. baltu:, Kaş. baldu:; the 'four' therefore which have back vowels seem to be the second word, the two mentions being taken as identical, and the three occurrences of the third. These two words therefore, which are pec. to Kaş., can be taken as baldır. There is another well-known word baltır not mentioned by Kaş.

1 baldır Hap. leg.; cf. baldız. Xak. XI baldır oğul al-rabib 'step-son' (or 'foster-child?'); baldır kızı al-rabiba 'step-daughter' (ditto) Kaş. I 456.

2 baldır Hap. leg., but perhaps a mis-spelling or Sec. f. of bıldır, which seems to be connected semantically. Xak. XI baldır tarıg al-zar'u'lladı hırta fi ibtidâ'il-rabi' wa dâlika azkâ lahu 'a crop which is sown in the beginning of the spring, and that is the most thriving sort'; and anything that is done at the first possible opportunity (fi ibtidâ' auwânihi) is called baldır; and one says baldır kuzi: for 'a lamb born at the beginning of the lambing season' (fi ibtidâ'il-natâc) Kaş. I 456.

baltr properly 'the calf of the leg'; in some modern languages other adjacent parts of the leg. S.i.a.m.l.g. except SE(?) with some phonetic changes. Uyg. VIII ff. Civ. (on the second day it is in the heel) üç yarıda baltrda 'on the third in the calf' TT VII 20, 5-6: (Xak.) xiv Muh. (?) lahmü'l-sâq 'the fleshy part of the (lower) leg' baltr Rif. 142 (only): Çağ. xv ff. baltr güst-i narm ki dar qalam-i pâ bâşad 'the soft flesh on the shin-bone'; Nasiri mistranslated it as rân 'thigh' San. 127r. 2: Kip. XIII al-sâq baltr (misvocalized baltr) Hou. 21, 6: xiv baltr lahmâtü'l-sâq lld. 36: xv al-sâq baltr Kav. 61, 7; Tuh. 18b. 13.

beltir 'the junction of two or more roads or rivers'. An early l-w. in Mong. as belçir (Haenisch 14, Kow. 1116, the -ç- implies -t- not -d-). Survives in NE several dialects peltir R IV 1246; Khak. piltir; Tuv. beldir. Uyg. VIII (I spent the summer there, west of İduk Baş) yavaş (VU) tokuş beltirinte: 'at the junction of the Yavaş and Tokuş (rivers)' Şu. E 9; a.o. S 10 (örğil-): viii ff. Bud. balk ortusunda beltirde 'at a cross-roads in the middle of the town' PP 70, 5; o.o. U IV 8, 3 and 13 (U I 39, 3 and 13); Hüen-tš. 1939: Civ. tört beltirindeki toprak 'earth from the junction of four roads' H I 114; (if a man unfit to be a beg becomes a beg) beltir sayu berge salur 'he lays on the whip at every cross-roads' TT VII 42, 5: Xak. XI beldir ra'mü'l-cabal 'the crest or a mountain' (i.e. the point where the slopes on each side meet); one says tağ beldiri: Kaş. I 456.

bıldır 'last year'; Radloff's suggestion that it is a crisis of the purely modern phr. bir yıl dir is, of course, preposterous. Survives in NE Alt., Tel. piltir R IV 1315; Khak. piltir; NC Kir., Kzx. biltir; SC cultur NW Kaz. biltir; SW Az., Tkm. bildir, Osm. bildir. It is an open question whether SE Türki baldır/baldur, etc. Shaw 45; BŞ 55; Jarring 47 'before, formerly, earlier' is a survival of this word or 2 baldır but suggests that they may originally have been identical. Xak. XI bildir al-âmu'l-mâdi 'last year' Kaş. I 456: Çağ. xv ff. biltur pār-sâl ditto San. 149v. 13 (quotr.): Kip. XIII al-âmu'l-mâdi biltir Hou. 28, 7: xv ditto İd. 36; al-âmu'l-awwal bal-ür(d) (sic) Bul. 13, 14: xv al-sanatü'l-mâdiya biltir yıl Kav. 36, 12; sana (yıl wa) biltir Tuh. 19b. 11; mâdi biltir do. 35a. 9: Osm. xiv buldur in one text; xv ff. bildir in several dict. TTS II 136; III 89; IV 99.

VU buldur a reduplicated onomatopoeic of $\dot{\iota}$ type common in Turkish languages; the only direct parallel seems to be NC Kzx. buldur buldur 'glittering' or 'rapidly, noisily' R IV 1853 (not in MM); cf. also SW Osm. güldür. Xak. xiv a:ş kudugka: tüşti: buldur buldur etti: 'the stone fell down the well and the noise of its fall rose like this onomatopoeic' (miñ hâdhi'l-hikâya) Kaş. I 456.

baldız 'a man's wife's younger sister'. Survives in this meaning in NW Kaz. and SW Az., Osm., Tkm., and also in NC Kir., Kzx. but according to MM 68 in Kzx. it also means 'younger sister' and even 'brother-in-law'. The last usage must be quite modern, but the use of the phr. eke baldız in Uyg. directly parallel to éçl inl suggests that it was also sometimes used in the sense of 'younger sister' even in Uyg. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. Sw. 554, 15-16 (eke): Xak. XI baldız uxtu'l-mar'ati'l-şuğrâ 'a (man's) wife's younger sister'; a man's sister is called siyll, not baldız *Kaş. D bulat- Caus. f. of bula-; Hap. leg.? D bultur- Caus. f. of bul-; 'to make, or let (someone Dat.) find (something Acc.)'. N.o.a.b.; the parallel Caus. f. of bol- s.i.s.m.l. but is not noted before Kıp. xiv İd. 35 and perhaps Çağ. xv ff. San. 140v. 6, the translation given here, however, does not really suit either word. The entry in Bul. seems to belong here. Cf. bulduz-. Uyg. viii ff. Man. (you have shown us . . . you have erected . . . D bilig N.Ac. fr. bil-; 'knowledge'. Very common in the early period as the standard word for 'knowledge', and also in a much wider range of meanings, some of which are very indefinite; the underlying connotation is perhaps 'mental process' or the like. In modern times almost completely displaced by other Dev. N.s fr. bil- or l.-w.s, but survives in NE Alt., Tel. pilik R IV 1339; Tuv. bilig (but Khak. bilis); SE Türki bilik Shaw 56 (but BŞ bilim; Jarring bilmeklik); NC Kzx. bilik exists but bilim preferred (Kır. only bilim); SC Uzb. as for Kzx.; NW Kk. bilik (but also bilim, which alone seems to be used in other NW languages); SW Tkm. as for Kzx.; bilik also exists in one or two XX Anat. dialects SDD 207. Know that (-a:dıtı:)-e:dıtı: is a Suff. (harf) which is attached to nouns connoting natural qualities (al-tabbā'ri) and thus verbs are formed. For example 'beauty' (al-ḡuṣn) is körk and if you (want to) say that he was beautiful you add the Suff. e:dıtı: and say körke:dıtı: ḡasuna; and al-'aql is bilig, then you say oḡlan: bilge:dıtı: that is 'the boy was intelligent' (aḡala); then the -a:- melts away (taḡüb) and the -ḡ- is assimilated in the -t- and -tt- comes out of it *Kaş. ben the 1st Pers. Sing. Pron. 'I'. C.i.a.p.a.l. The vocalization is irregular, the Dat. having apparently always had back vowels. In the other cases the vowel was almost certainly -e-, but spellings with -é- are fairly common in some languages; it is possible that in some languages, as in the case of sen, the vowel became -é- when the word was used as a Predicate. The word was originally ben, but except in the Oğuz dialects became men by assimilation at an early date; it is one of the criteria for differentiating between Türkü viii ff. Yen., and O. Kir. Ben now survives only in SW Osm., in all other languages, including SW Az., Tkm., it is now men. ba:r Kaş 's definition of this word as a Particle (harf) connoting existence, or presence in a particular place, and as the opposite of yo:k, q.v., is very apt. It is in fact nearly always used as the predicate of a sentence, the subject being either stated or inferred. In this usage, therefore, it is of the nature of a Verb, but it cannot be conjugated and must be supplemented by an Aux. V., I er- or the like, if a mood or tense form is required. Its use as a Noun meaning 'existence' or 'property' (the latter meaning uncertain, if authentic, ? an abbreviation of barım) is unusual. C.i.a.p.a.l.; one of the three basic words in which the initial has become v- in SW Az. and Osm. F bére: a measure of length; n.o.a.b., but a l.-w. in Mong. as bere (Kow. 1126) where it is taken as equivalent to Sanskrit yojana 'a mile of 8,000 yards'. Obviously a l.-w., which, as it is certainly not Chinese and does not look Iranian, is prob. Tokharian. Phonetically the only suitable equivalent is B prere; A pārra 'an arrow', which if taken to mean 'a bow shot', which is a unit of length at any rate in Çağ. (see atım), might have such a sense. This explanation is not, however, self-evident. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A yétmiş tümten bére süñü teg 'like a lance 700,000 bére long' M I 20, 15-16: Bud. (on the bank of that river there is an iron tree) bir béré egiz 'one bére high' TM IV 253, 64; o.o. do. 129, 131; TT IX, p. 22, note 77, 5 tümen bere in Hüen-t. (unpublished fragment) translates Chinese '10,000 li'; a li is about 600 metres.

?D berü: (?bérü:) an Adv. used both of time and of space, meaning broadly 'to this side, on this side'. The phonetics of this word are obscure. So far as the first vowel is concerned the Türkü spellings of cognate words point more to -é- than -e-, and there are sporadic spellings with -é- later, but the evidence for -é- is not conclusive. The word does not occur in Türkü VIII (the word sometimes so read in T 26, 28 is evirtü:) and the spellings of cognate forms in Türkü and Uyğ. are more easily derived fr. ber* (?bér) than this word. It is, therefore, prob. that berü: is itself a der. f., a crisis of berrü:, that is ber (?bér) with the Directional Suff. -rü: and this is corroborated by the fact that it is often used in antithesis to VUD borça: Hap. leg.; Equative f. of 2 bor (?) which from the context must be something violent. V. Thomsen (Turcica 94, note 2) suggested that there was an old word bor meaning 'a storm', of which NE, NC bora- 'to be stormy' R IV 1662 was the Den. V.; and it has been suggested that SW Osm. bora 'a violent wind' is a later form. This is not wholly impossible, but it is more probable that Osm. bora is a corruption of Greek boreas 'north wind', and it is very odd that, if there really was a word bor meaning anything as ordinary as 'a storm', there should be no other trace of it. It is more likely that this is the Equative f. of 1 bor 'wine' with the implication that too much wine leads to disorder. Türkü VIII Tırgeş xağan süsi: Bolçuda: otça: borça: kelti: 'the Tırgeş xağan's army advanced from Bolçu: like a fire or . . .' I E 37; II E 27.

The Turks did not manufacture silk brocade, and it is unlikely that there were many, if any, native words for it. Morphologically çixansı; kutay; xulup; loxtay; and züngüm look Chinese. Éşgütl: looks Tokharian, since sk-, šk- are characteristic initials in that language. Barçin may be a l.-w. fr. barak 'a long-haired dog'. Survives in NC Kir., Kzx.; some NW languages and SW Osm. in its original meaning and sometimes more generally for 'shaggy, long-haired' of other animals, rugs, etc. See Doerfer II 728. Xak. XI barak 'a long-haired (ahlab) dog'; the Turks believe that when a vulture (al-nasr) gets old it lays two eggs and incubates them; and out of one of them there hatches this dog which is called barak, and is the swiftest and the best hunter of all dogs, and out of the other a chick, and this is its last brood' Kaş. I 377: Kıp. xv kalb 'dog' translated inter alia barak glossed in the margin 'sheep dog' Tuh. 30b. 10.

?D burku: 'wrinkled'; n.o.a.b. The morphological relationship between this and other connected words is obscure; burkiğ and burkit- look like Dev. N. and Caus. f. of burk-* and burkur- like a Den. V. fr. this word. The two groups can be joined only by assuming that this word is a Dev. N. fr. burk-* 'to be wrinkled'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. koxşak burkı (spelt pur:kē) bolor 'he becomes weak and wrinkled' TT VIII 14: Xak. XI anything which has wrinkles (ğudūn) in it is called burkı: neğ, for example a frowning face (al-wachū'l-'abūs) with a wrinkled forehead Kaş. I 427; a.o. I 18, 15.

S borğu: See borğuy.

D birkiğ Hap. leg.; (of a horse, etc.) 'a snort'. Presumably Dev. N. fr. birk-* or birku:-*; the only cognate word is birkir-, q.v., and there are the same morphological problems as in the case of burkı: q.v. NE 'Tuv. biğı 'snort' is presumably a corruption of this word. Xak. XI birkiğ 'the snort (naxir) of a horse or donkey'; one says at birkiği: Kaş. I 461.

D burkiğ Hap. leg.; completely unvocalized and the b- undotted (but, being between birkiğ and başla:ğ, must be b-). See burkı; presumably Dev. N. fr. burk-*. Xak. XI burkiğ inzwā'u'l-cild wa ğayrihi 'a wrinkle in the skin, etc.' Kaş. I 461.

E barğan See bazğan.

D barkın (?barkı:n) Dev. N./A. fr. bar-; the word is in a section of which the heading 'fū'lān/fī'lān variously vocalized', requires a long vowel in the Suffix, which seems to be unique but is presumably a Sec. f. of -ğ:n. Pec. to Xak. XI barkın kişi: 'a traveller (al-racūlū'l-musāfir) whom nothing turns aside from his objective' Kaş. I 440: KB (I treat all people alike, whether they are my son, or a neighbour, or stranger) kerek barkın erse keçiğli konuk 'or a guest passing through and determined to push on' 817; kişi barkını 'a man who has travelled widely' 4326; a.o. 4727.

CF burxan compound of Chinese fu (Giles 3,589) and presumably xan. The Chinese character was the one chosen to transcribe Buddha, and was pronounced approximately bur in NW China in VII-VIII. This word, corresponding properly to some phr. like Buddharajā, was the one chosen to represent Buddha in the earliest Turkish translations of Buddhist scriptures, which must have antedated the appearance of Manichaeism among the Turks, and was taken over by the Manichaean missionaries to translate words like 'prophet' applied e.g. to Mani himself. In the Moslem period, like 2 but, q.v. it came to mean 'idol' and still survives in one or two NE languages purkan R IV 1386; Tuv. burğan 'God' and in NC Kir. epics burkan 'idol'. See Doerfer II 732. Türkü VIII ff. Man. burxan, usually in the Plur., is common in Chuas., e.g. tepri yalavaçı burxanlar 'God's messengers, the burxans' 64-5, 69; 'the burxans and the pure Elect' 133; the god Zurvan, the sun and moon gods, the mighty god and the burxans 173-5; tepri Mani burxan M III 15, 7 (i): Uyğ. VU boŗgu:y 'trumpet'; the phonetics are chaotic and it may well be a l.-w. Kaş. alone has final -y; Muh. may point to -o- and Kom. points to -u- in the first syllable, but it survives in some NE and NW languages as birġu/pirġıt and in SW Az., Osm. as boru. See Doerfer II 735. Uyġ. viii ff. Bud. boŗġu 'trumpet' in Matrisimit, see 'Ali 51; Xak. xı boŗġu:y (in a section for words ending in a long vowel followed by -y) 'the trumpet' (al-şabbır) which is blown *Kaş. C birök Adv. or Conjunction; bir with ök (2 ok) attached. A word of very indefinite meaning used at or near the beginning of sentences; v. G. (ATG, para. 417) translates it 'nun, aber' ('well, but, however'); but it is doubtful whether it had even as precise a meaning as this. Except for one occurrence in Türkü, it seems to occur only in Conditional sentences, sometimes in the phr. apam birök (see apan). It is therefore often translated 'if', but this sense is inherent in the Verb even if birök is absent. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. Man. birök follows a finite Verb and seems to qualify a Ger. in -üp followed by another finite Verb M I 6, 1; it begins a Cond. sentence TT II 6, 20; 10, 93: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. apam birök followed by Cond. sentence TT III 64: Bud. birök introducing a Cond. sentence is common TT IV 6, 25; V 26, 92-3; 28, 121; VII 40, 22 etc.; VIII B.1, etc.: Civ. every major para. in TT I begins birök . . . atlıđ ırk kelser 'if the hexagram named . . . appears'; a.o.o.: XIV *Chin.-Uyğ. D bürük Pass. Conc. N. fr. bür-. Survives in SE Türkü bürük 'pucker, gather' Shaw 48 (only). It is an open question whether börök, 'a stuffed pancake', is also a later form of this word. It has no other obvious etymology, but is consistently spelt with -ö- in SC XIV Xiva Vam. 246; several NW languages: SW Osm., Tkm. Xak. xi bürük 'any circular draw-string' (xayf mudavvar) like that in the mouth of a leather food bag or the top of the trousers and the like Kaş. I 385; (Kip. xv börök 'pieces of dough stuffed with meat'; and when it is eaten on a skewer it is called siş börök İd. 30; similar entry, adding 'if stuffed with sugar called çeker börök' Bul. 8, 12).

berge: 'a whip'; an old word ending in -ge-. It is suggested in TT IV, p. 18, note B47 that it is a l.-w. fr. Latin virga 'a rod, stick' obtained through Middle Pe. but there does not seem to be any trace of the word in Pe., and the theory is improbable. N.o.a.b., completely displaced by the syn. word kamçı; q.v. Cf. Kağıl. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. temir berge 'an iron whip' TT V 10, 93; o.o. TT IV 10, 7 (and see note thereon) etc. (beđük), Suv. 5, 23 (bireğü): Civ. kamçı berge yep 'being flogged' USp. 55, 34; a.o. TT VII 42, 5 (beltir): Xak. xi berge: 'a rod or whip (al-qađib wa'l-sawf) used to flog thieves or drive donkeys' Kaş. I 427; a.o. III 323, 7 (gatıla:-): KB ayama ođul kızka berge yedür 'have no mercy, whip your son and daughter' 1494; o.o. 893 (2 kırn); 2296, 2580 (şön-), 2988: Xwar. XIII(?) Oğ. 24-5 (emgek).

D bérğü: Dev. N. fr. ber-; 'something which ought to be, or is, given'. Survives in SW Osm. verğü/verğil 'gift, tax'; Tkm. berğil 'debt'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. (I bought a skin of wine) sekiz sızır kümüş bérğüke 'at a price of 8 sızır in cash' *Fam. (he made friends) yaxşı bérğü birle 'with goodly gifts' Oğ. 122; a.o. 195.

bürge: an old word ending in -ge-; 'flea'. An early (xiv) l.-w. in Mong. (see Haenisch, Sino-mongolische Glossare I (ADAW, 1957), p. 13, No. 179); survives as bürge and the like in SE Türkü; NC Kir., Kzx.; SC Uzb.; NW Kk. and in SW Osm. pire, Tkm. büre. There is an irregular form NW Kaz. borça; Krum. Kumyk bürge; Nog. bürşe, and see below, perhaps an abbreviated Dim. f. Xak. xi bürge: al-barğüt 'flea'; and a light-hearted fickle (al-tayyäs) man is called bürge: kişl: Kaş. I 427: xiv Muh. al-barğüt bürge: (-g- marked) Mel. 74, 6; Rif. 177: Çağ. xv ff. bürge ('with -g-') kayk 'flea', in Ar. barğüt San. 132v. 28: Kip. XIII al-barğüt bürge; Tkm. büre: Hou. 12, 2: xiv bürçe: ditto İd. 30; ditto büre/bürçe: Bul. 11, 6: Osm. xv to XVII büre 'flea'; c.i.a.p. TTS I 133; II 187; III 133; IV 140.

PUD bürğüç: Hap. leg.; spelt yergüç in the MS. but its position between bođraç (P.N.)

and bösgeç indicates initial b- and the meaning shows it to be a N.I. fr. bür-. There are many words in SW xx Anat. with this meaning and termination der. fr. syn. verbs, see e.g. evlirgeç SDD 559. *Xak. bürkür- (?p-) 'to spurt, gush'. Etymologically connected with bürkek. Morphologically difficult; it is possible that this is an Intrans. Den. V. and bürkek a Den. N. fr. burk* (?p-) which might be an onomatopoeic for the sound of spurting. The modern forms mostly lack the final -r-. Survives in NE Alt., Tel. pürkü- pürkür- 'to splutter' RIV 1399; Khak. pürgür-; SE Türki pürkü- BŞ; pürk- Jaring; NC Kır., Kzx. bürk-; SC Uzb. purka-; NW Kaz. bürk-; Kk., Kumyk bürk-; Nog. bürkü-. *Xak. Dis. BRL

?D birle: 'with'; Grönbech in Der türkische Sprachbau, p. 35, describes this and üçün, üze, and teg as the four old Turkish Postposns. also used as Adv.; he analyses it as bi:r with 'emphatic' Particle -la-, but there is no other trace of such a Particle. The word is obviously very old, and it seems more reasonable to analyse it as an abbreviated Ger. of a Den. V. fr. bi:r; birle-, which occurs as a V. meaning 'to unite' (Trans.) in Xwar: XIII(?) a.o.o. The -r- began to be elided at an early date, producing the f. bile, but in some modern languages this has been further abraded and words quite unlike the original have resulted; a long list of these forms will be found in N. F. Katanov, Opyt issledovaniya uryankhaishogo yazyka, Kazan, 1903, p. 151. Broadly speaking in NE the word survives more or less unchanged as in Tuv. bile or grossly deformed as in Khak. nınan; in SE Jarring records birle/bile/vile/birlen/bilen/vilen; NC Kir. men/menen; Kzx. ben/pen/men; SC Uz. bilan; in NW all the forms found in NC as well as more conventional ones; SW Az., Osm. ile; Tkm. bile/bilen. As a Postposn. birle: has much the same meanings (comitative, instrumental) as English 'with'. At some unknown date, but as early as Xak, it came to be used as an Adv. meaning 'even', and in Osm., while as a Postposn. it is ile, as an Adv. it is still bile, see Deny, Grammaire de la langue turque, Paris, 1920, para. 437. Türkü VIII birle: 'with' occurs in a simple comitative sense, e.g. eçlm xağan birle: 'with my uncle the xağan' I E 17, II E 15, or with the indirect Obj. after verbs like 'to come to an agreement' I S 4, burun lit. 'the nose' (of a human being or animal), 'the beak' (of a bird) and the like; hence 'a protruding natural feature, headland, peak (of a mountain)'; hence metaph. 'in front, preceding', and by a further development 'preceding in times, previous'. this word exactly corresponds to the Ar. (al-anf) in meaning but not in sound *Kaš. VU?D buruñ Hap. leg.; it is possible that this is merely another meaning of bürüñ which follows it, though the semantic connection is not obvious, but the fact that the second is described specifically (and exceptionally) as 'with front vowels' suggests that they were pronounced differently. This word can hardly be derived fr. bur: Xak. xi buruñ al-ğalwa l'il-ramy 'the distance of a bow-shot'; one says buruñ attı: 'he shot a (full) bow-shot' Kaš. III 370.

D birinç Ordinal f. of bır:; 'first'. As Kaš. points out, relatively rare, since at all times other words have tended to be used in this sense, e.g. in the earlier period ilk/ilki:, baştinkı:, etc. and in modern languages the Ar. 1.-v. awwal. It is, however, the only word for 'first' after a ten, i.e. eleventh, twenty-first, etc. S.i.a.m.l.g., except NE, in the longer form birinç: and the like, which displaced birinç before XIV. Xak. xi birinç ne:ñ 'first' of something; a regular form but rarely used (luğa qıyâsiya qalilatul'-isti'mâl) *Kaš. Suff. burunğısı: (birinğısı:) Kav. 67, 11 ff.; in a para. on the Ordinals in Tuh. 61b. 1 ff. it is said that neither birinci nor onunci can be used by themselves because -inci means 'following' and neither 'one' nor 'ten' can follow a previous number, but birinci can be used in such expressions as on birinci: in 3b. 10; 62b. 1 awwal is translated ilk.

VU burslan Hap. leg.; the text of Kaş. is rather incoherent but it seems prob. that this is merely a jingle to arslan and not an independent word. Xak. XI burslan al-bab fi haqiqati'l-luğa strictly speaking 'tiger', hence one says arslan: burslan 'lion and tiger': burslan: a masculine Proper Name; *wa yacüz an yakün burslan taba'a(n) li'-arslan: li-annahumä yuşkarän ma'a(n) wa lä yuşrad burslan 'burslan may be used following arslan because they are mentioned together, but may not be used by itself; and the best explanation (al-aşahh) is that it is "tiger", li-annahu law kána taba'a(n) lamä cäza tasmiyatü'l-racul bihi, because if it was (only)* a jingle then it could not be used as a Proper Name, because one does not say hādā'l-şay' basan as one can say hasan basan (i.e. basan is a mere jingle and cannot be used otherwise)' Kaş. III 418.

?F borsmuk (?p-) 'a badger'. In this form the word occurs only in Kaş., where it appears in a chapter devoted to Dissyllables containing three consecutive consonants, but is misvocalized. Its form is quite un-Turkish and it is almost certainly a l.-w., perhaps fr. Tokharian where the initial would necessarily have been p-. S.i.a.m.l.g., see Şcherbak, p. 139. An unusually large number of modern forms start w. p- including NE Khak. porşix: NW Kk. porşık, Kumyk porşuk; SW Az. porşuğ; Osm. porşuk. The aberrant Tkm. form torşık also has an unvoiced initial. These are all consistent w. the theory that it is a l.-w. w. initial p-, and so suggest that the modern V. borsı-/porşı- 'to smell foul' is a back-formation fr. this word and not its origin. PU böşük a word, like tüñür, concerned with inter-clan marriage customs. If the parallel is exact böşük must originally have had the latter meaning. It also occurs in the phr. adaş böşük and baĖır böşük both meaning 'blood relations and relations by marriage'. INITIAL DENTIPALATAL AFFRICATE

Preliminary note. Initial ç- is not very common in Turkish as an original initial. Although there is good evidence that both unvoiced ç and voiced c existed in the medial and final positions, there is no evidence that there was ever a voiced initial c-, see Studies, pp. 167, 170. There are many Secondary initial c-s, ç-ç and j-s in some modern languages, usually representing an original y-, less often an original s- or t-, with some interchange between the three. Conversely in some languages ç- has become ş-. There are in the Mong. and Pe. a good many words with initial c- which have become l-w.s in Turkish and have erroneously been regarded as native Turkish words.

Mon. CA

VU ç: as such Hap. leg., but perhaps connected with çig, q.v. If as seems probable 2 ç:k- is derived from this word it must have had a back vowel, see also ç:la-. Xak. XI ç: al-nadā 'moisture'; hence one says ç: yér: arđ nadīya 'moist ground' Kaš. III 207.

F çav l.-w. fr. Chinese ch'ao 'a paper currency note' (Giles 514); appears as a unit of currency in late (XIII-XIV) Uyğ. Civ. documents; also used in Çağ. since such notes were issued by the Mongols in their western dominions. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. çav is common in USp. and, like ch'ao, seems to mean sometimes an actual currency note and sometimes 'expressed in notes and not coin' (kümiş), e.g. 12, 5 altı yüz yastuk çav 'notes for (or a sum of) 600 yastuks'; 12, 6 bu çavni 'this sum'; 15, 8 yęğirmi yastuk çuñ tuñ baw çav 'notes for twenty yastuks in heavy current copper coin' (Chinese ch'ung t'ung pao, Giles 2,880 12,294 8,720); the word transcribed çuv in 54, 9 etc. is the same word: Çağ. xv ff. çav 'an oblong piece of paper which circulated instead of gold in the dominions of the Mongol xans with a special mark and the name of the pādişāh inscribed on it'. They conducted business with it. Waşşāf in the second volume of his History in an account of the çav which were current in the reign of Gayxatū Xan says that the shape and appearance of the çav were as follows: around the face of an oblong piece of paper were written a number of words in Chinese characters, and at the top 'lā ilāh illā Allāh, Muḥammad rasūlu'llāh, a metallic coin' and below that was written irmeçin nurçi (a corrupt Mong. phr.) in an oval below the centre; they were in denominations from half a dirham to ten dinārs and have become obsolete San. 209v. 10.

PU?F cıvi: Hap. leg.; the single kasra under the word might belong either to the c- or to the v-; possibly an Iranian l.-w. with an initial dental converted to an affricate, cf. Iranian daeva 'demon' (Pe. dēv). Xak. XI cıvi: 'the word for a class of demons' (hizbi'l-cinn). The Turks assert that when two communities (cam'ayn) fight one another, before the battle the demons which inhabit the territories (wilāya) of these two communities fight one another furiously on behalf of the human owners of the two territories; and whichever of them wins, the victory goes to the owner of that territory on the next day; and whichever of them is defeated on that night, defeat comes to the ruler of the community of the territory inhabited by that class of demons. On the night before the encounter (al-ma'ād) the Turkish armies hide themselves and go into their tents to take cover from injuries by the arrows of these demons. This is well known (ma'rıf) among them Kaş. III 225.

UV?F çuvı: Hap. leg.; a Khotanese word might be native Saka, the language of that area, or corrupt Turkish; as the Türkü order of precedence seems to have been xağān—şad (and téğın—yabğū: (q.v.) it is possible that this is a corruption of the last word. Xotan XI çuvı: 'a title (lağab) given to a man who is two steps below the xāqān (bā'da'l-xāqān bi-daracatayn) in the order of precedence (fı rasm) of Xotan; wa li'l-türk rasm fihı 'the Turks have a (similar) order of precedence' Kaş. PU çupan an early word meaning 'minor official, village headman', or the like. The earliest occurrences are in Protobulgar IX (?) see Gy. Moravcsik, Byzantoturcica, Budapest, 1943, II 121 (s.v. ζουπανος), with a full bibliography and O. Pritsak, Die bulgarische Fürstenliste . . . Wiesbaden, 1955, pp. 85 ff. This word became a l.-w. in Hungarian and some Slavonic languages as župan (jupan) and the like, 'district head'. It is unlikely that it is connected with Pe. čipān (sec. f. šabān/šubān) 'shepherd' which became a l.-w. in Russian as čaban, s.i.a.m.l.g. except SE as a l.-w. in various forms, and is sometimes confused with čolpan, q.v. Xak. XI (PU) čupan 'awn' ʾarifi-l-garya 'the assistant to a village headman' *Kaš. PU čöpür 'goat's hair' with some extended meanings; as there is no trace of a Den. çavuş originally the principal military officer of a xagan, 'army commander', and the like, the military counterpart of bilge. Later it seems to have become an Adj. meaning 'precisely right' (English colloquial 'bang on'), and even a Noun meaning 'vigour' and the like. It survives as an Adv. in SE Türki çağ BŞ 235; NC Kir. çak; Kzx. şak; NW Kk., Ng. şak; SW Osm. çağ/çak; Tkm. çağ, and in its extended meanings in some of these languages and some NE R III 1831; IV 191, 930. Xak. XI çak harf yu'abbar bihi 'an 'aymi'l-şay' wa nafsīhi 'an indeclinable referring to one particular thing and no other'; hence one says çak ol atmı: tutğil 'take that particular (bi-'aynihi) horse'; and one says çak amaçnı: urğil 'hit that particular (bi-'aynihi) target' *Kaş. 1 çı:ğ usually translated 'reed', which is the most convenient word, but prob. used indiscriminately for several kinds of stiff steppe grasses which, botanically speaking, are grasses and not reeds. Jarring 70 translates it 'a grass or reed', Arundinella nepalensis, used for making baskets and mats'. It was also used fr. an early period for artifacts made fr. such grasses, 'reed-curtain' and the like. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE with some phonetic changes (ç-/ş-; -l/-i-; -ğ/-y). Became a l.-w. in Russian as çhi and in Pe. as çiq (Steingass 396) fr. which it passed into Hindustani, Anglice 'chick', a reed curtain. See Doerfer III 1155. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. (in a list of offerings) bir çığ iki xwa 'one reed and two flowers' TT VII 24, 10: Xak. XI çığ 'a plaited curtain' (qirām) made as a shelter (sutra) for tent dwellers out of southernwood, Abrotanum (qaysūm); this is a plant thinner and suppler than a reed (al-qaşab) *Kaş. F 2 çı:ğ 'a Chinese foot', about 35 cm.; l.-w. fr. Chinese ch'ih (Giles 1,992; Middle Chinese (Pulleyblank) chyek). N.o.a.b., but SE Türki çı 'a Chinese foot' BŞ 254 is a l.-w. fr. the modern form of the same word. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. (in a list of forms of fraud) çığın tsunin 'in (measurements of) feet and inches' U II 77, 25; 86, 42; Suv. 135, 8; tört çığ 'four feet' (prescribed as the length and breadth of a picture) do. 544, 5: Xak. XI çı:ğ the word for 'the Turkish cubit' (dirā turki), it is about two-thirds of the (ordinary) cubit; cotton cloth is measured (yudra) by it among the nomads *Kaş. S 3 çı:ğ See çığ.

(S) çık hardly more than a Sec. f. of 1 and 2 çak. It survives as an onomatopoeic in some NE languages and NC Kir. and as an Adv. meaning 'exactly, completely' in some NE, SE, and NC languages and SW xx Anat. The Exclamation çık used to drive away dogs noted in San. 219v. 5 and Id. 44 is no doubt the Imperat. of çık- and not this word. Xak. XI one says to a man when one is frightening him çık et köreyin şih bi-şavet xafi hattā arā calādatak fihi 'call out in a subdued voice so that I can see how determined you are about it' *Kaş. çoğ, etc. Preliminary note. Those words of this general form which can be specifically identified are listed below. There may be in Uyğ. other Chinese l.-w.s which have not yet been identified, e.g. in USp. 9 PU çok looks like the name of some kind of tax.

ço:ğ originally 'glowing heat, flame'; hence metaph. 'splendour, glory'. S.i.m.m.l.g. with phonetic changes (ç-ş-; -ğ/-k, etc.). Cf. yalm. See Doerfer III 1138. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (then those demons when they saw King Caştana's might) çoğın yalının kutın kıvın 'his splendour (Hend.) and the divine favour (Hend.) which he enjoyed' U IV 10, 51; Sanskrit śreyo 'the best' çoğ yalınığ TT VIII D.17; a.o. U III 71, 12; çoğ yalınığ 'flaming' USp. 46, 2: Civ. kün çoğ 'the heat of the sun' TT VIII I.23: Xak. III 128*: KB (God sends one enemy against another) keşti çoğı 'and cuts off their heat' 144; (if he has subjugated the enemy and) kiterse çoğı 'taken the heat out of him' 1926; a.o. 318: Çağ. xv ff. çoğ (-) kor . . . axgar ma'nasına 'a red-hot ember' Vel. 250 (quoton.); çoğ ('with ç-') axgar San. 213r. 22 (same quoton.); Osm. XIV çok 'glow' in one text TTS II 240.

I çu:ğ 'bundle' and the like; the difference between this and I ba:ğ is obscure, perhaps this meant primarily the actual bundle and ba:ğ the cords, etc. with which it is tied. Survives in NE Leb. çuğ 'wrapping, shroud' R III 2169; Tel. çu: 2164; Şor şu IV 1095 and SW xx Anat. çuğ 'a sheaf of corn' SDI 386. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Sum. 165, 20-1 (I ba:ğ): Xak. XI çu:ğ (bi'l-şamma, 'with -u-, not -o-') 'ayhatu'l-mita' 'a bag for merchandise' *Kaş. XIV eyerl bağı çuğı barça altun 'his saddle, cords, and packages were all gold' (?) Qub 44: Kom. XIV çov CCG, 114, 27r.; Gr. transcribes the German as eyn galaine 'a noise', but the facsimile shows eyn galadaine ? 'a bundle'.

PUF 2 çuğ no doubt, as suggested in the note mentioned below, l.-w. fr. Chinese cho 'muddy, clouded' (Giles 2,409; Middle Chinese (Pulley-blank) çuk). Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (just as the water-clarifying jewel called udakaprasāda) çuğ suvuklık süzgel umuşı 'can clarify muddy liquids'; (so also faith) kértgünçsüz töz üze bulğanmış çuğ bolmış köpülüg süzer 'clarifies the mind which has become confused and clouded by reason of faithlessness' TT V 26, 100-2 (and see note thereon); çuğ (sic) suviğ 'muddy water' Suv. 74, 22 (sergür-).

VU ço:k Hap. leg.; may survive as çak 'bad, useless' in NW Kaz. R III 1831, but obviously not connected with the Adj./Adv. çok 'many; much', which first occurs in Xwar. Oğ. 227, is noted in Çağ. San. 212r. 17; 214r. 1; Kip. Id. 44, 78 (köp); Kav. 24, 14; and Osm. fr. XIV onwards TTS II 238-9; III 156; IV 177 and survives in NE Sag. R III 2004; ŞE Türki; some NW languages, and SW Az., Osm. Oğuz XI ço:k er al-raculu'l-nadl 'a vile, cowardly man' *Kaş. çak- like I çak of an onomatopoeic character and used to describe action of a violent character, physical or mental, e.g. 'to strike fire (with a flint and steel); (of a snake or scorpion) to bite, sting; to slander, decry, betray'. S.i.a.m.l.g. with a wide range of meanings, e.g. for SW Osm. Red. 707 distinguishes ten meanings. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. U II 10, 23-4 (I ür-): Xak. XI ol ikki: kişi: ara: çakdı: 'he made mischief (ağra) between the two men'; and one says çakma:k çakdı: qadaha'l-zand 'he struck the steel (on the flint)' *Kaş. çığ- 'to tie up (a parcel etc.)'; in Kaş. syn. v. ba:-. Cf. çığ-. N.o.a.b. but the Dev. N. çığı/çıkı 'a parcel' occurs in SW xx Anat. SDD 332, 334. Xak. XIV çık- (c-) sarra şay'fi şay 'to wrap something in something else' Id. 44.

I çık- 'to go out; to come out'. S.i.a.m.l.g. with a wide range of extended meanings esp. in SW. It is no doubt fortuitous that neither çık- nor çakar- are noted before XI. The theory propounded in Oğ., p. 27, note 27 that that is a crisis of taşık- is quite unconvincing. Xak. XI er evdin çıkıd: 'the man went out (xaraca) of the house (etc.)' Kaş. II 17 (prov.; no Aor. or Infin.); II 116 (taşık-) and about a dozen o.o.: KB çık- 'to go out, come out' is common 87, 213, 394, 951, etc.: XIII (?) Tef. çık- ditto 358: XIV Muh. xaraca çık- Mel. 25, 13; Rif. 108; al-fulûi '(of the sun, etc.) to rise' çıkmak Mel. 35, 1; Rif. 120: Çağ. xv ff. çık-(-ku, etc.) çık- çık- ('with ç-') bar âmadan 'to come out, rise' San. 218v. 29 (quotns.): Xwar. XIII çık- 'to go out' 'Ali 26: XIII (?) avka çıktı 'he went hunting' Oğ. 27; o.o. 141, 196; XIV çık- ditto MN 88: Kom. XIV ditto çık/çık- ÇCI, CCG; Gr. 79 (quotns.): Kıp. XIII xaraca çık- Hou. 33, 16: XIV ditto İd. 44; al-sahrûl-xâric 'the outgoing month' çıkân ay Bul. 13, 11; şâ'ida 'to rise' (ağ-; in margin) çık- do. 55v.: XV [ala'a wa xaraca şık- (sic) Kav. 9, 12, a.o.o.; Tuh. 15a. 4; raqâ 'to ascend slowly' çık- do. 17b. 11; şâ'ida çık- do. 23a. 3; a.o.o.

D 2 çık- Hap. leg.; Intrans. Den. V. fr. çı: Xak. XI to:n çıkıd: 'the garment absorbed moisture' (al-naddâ); also used of anything which absorbs dampness (al-nuduwwa) from the ground Kaş. III 183 (çık:k:a:r, çık:kma:k).

çok- originally (of a bird) 'to swoop down (on something Dat.)', to peck, peck out' with various extended meanings. S.i.a.m.l.g.; the modern phonetics are confusing; it is nearly always lengthened to çokı-/çoku- (şokı-/şoku-, etc.) but in NC Kır. both çokı- and çukı- occur with slightly different shades of meaning and in Kzx. şok- and şuk-. There do not seem to be any other genuine occurrences of -u- in the verb (both Uzb. -û- and Kaz. -u- represent earlier -o-) but there is what seems to be a Dev. N./A. in -r meaning 'hole, cavity, depression; hollowed out, deep' which first appears in Çağ. San. 214r. 6 and Kıp. İd. 44; Tuh. 11b. 12; 12b. 11 and s.i.a.m.l.g. as çukur (şukur, etc.). See Doerfer III 1099. This must surely be der. fr. this Verb; so too is SE Türki çukur 'pitted with small-pox', unless this is a Sec. f. of çotur. Uyg. viii ff. Bud. PP 2, 8 (u:d): Xak. XI kuş çokıd: 'the bird swooped' (inqađda) Kaş. II 17 (çok:ar, çok:ma:k; verse, see es): Çağ. xv ff. çok (also -uñ, -ti) darbla bir yeri urup çukur et- 'to strike a blow at a place and make a hole'; çok- (-mak, -ti, -uğaç, -ardın) cam' ol- 'to come together, assemble' (quotns.) Vel. 251; çoku-/çokuş- (spelt kâwidan wa gawd kardan 'to dig out, hollow out; to peck, peck out' San. 213r. 28 (quotns.; adding that Vel.'s translation 'to come together' is an error): Osm. XIV to XVI çok-/çox- (1) (of a bird) 'to swoop down on' (a fish); (2) (of a group of persons) 'to swoop down, attack'; (3) (once; of an insect) 'to sting' (? error for çak-); in several texts TTS I 164; II 240; III 157.

çuk- Hap. leg.; the vocalization seems to make it impossible to regard this as a crisis of a Den. V. in -k- fr. çoğ: Uyg. viii ff. Bud. Sanskrit âdipito (spelt âdipito) 'ignited, set on fire' çukup emge:nip TT VIII C.5.

Survives as such in NE Leb. çuğla- R III 2170; Tel. çula:- do. 2175; the central consonants were metathesized in the medieval period and the metathesized form, with some phonetic changes, s.i.m.m.l.g.; in SE Türki both forms occur çuğla-/çuğla-/çuğla- Jarring 77, 97. DF çığlat- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of çığla:-. Xak. XI ol bö:z çığlattı: 'he told the man to measure the cotton cloth in Turkish cubits'; a Turkish cubit is two-thirds of an (ordinary) cubit Kaş. II 345 (çığlatur, çığlatma:k).

D çuğlat- Caus. f. of çuğla:-; s.i.s.m.l. as çulğat-. Xak. XI ol to:nun çuğlattı: 'he ordered (someone) to wrap up his garment' (the translation hamala min gayri taubihı is corrupt) Kaş. II 345 (çuğlatur, çuğlatma:k).

D çakılın- Hap. leg.; vocalized çaklan-, but obviously Refl. f. of çakıl-; 'to flare up'. Kaş.'s translation is very free. Xak. XI özümn meniş budurs:n otu: anıñ çakınur (çaklanu:r) it describes his love and says 'my heart is like a quail and revolves (on a spit) over the fire of love for him' (yataqallab 'alā nār lubbihi) Kaş. I 513, 5; n.m.e.

DF 1 çığlan- Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of çığla-; the word is actually spelt çığlandı; but is quoted in a para. regarding the meanings of Refl. Den. V. s fr. 'trilateral' words, which implies çr:ğ. Xak. x1 böz çığlandı: durı'a'l-hirbās 'the cotton cloth was measured in [Turkish] cubits' Kaş. III 198, 19; n.m.e.

D 2 çığlan- Hap. leg.; vocalized çığlan- but this must be an error. This is clearly a Refl. Den. V. of 3 çığ (çığ) and syn. with çılan-q.v., so is anachronistic in Kaş.; as there is no Aor. or Infin. it was prob. inserted by a later hand. Survives in NW Kaz. çıklan- 'to be moist, wet' R III 2060. Cf. çavla-. Xak. x1 et çığlandı: talahwaca'l-laḥm 'the meat was half cooked' (i.e. still moist) Kaş. II 245.

D çuğlan- (çu:ğlan-) Refl. f. of çuğla-; Kaş.'s translation in the main entry is metaph. S.i.s.m.l.g. as çulğan- 'to be wrapped', etc. Xak. x1 sū kamuğ çuğlandı: cā'a'l-cund bi-qađdihī wa qadıđihī 'the army came in a solid mass', also used of things of any kind when they gather together (ta'allaba) Kaş. II 245 (çuğlanur, çuğlanma:k); (in the same para. as I çu:ğlan-, q.v.) tava:r çuğlandı: (sic) ruzima'l-mitā 'the merchandise was packed up' III 198, 18; xiv Muh. laffa (? luffa) 'to wrap up' (? F çığılva: obviously a l.-w. prob. Iranian, since -vār is a common Iranian suffix. It seems clear that this means 'cross-bow'; cross-bow arrows are shorter than ordinary arrows, and this explains Kaş.'s translation. The cross-bow was not a native Turkish weapon. In the form in Muh. -m- may be a scribal error for -v- or a Sec. sound. Xak. x1 çığılva: okı: al-ḥusbāna wa hiya'l-sihāmu'l-qisār 'short arrows' Kaş. I 493 (verse); xiv Muh.(?) qawsu'l-carx 'cross-bow' çığılma:r (unvocalized) Rif. 173 (only).

çağır Kaş.'s alternative translation 'unfermented grape juice' may be the original meaning, but otherwise it is always 'wine', or in modern times some other intoxicating liquor. çakır 'blue, blue-grey' prob. originally of the eyes, later used more generally. S.i.s.m.l. In Osm. this word was also used, generally in the phr. çakırdoğan, for 'the merlin, stone falcon, Hypotriorchis aesolon' fr. xv onwards; Osm. lexicographers generally consider that it is the same word, but it is almost certainly a corruption of Ar. şaqr, which is itself a corruption of Latin sacer 'saker falcon'. See Doerfer III 1090. Xak. xi çakır al-azraq 'blue-grey' *Kaş. ?F çağrı: a falcon, prob. specifically 'the merlin, stone falcon, Hypotriorchis aesolon'; cf. çakır. F çaxşa:pat, etc. The Sanskrit word şikṣāpada became a l.-w. in Sogdian as çyf pδ, no doubt originally in translations of the Buddhist scriptures, and from Sogdian became a l.-w. in Turkish, usually with the same spelling except for the last letter. It was adopted by the Manichaean missionaries, with other Buddhist technical terms, to translate 'commandment', but in Buddhist terminology was often also used more vaguely to translate 'good behaviour', Sanskrit śīla, see TT VI, p. 66, note 157; it was adopted, for some obscure reason, as the name of the 12th month of the Uyğ. calendar, see Doerfer II, 627. Türkü VIII ff. ?S çığ 'moist, raw', and the like. This word does not appear till the medieval period, and its phonetics are most obscure. The oldest word with this meaning is çıt; q.v., but if çığlan-, q.v., is really part of the original text of Kaş., çığ must be equally old; the back vowel also occurs in Xwar. and some Kıp. texts, but çığ is equally widespread in the medieval period. çigin/çikin Preliminary note. There is some confusion about words of this form. There was almost certainly in the medieval period a Dev. N. fr. çig-, çigin 'a knot' noted in XIV Rbğ. R III 1958 (quotn.) and Çağ. XV ff. Vel. 242, although San. 220r. 24 says, rather unconvincingly, that this is a mistranslation. This word now seems to be obsolete. There was also a word çigin meaning 'the upper part of the shoulder between the neck and the shoulder-blade' (Red.) (perhaps etymologically the same word in the sense of 'the part which ties the neck to the shoulder-blade') noted in Çağ. Vel. 242, San. 220r. 22, current in Osm. fr. the earliest period and still current there and in Tkm., and in Az. as çiyin. Kaş. lists two words of this form meaning respectively 'a kind of plant' and 'a kind of silk fabric'. San. has two parallel entries, but in each case quotes alternative forms with -e- in the first syllable, which suggests an original -ē-. In the latter case the word survives with -i- so this is unlikely. In the former San. lists different plants with -k- and -g- in the middle. As no such plant names seem to survive, the number of plants involved, and the pronunciation, remain obscure.

PU 1 çikin: name of a plant or plants n.o.a.b. Xak. XI çikin: 'a plant (nabt) which grows among the vines, forms ears (or blossoms, musanbala(n)), and is eaten by cattle' Kaş. I 414; Çağ. xv ff. çikin (spelt in full 'with -g-', but -k- intended, see below) (1) şabza wa giyāh 'green vegetable or grass' San. 220r. 19 (quotns.). . . çigün ('with -g-') (3) 'black seeds (dānahā) which grow among the rice fields and have sharp ends (or beards, dum) like rice' . . . (3) the name of a plant called ustūxūdiis 'French lavender' used as a laxative, and to strengthen the heart and reduce anxiety(?) 220r. 22; çekin same translation; çegün ('with -g-') (1) only 208r. 15-16.

?F 2 çikin: survives in NW Kaz. çigün 'gold embroidery' R III 2114. Prob. a Chinese l.-w.;

the second syllable might be çin (kin) 'gold' (Giles 2,032). Xak. XI çiklin al-ibrisam 'silk'; hence one says çiklin yırıtı 'silk thread' (xayıt): çiklin xiyâtu'l-dîbâc muqarqama(n) bi'l-ğahab 'embroidered brocade embellished(?) with gold (thread)' *Kaş. D çalığ N.Ac. fr. çal-. In Kaş. this word is entered not in its proper alphabetical order but as an appendage to şoruğ; it is not, however, likely to be a later addition to the text. The only certain survival of this word is NE Alt. çalu: 'a shaman's drum' R III 1884. There are several medieval words assembled below which seem rather to represent a parallel (Pass.) Dev. The word looks like a Chinese representation of some name like chüi li(g). It has been read as çölliğ and explained as a P.N./A. fr. çöl meaning 'belonging to the steppes', but this is impossible since çöl is a Mong. word which is not traceable as a l.-w. in Turkish earlier than *Çağ. xv ff. I çar in the onomatopoeic jingle çar çur, which survives in SW Rep. 'Turkish in such phr. as çar çur et- 'to squander, dissipate'. The phr. was no doubt colloquial and is not noted in the Osm. dicts. See şar, which is said to be a Sec. f. of çar and is an onomatopoeic with a slightly different meaning. This entry is appended to that of şar, and so is out of its alphabetical position in the MS. Xak. XI one says ol çar çur yê:di: 'he eat everything that he found and left nothing' Kaṣ. I 323.

2 çar: in the phr. çar çarmak which seems to be a mere jingle, perhaps in children's language; pec. to Kaṣ. Xak. XI 'young children' (al-darâdiq'u'l-afâl) are called çar çarmak Kaṣ. III 148; (between çaxşak and çigruk) çar çarmak al-darâdiq wa'l-afâl; one of them is a jingle (iğbâ) of the other; çamrak is an alternative form (luğâ fihî) I 469.

1 çer Hap. leg.; it is hard to see what hikâya means here; it can hardly mean 'onomatopoeic', perhaps 'a word used only to form Den. V.s'. Cf. çerlet-, çerlen-. Xak. XI çer 'a hikâya for great bodily weight' (an iğali'l-badân); hence one says er çerlendi: 'the man's body was heavy' (taqala). A Xakânî word Kaṣ. I 322.

2 çer Hap. leg.; 'time'; cf. ö:d; it is possible that this was the Oğuz equivalent of ö:d, which is not recorded in any Oğuz language except XX Anat., but if so it was displaced by l.-w.s like waqt and zamân at an early date. Oğuz XI çer al-waqt 'time', hence one says bu: çerlikde: kel 'come at this time' (i.e. 'now') Kaṣ. I 323.

3 çer (?çer) Hap. leg.; it is prob. that this is merely an Oğuz form of yê:r 'place', and that Kaṣ. gave it this meaning owing to the erroneous belief that it is connected with çerig, a word almost certainly older than the Oğuz sound-change y- > ç-. Oğuz XI çer 'the opposite of something' (qubâlatu'l-şay); hence one says anıy evl: bu: çerlikde: 'his house is opposite this thing' (şic, but ?'his house is in this locality'); hence çerig is used for 'the two battle ranks' (saffayı'l-harb) because they confront one another (yataqâbalân) Kaṣ. I 323.

1 çir an onomatopoeic; survives, with slightly different shades of meaning in NC Kır. çir and SW Osm. çir Red. 743 (only); it is possible that SW Osm. çir/çir 'sparrow' is an extended meaning of this word, and that the Çağ. word below has the same meaning. Xak. XI çir 'an onomatopoeic for the sound (al-şawt) produced by tearing (min mazq) a garment, etc.; hence one says anıy to:nın çir yırtı: 'he tore his garment with this sound' (muşaw-wita(n) lahu) Kaṣ. I 323; Çağ. xv ff. çir 'the name of a bird which flies about in large flocks' (fauc fauc) San. 218r. 2 (quotn.).

VU 2 çir Hap. leg.; 'fat'; the words used to translate it suggest a rather more solid commodity than ya:g; al-dasam seems to mean 'dripping' or more generally 'fat', al-şahm is usually 'suet', but al-simhâq normally means 'the pericranial membrane', here perhaps more generally 'membrane', and al-samn is more usually 'clarified butter' than 'fat' proper. In the absence of any known connecting link the resemblance to Russian zhir 'fat, suet' is prob. a mere coincidence. Xak. XI çir 'fat' (al-dasam); one says eşiçte: çir yo:k 'there is no fat in the pot'; its origin is 'the membrane on suet' (al-simhâq mina'l-şahm); hence one says bu: ette: çir yo:k 'there is nothing in the way of suet or fat (şay)' mina'l-şahm wa'l-samn) on this meat' Kaṣ. I 323.

1 çor: a Turkish title rather rare in Turkish texts and perhaps commoner in the Chinese records where it is represented by cho (Giles 2,421). It is stated in the Chiu T'ang Shu (see Liu Mau-tsai, Die chinesischen Nachrichten zur Geschichte der Ost-Türken (T'u-kiue), Wiesbaden, 1958, p. 158) that Kutluğ Xağan, before he became xağan, was a hereditary tođun çor, and his brother, who became Kapğan Xağan, is always called by the Chinese Mo-cho (see op. cit., passim) which appears in Tibetan script as hBug-Cor, and perhaps represents Böğö: Çor. There is also a reference (op. cit., p. 170) to the 'Çor of the five To-lu (Tölis) tribes of the Left Wing of the Ten Tribes (i.e. the Western Türkü)'. A çor: therefore seems to have been something less than a xağan and more than a beg, perhaps the head of a small confederation, cf. elteber, I irkin. As regards the pronunciation, the Middle Chinese pronunciation of cho, though uncertain, is likely to have been nearer chor than chur and the Tibetan transcription çor points in the same direction. Türkü VIII (VU) Tađık Çor I E 32; Tarduş İnanç: Çor I N 13; Kül Çor the leader of the Tarduş begs II S 13; Işvara: Tamğan Çor Yabğū: Ongin 4; Ix. is a memorial to Küll Çor and Yégen Çor is mentioned in Ix. 21, 26: VIII ff. (PÜ) Unağan Çor Miran A.2. (ETY II 64): Yen. El çor Mal. 32, 8. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. M II 7, 1 ff. is described as a poem by Afrîn Çor Têgin: Bud. Inal Çor Pfahl. 24, 35 (a rather later document, perhaps here a merely honorary title): O. Kir. IX ff. Külüg Çor Mal. 7, 1; Elçi: Çor Küç Bars do. 14, 1.

VU 2 çor: Hap. leg. Xak. XI çor: ura:ğut al-raṭā minā'l-nisā' 'a woman with a tight vagina'; Oğuz XI the Oğuz call 'dense vegetation' (al-nabū'l-multaff) çor: ot; the first (i.e. Xak.) meaning comes from this Kaş. III 121.

VU çur Pec. to Kaş. Xak. XI çur çur 'an onomatopoeic for the sound of milk falling from the udder into the pail'; also used of any liquid when it makes a noise (şavvata) Kaş. I 323; çurçur (among the words with four consonants) one says tevey emiğ: çurçur 'an onomatopoeic for the fall of milk into a deep dish' (fī'l-cafna) (lit. 'the gurgling sound of a camel's udder') I 485.

VU çür Hap. leg.; cf. asığ, which seems to have displaced this word completely. Cf. çürlet-, çürleten-. Xak. XI çür al-manfa'a 'advantage, profit' Kaş. I 323 (and see çürle:-).

PUD çaşut the exact pronunciation (-ş- or -s-) is uncertain since the Uyğ. script is ambiguous and the Kıp. and Osm. forms may have been altered to conform to a supposed etymological connection with Ar. câşûs; the meaning too may have altered for the same reason. ta:b 'scar, mark on the body', and the like. The question of the survival of this word is obscure. There is a Pe. word tāb meaning, inter alia, 'furrow, wrinkle', which occurs as a l.-w. in some modern languages and might be confused with it. Kaş.'s second quotation looks more like an onomatopoeic for the sound of a beating and the like, and an onomatopoeic tap with this sense occurs in Kom. XIV CCG 143, 41; 146, 13 (not in Gr.) and some modern languages. tavğaç the name of a Turkish tribe transcribed in Chinese t'o po (Giles 11,336 9,335; Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese t'ak bat); the emperors of the Yüan Wei Dynasty which ruled China fr. A.D. 386 to 535 belonged to this tribe, and the Türkü, who presumably first came into contact with China during this period, called China Tavğaç. Apart fr. the references in Chinese texts, the name is first mentioned in literature by a Byzantine chronicler, Theophanes Simocatta, who wrote in the second quarter of VII and mentions Taugast (pronounced Tavgast) as 'a famous city inhabited by the people called Tourkoï' (see Gy. Moravcsik, Byzantoturcica, Budapest, 1943, II 255). This form proves that the word was at this period pronounced Tavğaç and should be thus transcribed in the Türkü texts. It would, however, be rash to analyse it etymologically as a Dev. N. in -ğaç fr. *tav-, since this Suff. normally forms N.I.s. tavar (d-) originally 'livestock', a meaning which comes out clearly in the phr. ed tavar 'inanimate and animate property' (see ed), and from an early date, since livestock was the commonest form of property in Turkish society, 'property' in general and even specifically 'merchandise, trade goods'. As Ar. māl is equally ambiguous, the exact meaning in some medieval texts is obscure. An early l.-v. in Mong. as tabar (Haenisch 143) and Russian as tovar, both in the second sense. (D) tavişğa:n 'hare'; an old animal name ending in -ğa:n. This word has a very long history; it was a pre-VIII l.-w. in Kitan as (PU) taoli, see V. S. Starikov and V. M. Nedelyaev, Predvaritel'noe soobščenie o deshifrovke kidanskogo pis'ma, Moscow, 1964, p. 10, fr. which it passed into Mong. as taolai (Haenisch 145); these words represent, of course, the L/R Turkish form tavişğa:n. It was one of the animals of the twelve-year cycle in Turkish and Mong. Survives in SE Türki tawşkan, etc. Jarring, p. 297, and in several SC, NW, SW languages, see Shcherbak, p. 136. The SW Az. form is dovşan and in Osm. and Tkm. both t- and d- are noted, the former prevailing; initial d- is therefore improbable. In other languages the word for 'hare' is koyan (?kođan). tevey (d-) 'camel'. There is real doubt about the original form of this word; the oldest recorded form is teve:, but it became an early, First Period, l.-w. in Mong. as temeyen/teme'n (Haenisch 148; Studies, p. 234) which presupposes a final -y. Kaş.'s main entry, III 225, is spelt clearly tevey and occurs in a Section headed 'fa'al, fa'il, fa'ul with various vowels on the second consonant', the third being alif, wāw or yā'. Nearly all the words in the Section end with long open vowels, e.g. tapa:, tapı: and it could be argued that tevey was intended to be an 'Arabic' spelling of teve: like ma'nā, which also has a final yā', but this is improbable in itself and inconsistent with the simultaneous spelling of the Oğuz form deve: with final alif. It seems clear therefore that Kaş. meant the word to be pronounced tevey, and this was prob. the original form. S.i.a.m.l.g.; see Shcherbak, p. 103; the NW

Bashkir, Tat. and SW Az., Gagauz, Osm., and Tkm. forms mentioned there all begin with d-, which was prob. the original initial. I tat the basic meaning of this word, which is translated very variously, seems to have been not so much 'stranger', which is I yat, as 'an alien', prob. a subject, but in any case inferior. Radloff (III 890) says that he had personally heard of it only as applied to a section of the Tatar population in the Crimea; his quotn. fr. Budagov goes back to Vel. As regards SW Osm., *Leh. tét-, tıd-, tit-, tit- Preliminary note. It is reasonably clear how many Verbs of each of these forms there are, but as they are usually graphically indistinguishable, it is often difficult, and in damaged passages like U III 25, 15 (i) and TT III 112 impossible, to determine which Verb is concerned.

D 1 tét- (d-) Caus. f. of té- with the idiomatic use of Caus. as Pass.; 'to be said to be, to be called'; almost always in the form tétir 'is said to be, is called'. Pec. to Uyğ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. edğü tétüyk nomluğ [ertiniğ] 'the precious doctrine called "good"' TT III 108; Bud. tétir is very common in texts like TT V 4 ff., e.g. tız yokaru béke teğı suv uluğ tétir 'from the knee up to the waist (the element of) water is said to be predominant' do. 4, 4; o.o. TT IV 4. 3; VII 40, 71; Shw. 110, 6; PP 11, 4; 38, 8; 74, 6; tétirsiz 'you are called' U I 23, 11; Civ. tétir is common in texts like TT VII 14.

2 tét- (té-) pec. to Xak., but cf. tétik, tétin-, tétin-, tétrü-; it is difficult to fit the first two in semantically with the rest, and they may be derived fr. some other V., perhaps téti-*. Xak. XI kul begke: téti: 'the slave resisted (or opposed, qāwama) the beg' (followed by two illustrations of tétrü-) Kağ. II 292 (téte:r, tétmek): KB (I was friendly disposed to you but) maṭa tétüğü teg sen adın boldı söz 'you seem to be hostile to me and your tone has changed' 1083.

tid- (?ti:d-) 'to obstruct, restrain', and the like. S.i.s.m.l. (not SE or SW) usually as tyr-. Türkü VIII ff. Man. nomuğ törüğü yadturmatın tıdtımız erser 'if we have failed to disseminate and have obstructed the doctrine tit- (?d-) 'to tear to pieces' and the like. S.i.s.m.l.g. except NW(?); in NE Khak., NC Kir. tit-; NC Kzx. tüt-; SW Osm. dit-; Tkm. dit-/tüyt-; elsewhere tit-. See Doerfer II 996 and titimlik. Xak. XI ol et tıttı: mazaqa'l-laḥma'l-muharrā 'he tore the boiled meat to shreds', also used when one tears a garment to shreds (mazaqa tamziqa(n) bāliğ(a)n) *Kağ. 1 tit- 'to give up, renounce'; pec. to Uyğ. Bud. Cf. ıdala-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Sanskrit tyaktwā 'having given up' tıttı TT VIII D.22, 40; jaḥāti 'he gives up' tıte:r do. 39; (in a list of virtues) tıtmek 'renunciation' TT V 24, 61 (and see note thereon); o.o. TT V 26, 107-8, etc. (ıdala-); Kuan-ti-im Pusar 70, 7-11 (yüze:ğü); U IV 48, 82-3, etc.

VÜ 2 tit- (?töt-) 'to ache, throb'; pec. to Kağ. where it occurs twice in different spellings. The main entry opens the list of words of this form, is vocalized with damma and has the Infin. in -mak, but the Dev. N. is vocalized with kasra and ends in -ig. The -ig can hardly be a mistake and, since Infin. terminations tend to be erratic, it can be taken as certain that this V. had a front vowel, but the position of the main entry before tut- suggests that the damma is correct and the word may have been töt- or tüt-. Xak. xi ba:ş tötti:(?) 'the wound ached (amađda) because of a blow' Kaş. II 291 (töte:r, tötme:k spelt -mak); one says ba:ş titig titti: 'the wound ached a great deal' (amađda ayya imđād) I 386.

D to:ğ- (?d-) 'to be full, satiated', and the like; apparently a der. f. in -ğ- (see v. G. ATG, para. 153 and cf. yö:d-, yü:d- and perhaps ko:ğ-) fr. to:-, which in this case seems to be a Pass. Suff. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually as toy-; SW Az., Osm., 'Tkm. do:y-. Türkü VIII bir tođsar açsik ömezsen 'if you are once satiated, you do not remember being hungry' I S 8, II N 6; Uyg. ʔS tati-: 'to taste (Intrans.), to be tasty'. The relationship between this V. and tat-, q.v., is obscure; it can hardly be a der. f. since there is no trace of a Dev. D tatığ (in Kaş. under the heading fā'il) Dev. N. fr. tat- (tat-) rather than tatı-; 'taste, flavour', often with the implication of 'a pleasant taste'. This is the only form of this word in the early period and it still survives as tatu: in NE, NC, but fr. the medieval period a syn. word tat appeared, which survives in all other language groups. There is no good reason for supposing that it is a really old word. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A atağ M III 12, 17 (i) (I teğ): Bud. in Bud. terminology tatığ 'taste' is normally the fourth of the six senses, see TT VI 174 ff.; U III 37, 30-1 (I açığı)—in Suv. 118, 7 tatığ must mean concretely 'tasty food', (if any are suffering from hunger and thirst) adruk adruk tağ taşuk tatığlar üze toğırdaçı bolayın 'I will be the one who satisfies them with various wonderful (Hend.) tasty foods'—in Suv. 590, 23 ff. the seven uğuş of the body are enumerated as 'flesh, blood, tatığ, skin, bone, marrow, and oluk(?)'; this seems to be an error for tadu: Civ. tağlar bütüğe tayağı tétir 'it is called a support for the preparation of tasty foods' TT I 191; o.o. do. 187, 199: Xak. XI tatığ al-ladda 'a pleasant taste', one says in a jingle (fi'l-izdirwac) tatığ ta:ğ Kaş. F đıdım 'crown'; l.-w. fr. Greek διάδημα, obtained through Sogdian dydm. N.o.a.b. Türküt VIII ff. Man. TT II 8, 67 (ur-): Xak. x1 bidim (sic) 'the crown (al-ikil) which a bride wears on her wedding night' Kaş. I. 397.

D tıtım (d-) Hap. leg. ?; N.S.A. fr. tıt-, but judging by tıtımılığ, q.v., already with front vowels. Xak. x1 KB (a beg must be stout-hearted and a good shot) yürek birle boldı yağıka tıtım 'with a stout heart he becomes destruction (or the like) to the enemy' 2043.

D tutum (tutom) N.S.A. fr. tut-; lit. 'a single act of grasping', but normally used as a Conc. N. meaning 'a handful', with other cognate meanings. In the medieval period became tutam, presumably because the original form was tutum (cf. tutuş), and s.i.a.m.l.g. in this form. Osm. tutum 'sumach' is a Pe. l.-w., not connected with this word. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. yétli tutum talkan 'seven handfuls of meal' TT VII 24, 9; 25, 9-10: Xak. XI KB (man is born to die) tutamça tiriglik tüker alkinur 'his handful of life comes to an end and perishes' 5265; Çağ. xv ff. tutum (1) gıřift-i kâr wa âfâr-i kây 'seizing a thing and traces of a thing'; (2) turşı wa hamûdât 'pickles' (and in Pe. 'sumach') San. 169v. 17 (the first translation is obscure; neither meaning seems to be noted elsewhere); her tutam tört éllig 'every tutam is two double handfuls' Bahur (P. de C. 222): Kıp. xiv tuřam al-qabđa 'a handful' İd. 64; Bul. 9, 10.

D tutma: Pass.(?) Dev. N. fr. tut-; Hap. leg. in this meaning, but a common N. Ac. in some modern languages. Xak. XI tutma: al-şandüq 'chest, coffer' Kaş. I 431.

D tutmaç: Dev. N. in -maç; (denoting kinds of food); some kind or kinds of farinaceous food, 'noodles, macaroni, vermicelli', and the like; popular in the medieval period, but now obsolete; the latest trace is in SW Osm. tuřmac ('for tutma aş!') 'a dish of stewed mutton in gobbets with chick peas' Red. 1251. See Doerfer II 876. Xak. XI tutmaç: 'a food (ta'âm) well known to the Turks', followed by a story about Dül'-qarnayn, who is said to have provided this food when his troops said tutma: aç 'do not keep us hungry' Kaş. I 452; o.o. III 119 (çö:b); 3 o.o. translated tutmâc: Çağ. xv ff. tutmaç 'a kind of food (aş) made by rolling out dough and shredding it' San. 169v. 12: Kıp. xiv tuřmaç (-c) 'handfuls (qabđât) of dough placed in meat soup'; its meaning is 'held back for hunger' (al-mumsak li'l-caw); tuřma: 'do not hold back', aç 'hungry'; the phrase (al-cumla) is used as a name İd. 64; (in a list of foodstuffs) al-tuřmâc qibedâqiya 'a Kıp. word' Bul. 8, 12: Osm. xiv to xviii tutmaç 'macaroni soup' in several texts TTS II 907; III 689; IV 766.

D titimlig (d-) P.N. fr. titim; pec. to KB; the context indicates some meaning like 'destructive, disruptive'. Xak. XI KB (an army commander in the face of the enemy must be as brave as a lion, with a wrist like a leopard's) tořuz teğ titimlig 'as destructive as a wild boar' (as strong as a wolf, etc.) 2311; o.o. 2328 (tupul-), 5905.

ta:đun originally 'a calf, one or two years old'. Survives only in NE Kaç., Koib. (R III 928); Khak. tazın 'an ox, a gelded bull'. Xak. XI tuřam al-cada' mina'l-baqar 'a two-year-old calf'; and the feminine is tişti: tađun Kaş. I 400; ta:đun (?; -d-) al-tabı' mina'l-baqar 'a one-year-old calf' III 171.

VU?D tuđın n.o.a.b. For the description in Kaş. cf. türk; in a Section in Kaş. headed fâ'il together with tađun and to:đun. If the -d- could be taken as an error for -d- this might be an Abl. of ti: with which there is some semantic connection. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (if a man, because he does not understand this, takes entirely different views) azu ters tetrü (PU) tuđınça yayılık nomlasar 'or preaches errors at inappropriate times(?)' TT VI 195 (one of several v.l. of this para.; the translation is purely hypothetical, but it is hard to see any alternative): Xak. XI tuđın (sic, but an error under fâ'il) harf yunbi' 'an'l'-waqt 'a Particle connoting time'; hence one says bu: tuđın (sic) keldi: câ'a fi mişl hâđâl-waqt 'he came at about this time' Kaş. III 171.

to:đun (hitherto transcribed tuđun, but the Chinese transcription indicates to:đun, cf. totok); a Türkü title of office. It occurs fairly frequently in Chinese records regarding the Türkü, where it is spelt t'u t'un (Giles 12,100 12,232; Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese tou dun), see Chavannes, Documents sur les Tou-kiue (Turcs) occidentaux, St. Petersburg, 1900, Index s.v. t'ou-t'ouen and tou-doun. In the list of Turkish offices in the Chiu T'ang Shu, Chap. 194b. (Chavannes, p. 21) the t'u-t'un occupies the 7th place, coming after the hsieh-li-fa (élteber); when T'uñ Yavğu, who was the Western Türkü xağan in the first quarter of the 7th century, conquered foreign countries he gave their rulers the title of élteber, but sent a to:đun to supervise them and collect the taxes (Chavannes, p. 24); the word appears in these records, as an element either first or second, in P.N.s, e.g. T'uñ tođun and Tođun Şad (Chavannes, Index). By XI the office had obviously lost importance. N.o.a.b. in Turkish texts. See Doerfer III 1194. Türkü VIII tođun (VU) Yamtarığ 11(t)ım 'I sent the tođun Yamtar' (telling him 'attack the Karluk to the south') II E 42; Kül Tođun İnisi: 'younger brother of Kül Tođun' Ixe-Asxete a.1; b.1 (ETY II 121-2); VIII ff. Uruņu: Tođun Çiğşi: Miran A 2-3 (ETY II 64); Xak. XI tođun 'the headman (arif) of a village, and the man who allocates water for watering livestock' (muwazzi'u'l-miyâh fi'l-şirb) Kaş. I 400; to:đun 'the man who allocates water for watering livestock among villagers' III 171.

D tütün Dev. N. fr. tüte-; 'smoke'. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually as tütün, but NW Kk., Nog. tütün; Kaz. töten. See Doerfer II 953. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. tamğakında kara tütün taşakar 'black smoke comes out of her throat' M II 11, 20: Bud. tütsügnün tütüni 'the smoke of incense' Suv. 424, 12; o.o. PP 38, 6 (tüte-); TT V 12, 130: Civ. tütün occurs frequently in lists of taxes mentioned in contracts, e.g. kalan kurut tütün kabın UŞp. 14, 12; 21, 12; a.o. do. 88, 44; its exact significance is obscure, perhaps a hut tax (see Caferoğlu in TM IV, p. 42): Xak. xı tütün al-duxân 'smoke' *Kaş. tatır perhaps survives in NC Kzx. tatır; this now means 'salt pan' (which should be tepiž) but may originally have meant, more generally, 'flat ground'. Cf. tatırılığ. Xak. xı tatır yér: al-qarāh mina'l-ard 'a flat sown field' Kaş. I 361 (or 'land free from salt').

D tétrü: presumably Ger. of tétür-*, Caus. f. of 2 tét- (cf. tétrü-), used as an Adv./Adj., with a rather wide range of meanings some of which can only be inferred. The word is several times spelt quite clearly tertrü: and survives in SE Türki as tertür/tertür/te:tü: 'inverted, inside out, the wrong way, wrong, topsy turvy' Jarring 304; Tar. te:tür ditto R III 1093. It is possible that this was the original pronunciation, but the vocalization in Türkü and SE Türki excludes the possibility of connecting this word with tart- and there is no other trace of tert-*. Türkü VIII ff. (VU) tığrğ tertrü: (sic) kışe:mış '(a man) hobbled the roan horse(?) crosswise? (it stands unable to move) Irkb 39: Man. F tu:ğ 'a royal emblem', that is essentially some kind of drum or standard; in the early period it is not easy to decide which is meant. Acc. to Kaş. the standard was a silk flag (no doubt an idea derived fr. China), but the traditional Turkish standard was a horse's tail or a bunch of horsehair. No doubt a l.-w. fr. Chinese tu 'banner, standard' (Giles 12,056; Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese dok), see Doerfer II 969; the vowel in Chinese was originally -o- and became -u- at some date which is uncertain but presumably before the Turks borrowed the word, since there is no evidence of a pronunciation to:ğ in Turkish; on the other hand in the case of totok, which occurs in Tibetan as today (see Doerfer II 874), the borrowing prob. occurred before similar sound changes took place in this word. An early l.-w. in Mong. as tuğ (Haenisch 153); s.i.a.m.l.g. as tuğ/tuw (NW Kk.)/tu. Uyğ. D tokaç 'a loaf or cake'; Kaş. may be right in linking this word with tok; if so, it is a Dim. f.

Survives with the same meaning in SE Tar. toğaç R III 1160; Türki tokaç; SC Uzb. tūkaç. Osm. tokaç 'a mallet, a bat (for beating washing)' seems to be the same word with the meaning changed owing to a supposed derivation fr. tokı-. Xak. XI tokaç (qāf unvocalized, the damma in the printed text is an error) al-qurş 'a loaf or cake', taken from the phrase tok er 'a man who is satiated' (al-şab'ān), because it satiates him (yusbi'uhū) Kaş. I 358: Çağ. xv ff. tokaç 'a piece of wood (cūbi) which they put at the back of a door so that it cannot be opened', in Pe. matars; also 'a mallet (tūqmāq, a Turkish l.-w.) which is used to beat laundry when washing it' San. 180v. 25.

D tuğçı: N.Ag. fr. tuğ; 'a standard-bearer'; the word occurs in Çağ. xvi Abu'l-ğāzi and is a l.-w. in Pe., see Doerfer II 973. Xak. XI KB (the Chief Gate-keeper should supervise the cup-bearers, bed-makers, and the cooks and also) tuğçıka 2557.

PUF taxçek Hap. leg.; unvocalized, the second consonant is hā', presumably an error for xā', cf. taxtu; obviously a l.-w. fr. an unidentifiable language; the -x- is not very likely to occur in a Chinese l.-w. Xak. XI taxçek darb min hariri'l-şin 'a kind of Chinese silk' Kaş. I 476.

D tıkit- Caus. f. of tik-; as such Hap. leg., but there is in SW Osm. tıkit- Caus. f. of tika- a Sec. f. of tik-. Cf. tiktur-. Xak. XI ol apar aş tıkittı: alqamahu iyāhu'l-tā'ām bi-'unf 'he ordered him to feed him forcibly'; originally used of anything which is inserted into a container with a violent kick (bi-rakl şadıd) Kaş. II 308 (tıkitur, tıkitma:k).

D tokıt- (d-) Caus. f. of tokı-, with the same range of meanings. S.i.s.m.l., usually for 'to have (something) woven'. Türkü VIII taş tokıtdım 'I had a (memorial) stone driven into (the ground)' I S 12; beğlü: taş tokıtdım I S 12-13; 13 (the parallel passage in II N 14 is lost, Orkun's reconstruction tokıtdım is an error): Uyg. VIII Su. E 8 (çıt): viii ff. Bud. uluğ küvrüğ tokıttıp 'ordering that the great drum should be beaten' PP 31, 8: Civ. TT VIII I.11 (beğnl): Xak. XI ol anıy boynın tokıttı: 'he ordered that his neck should be struck' (daraba 'unuqahu) (tokıtur, tokıma:k); and one says ol böz tokıttı: 'he had cotton fabric woven' (ansaca); and one says ol kılıç tokittü: 'he had a sword (or knife) forged' (aşba'a) (tokittür, tokitma:k); and one says ol kapuğ tokitti: 'he had the door knocked' (aqra'a) Kaş. II 308: Çağ. xv ff. tokut- bafāndan 'to order to weave' San. 180r. 16.

D taktur- Caus. f. of tak-, but unlike that word not described as Oğuz. S.i.s.m.l. Xak. xi et sr:şka: takturdi: 'he strung (nazama; ? error for nazama 'he had . . . strung') the meat on a spit' Kaş. II 174 (takturur, takturma:k).

D tiktur- Caus. f. of tik-; survives in NW Kaz. tiktür-. Cf. tikit-. Xak. xi u:nuğ ka:bka: tikturdi: 'he urged the man to insert (bi-ıdāl) the flour into the container and force it in'; also used of other things Kaş. II 174 (tikturur, tikturma:k).

D tuğtur- (d-) Caus. f. of tüğ-, q.v.; survives in SE, SC in the normal meaning 'to give birth to' and in NC Kır. (where tu- means both 'to be born' and 'to give birth to') tudur- (1) 'to give birth to' (lit. and metaph.); (2) 'to deliver a woman (of a child)'. Xak. xi teğri: oğul tuğturdi: avladı'llāhu'l-walad minā'l-mar'a 'God caused the child to be born of the woman'; originally tuğtururdi (sic, but ?tuğturdi: in the original text). This is in accordance with the rule, which is that if a verb is a Caus. f. without the attachment of -t (ilhāqu'l-tā) then when a -t is attached to it it makes it Causative in such a way that the Object (al-maf'ūl) is operated upon by two Subjects (al-fā'ilān), one of whom gives an order and the other performs an act; for example su:v içürdi: aşraba'l-mā 'he gave (someone) a drink of water', but if one says su:v içürdi: (sic, but ?içürtdi: in the original text) it means 'he ordered someone else to give (someone) a drink of water'; again ol anı: boğdi: means 'he strangled him', but if one says boğturdi: it means 'he ordered someone else to strangle him'; there is the same difference of meaning in Ar. between laqaṭa and alqaṭa and naqaṭa and anaqaṭa, where the addition of a- makes the verb Causative with two Subjects (fā'ilān) operating on the Object Kaş. II 173 (tuğturur, tuğturma:k; MS. boğturur, boğturma:k; it is prob. that it was a copyist, and not the author, who made nonsense of this para.; the translations of içür- and içtür- are identical in Kaş.; there is no other trace of içür-, which is clearly the form required by the words iḏā ulhiqat bihi'l-tā).

VU?D toğra:ğ prima facie a Dev. N. fr. toğra-, but with no obvious semantic connection; spelt toğza:ğ in the MS. but this must be an error since the Refl. Den. Pec. to Kaş. Xak. xi toğra:ğ 'any horse which a king gives his troops on the day of the start of an expedition (al-rikāb) or a battle and takes back from them when they return' Kaş. I 462; keldi: berü: toğra:ğ: atānā barıdıhu 'his mounted messenger came to us' III 65, 13 (misvocalized tığra:ğ); the word is not very apt and was perhaps used merely for the sake of the rhyme).

tuğra:ğ 'a royal sign manual'; survives only (?) in SW Osm. as tuğra. See Doerfer III 1344. tokkuz (d-) 'nine'. There is no doubt that this word and some other numerals originally had a medial double consonant, see Clauson, 'The Turkish Numerals', JRAS, 1959, p. 20, and this double consonant would not have been written in the Runic or Uyğ. scripts. te:g (d-) Postposn. 'like'; together with üçün, üze; and birle: one of the 'four old postposns.' discussed in K. Grønbech, Der türkische Sprachbau, Copenhagen, 1936, p. 35. When attached to the oblique stem of ol it soon became fused with it as antağ, q.v.; later it became similarly fused with the oblique stem of l bu: S.i.a.m.l.g. except SW where it is replaced by other words like Osm. ğbl (kib); the vowel varies between -e- and -a-, and the final between -g and -y, but the initial is consistently d- everywhere. Türkü VIII teprl: teğ 'god-like' I S 1, I N 1, a.o.o.; Uyg. VIII ff. tek Preliminary note. There was certainly a word tek meaning 'only', which is not mentioned in this meaning by Kaş.; it seems likely, however, that his translation 'for no particular purpose' is a misunderstanding of it. There was also certainly a word tek meaning 'silent(ly)' which is generally used to qualify tur-, and must be carefully distinguished fr. tik which is similarly used. There is a modern word in NC Kzx. teğ/tek 'family, origin', which Radloff certainly in error, read in some early texts; in Türkü VIII ff. Yen. Mal. 28, 1 the correct reading is prob. tegme: 'all'; in Xak. XI KB the readings are all due to scribal errors in the Vienna MS., in 344 akran teki for evren başı; in 950 tegin for teğin and in 1630 teginde for beğinde. A word tek 'under' first mentioned in Çağ. XV ff. San. 157v. 24 and surviving in several modern languages looks like a corruption of Ar. taht, which is the word used to translate it in San.

S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE?; in SW Az., Osm., Tkm. dik; almost the only word in Kaş. which preserves the original d-. A l.-w. in Pe., Doerfer II 1005. As he points out, practically syn. w. Chinese chih (Giles, 1,846, Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese djâk), and prob. a l.-w. fr. it. Its relationship to Mong. çike (Kow. 2175) is obscure, on balance it is perhaps more likely to be a l.-w. fr. Turkish than direct fr. Chinese, although the unvoiced initial and the fact that the Mong. word has Sec. meanings peculiar to Chinese point rather in the other direction. Xak. XI 'when a thing is vertical' (idâ'ntaqaba'l-şay qâ'ima(n)) one says dik turdi: *Kaş. D teğl: (d-) Ger. fr. teg- used as a Postposn. after Nouns in the Dat. meaning 'up to, as far as' (a place), and 'until' (a time). E tekl the existence of a word of this form (in the Index teḡi) meaning 'family' in Uyğ. viii ff. Civ. is suggested in USp. with a refce. to Radloff's similar suggestion regarding tek (see Preliminary note thereon), but it is clear that this is an error arising fr. misunderstood uses of the Den. Suff. -teki, e.g. (if I die before paying the debt) Nomkulınıḡtekliler bile köni bérşünler 'let the Nomkuls also honestly repay it' USp. 1, 8; cf. (if I die before paying the debt), Inim kasuk evtekiler bile köni bérşünler 'let my younger brother (PU) Kasuk together with those in his house honestly repay it' do. 7, 7-8; the latter is a revised text, Radloff in USp. read Kusukniḡ tekiler and there is no doubt that the -niḡ in 1, 8 is also an error for ev, and that a similar error occurred in other parallel passages in USp. 8, 10, 34, etc.

PU tiḡi: 'a sound'. Kaş.'s etymology, though no doubt false, suggests that the second consonant was -ḡ-, the first vowel might be -é-. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. Suv. 166, 6 (çoḡı): Civ. yaḡız yérde tiḡi ündi: 'a sound rose from the brown earth' TT I 90; süzük suv tiḡisi 'the sound of clear water' do. 135: Xak. xi tiḡi: 'a sound' (dawr) heard at night; the Turks believe that the spirits of the dead assemble once a year at night and go to the places (al-amşār) where their bodies were when they were alive, and visit their relations (ahālihā), and that anyone who hears that sound at night dies. This is widely known (maşhūr) among the 'Turks. The word is spelt with a kasra on the tā, but in my view it would be more correct (acwad) with a fatha (bi'l-naşb), because when a woman, who has been given in marriage, visits her family one says teḡdi: keldi: 'she has come visiting' (zā'irata(n)) Kaş. III 230.

D tikü: (dlkḡö:) Kaş.'s suggestion that this is a contracted Dev. N. in -ḡi: fr. tlk- is prob. correct, cf. tkim. S.i.s.m.l. and a l.-w. in Pe. and other languages usually as tike/tikke (rare) see Doerfer II 918. Xak. xi one says bi: tikü: et 'a piece (or slice, falda) of meat'; originally it had a double -kk- then it was shortened and (one k) absorbed in the other (wuffisa wa ulhiqa li-axawātihi) *Kaş. tüḡe: (?d-) 'a (half-grown) calf'; survives in SW Az. düḡe/düye; Osm. düve; Tkm. tüve usually for 'heifer', Şcherbak, p. 101; acc. to Sami 871 (s.v. dana) a düye is a female, and a tosun a male, calf bigger than a buza:ḡu: or dana; Kaş.'s translation is cryptic, but unless tiḡi: has fallen out before the second tüḡe: it may mean that this word already meant 'a female half-grown calf'. Xak. xi tüḡe: 'a calf' (waladu'l-baqara) when it has reached the second year; and the female (al-unjā) is called tüḡe: *Kaş. VUD töḡi:(d-) Dev. N. fr. (VU) tö:ḡ-, q.v.; 'crushed or cleaned cereal'; the first vowel is given as -ö- in TT VIII in a text in which the spelling is erratic, but all modern forms have ü or the equivalent see Doerfer II 979 where its forms as a l.-w. in Pe. and other languages, are shown. S.i.s.m.l. in NW and SW fairly consistently with d- even in languages in which this initial is rare. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. töḡömin . . . töḡöde:n (spelt tōho) TT VIII K.3 (sıka:); *do. (F) tégin (or ? tégin) a very old title, like tarxan, q.v., inherited fr. some earlier non-Turkish language, as shown by the fact that it had the non-Turkish Pl. f. tégit, q.v. In the Türkü period it meant 'prince' in the limited specific sense of 'a son, or grandson, of a ruling xağan'; after that period it was used in a much less restricted sense as a title of honour of diminishing importance, but did not survive the Mongolian invasion. Its history is discussed at great length in Doerfer II 922 (which contains some errors) and more briefly in Bosworth and Clauson, 'al-Xwārazmī on the Peoples of Central Asia', JRAS, 1965, p. 7. It is noteworthy that both Kaş. and San. give wholly erroneous accounts of its origin. Türkü VIII the prince commemorated in I was Kül Tégin, younger son of Élteriş Xağan; both I and II were drafted by Yolluğ Tégin; the att: ('grandson or nephew') of Bilge: Xağan (see I S 13; SW; II SW) who was himself a tégin (see IE 17, II E 14) when his uncle succeeded his father as xağan; four tégins attended the funeral of Küli Çor Ix. 24: Uyg. VIII Ozmiş Tégin xan bolmış 'Ozmiş Tégin became xan' *Su. Then this noun was made an exclusive appellation (sima mahda) for the sons of the Xaqāns and is combined with the names of birds of prey, e.g. Çaqır: tégin, that is 'a prince (tégin:n) with the strength of a falcon' (al-bāzi); küç tégin: 'strong prince'. This name was transferred from slaves (al-mawālī) to the sons of Afrāsiyāb because they respected their fathers and whenever they addressed or wrote to them they said or wrote 'your slave has done so-and-so' depreciating themselves and exalting their fathers. After that they were known specially by this name; but the word remained as the name of a slave when it was combined with something which was clearly distinguished from them (i.e. princely names) Kaş. I 413; o.o. I 355 (tégit); 357 (begeç); III 368 (toğa): (KB kayusı tégin beg, 4068, is an erroneous conjecture by Arat; the MSS. indicate rather kayusı küll erkin): xiv Muh. (?) télve: (d-) 'lunatic, mad'. The evidence seems to point to -é- rather than -e- as the original first vowel. VU tolvir the Ar. words used to translate this are ambiguous, meaning both 'a veil' covering a woman's head and body, and 'a canopy, screen', and the like; as such n.o.a.b.; in the three occurrences the tā carries damma twice and fatha once, the vā kasra twice and nothing once. PU?F töleç n.o.a.b.; in Uyğ. spelt tölç; morphologically inexplicable, since although there is some semantic connection with F 2 töle-, -ç is not a possible suffix either in Turkish or Mong. Both Uyğ. occurrences are in very late documents relating to the same man, (PU) Turi, which contain several l.-w.s. The meaning seems to be 'free, gratis, without payment'. Uyğ. xiii(?) Civ. töleç kuruğ kalmayın 'let me not remain unpaid and without the land' (?) USp. 24, 10 (this seems to be the meaning, but the whole document is very obscure);

Dis. DLD

D tölet n.o.a.b.; the context suggests the meaning 'cushion' or the like; apparently a Dev. N.; there is obviously no semantic connection with 1 or 2 töle-; and the word seems rather to be derived fr. töle-: as an l/r form of töse-; cf. tül/tüş Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. (form of eat, clothes to wear) olurguluk orunun töletin töşekin 'a seat, cushions, and mattress to sit on' Suv. 513, 13; a.o. TT VIII D.12 (orun).

D tilda:ğ/tılta:ğ (d-) Dev. N. fr. tilda-; prob. with -lt- in Uyğ. and -ld- later; the meaning is very elusive; in some Uyğ. passages 'cause, reason' suits the context best, in others perhaps 'pretext', which is nearer the etymological meaning of tilda-. N.o.a.b., but NE Tob. tildak 'eloquent', R III 1333, seems to be a parallel Dev. N./A in -k. Became an early l.-w. in Mong. as šiltāğ/šilta'a (< čiltāğ) 'reason, cause' (Haensch 140); this word was then reborrowed in this form but with meanings more akin to those in Xak., in Çağ. (San. 260v. 3), Kom. (sultow CCG; Gr. 238) and various modern languages, as well as in Pe. and other foreign languages, see Doerfer I 236. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. biziğ kut tiletü yarlıkap 'deigning to order that the favour of heaven should be sought for us' USp. 88, 13: Xak. xi ol anı: tiletli: 'he ordered someone to seek him' (yaşlabahu), so he searched for him (fa'ştaqadahu) *Kaş. D tölet- (d-) Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of 1 töle-; Kaş.'s explanation of the origin of the word would be applicable to a Caus. f. of tüle-; either he confused the two words or some words have fallen out. Oğuz xi ol koy töletli: natacati'l-ğanam (error for nataca) 'he helped the ewe to lamb'; aşluhu isqā'i'l-'aqqu mina'l-şa'r 'its origin is making the hair fall out' Kaş. II 310 (töletür, töletme:k).

D tilda-/tılta- (d-) Den. V. fr. til; regarding the phonetics see tilda:ğ; etymologically this should mean 'to use the tongue', but in practice it seems usually to mean 'to make excuses, to seek pretexts', and the like. Survives only (?) in NC Kır. tilde- 'to abuse'. Uyğ. viii ff. Civ. (in a pledge by executors of an estate; 'if anyone presents these documents to us') neğüke tiltamayın bütürüp bergeybiz 'we will pay in full, without seeking any pretexts' USp. 12, 9-10; a.o. do. 14-15 (çamsız): Xak. xi KB (if you are now willing to learn) tilin tildama emdi kesğil sözü 'do not make any excuses and stop talking at once' 4030: Xwar. xiv tilta- 'to incite, induce (someone Acc., to do something Dat.)' Qutb 192: Kom. xiv tiltağan söz 'a false statement' CCG; Gr.

VU?D tölte- Hap. leg.; perhaps Den. V. fr. tölet which could mean 'to provide with cushions'. Uyğ. viii ff. Man. Wind. 34-5 (ét-).

D tiltan- (d-) Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of tilta-; perhaps 'to make (something Dat.) an excuse'. Türkü viii ff. Man. Chuas. 267 (1 is).

D taltur- (d-) Caus. f. of tal-; s.i.s.m.l., usually as taldur- 'to tire out, exhaust', but SW Osm. daldür- means 'to plunge (something Acc.) into water'. Xak. xi ol anı: urup talturdu: 'he beat him until he almost fainted' (kāda an yuğsā 'alayhi) Kaş. II 174 (talturur, talturma:k).

D teltür- (d-) Caus. f. of tel-; survives in SW Osm. deldür-. Xak. xi ol tam teltürdi: 'he ordered the piercing (bi-ıaqb) of the wall' (etc.); the second tā is changed from dāl (MS. lām), as they say in Ar. qatara and qadara with the same meaning (quots.); a dāl may be changed from tā, and a tā (MS. bā) from dāl (quots.) Kaş. II 174 (teltürür, teltürme:k).

D tiltür- (d-) Caus. f. of til-; s.i.s.m.l.g., usually as tildür-. Tildür- in Kaş. follows tuldur- so presumably belongs here, although semantically it is nearer teltür-, but the text is in some disorder and it is followed by biltür-, tamtur-, etc.; the scribe was obviously confused between -t- and -d-, but biltür- is misplaced in any event. Xak. XI er yarında:k tıldürdi: 'the man ordered that a strap (lit. strip) should be cut' (bi-qaddi'l-qidd); also used of anything when it has been cut in strips (qudda), e.g. leather, and the like Kaş. II 175 (tıldürür, tıldürme:k): anı: biçe:k bile: tıldürdi: 'he stabbed him (waca'ahu); ?read awca'ahu 'had him stabbed' with a knife' II 176 (tıldürür, tıldürme:k).

D toltur- (d-) Caus. of f. to:l-; 'to fill'. S.i.m.m.l.g.; in SW Az., Osm. doldur-; Tkm. do:ldur-. Xak. XI ol ayak tolturdu: 'he filled (amla'a) the cup' (etc.) Kaş. II 175 (tolturur, tolturma:k): XIII(?) Tef. toldur- 'to fill' 308: *xiv Muh. VUD tuldur- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of tul-. Xak. XI atlıg anı: tuldurdi: 'the horseman (etc.) collided with him' (şadamahu) Kaş. II 175 (no Aor. or Infin.).

PUD tültür- Hap. leg.; the passage occurs in a list of the unpleasant results of sin; the spelling is quite clear in the MS.; v. l. C. suggests that it means 'to make (someone) dream', connecting it with tül, this is possible only by assuming a homophonous V. and N. of this form, but there is no other trace of VU tül-* or this verb, and no convincing sense is given by assuming that either this word or tuldur- is mis-spelt. Uyg. VIII ff. Man. tüş üze olurup (so read) tültürür (the demons) 'sit on your chest and ?' M II 11, 12-13.

VUD toldra:- Hap. leg.; this verb is listed in a Chapter devoted to disyllables, in a small section containing three other verbs all of which are onomatopoeics; the vocalization is chaotic; in the case of this verb the l and d carry cazms in the Perf. but are unmarked in the other tenses; in the case of the other verbs the third consonant usually carries a kasra, but this seems to be an error. Prima facie a Den. V. fr. toldir*, possibly onomatopoeic 'to clatter away' or the like. Oğuz XI bo:y (mis-spelt to:y) toldradı: tafarraq'al-näs min kull cänib 'the people scattered in every direction' *Kaş. D tilak (d-) Dim. f. of tıl; 'the clitoris'. Survives in SW Osm. dılak and prob. all modern language groups, but the kind of word often omitted fr. dict.; l-w. in Pe., see Doerfer II 925. Çiğil XI tilak mata'u'l-mar'a 'clitoris' Kaş. I 411; (Xak.?) tilak farcu'l-mar'a ditto I 335, 3: Kıp. XVI ff. dilak/tilak (also dilçik) 'clitoris' in several Ar. and Pe. dicta. TTS II 292, 893; IV 217.

D tiliğ P.N./A. fr. tıl; 'having a tongue'. S.i.m.m.l.g. usually w. a preceding qualifying Adj., 'having a . . . tongue'; but tiliğ in some NE languages means 'eloquent' and SW Az., Osm., Tkm. dill 'glib, voluble'. Xak. XI yavla:k ti:liğ beğ 'a foul-mouthed husband' *Kaş. XIV tiliğ/till 'having a . . . tongue' Qutb 179.

VUD tuluk Hap. leg.; the meaning can only be conjectured; the editors suggest a connection with modern words of similar form meaning 'wine-skin' and the like, no doubt der. fr. to:l-, but this is not very plausible; the meaning seems rather 'barrier' or the like, which is a possible meaning for a Pass. Dev. N./A fr. tu-. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. (when a murderer is reborn in hell, the lords of hell lay him face downwards on a surface of red-hot iron) üzesinde yalınlayu turur yoğun tuluklar tegresinde tokıp anıp içinde batururlar 'they fasten thick barriers(?) constantly flaming on the top round him and lower him within them' TM IV 252, 34 ff.

F talka: See tarka:.

D talku: prob. a crasis of *talkū: Dev. N. fr. talk-; survives in NE Tel. talku; NC Kir. ditto; Kzx. talkı; NW Kaz., Nog. ditto 'an instrument for working leather while it is being tanned'. It is difficult to see the semantic connection of the Yak. word with this, but it is connected with the meanings of other der. f.s. Yak. xı anything 'spun or twisted' (maftül mudawwar) is called talku; hence a 'twisted cord' is called talku: yıştğ. Kaş. I 427.

D talğu:ç Hap. leg.; abbreviation of *talk-ğu:ç N.I. fr. talk-; 'a toggle' and the like. Yak. xı talğu:ç 'the name of the piece of wood (al-xaşaba) which is inserted between a package (al-ıdl) and the cord (round it)'; the cord is twisted several times (yufal . . . fatalât), until the cord is stretched (yumadd) and the load secured (yuştadd), so that the package cannot shift (lâ yu'atvwaç) *Kaş. ?E talğa:ğ See tolğa:ğ.

D talkığ Dev. N. fr. talk-; n.o.a.b. Yak. xı talkığ muştadimul-hibâl (so read, MS. cibâl) 'tension(?) of cords'; talkığ ta'wıqu'l-umür 'a business complication' Kaş. I 463.

D talğu:k abbreviation of *talk-ğu:k N.I. fr. talk-; n.o.a.b. Uyğ. viii ff. terkin bês yüz talğuklarığ anutğıl 'quickly prepare the 500 iron nails' U III 47, 9; Yak. xı talğu:k 'the peg (or tang, al-watid) which is inserted in the handle (maqbađ) of a spade or axe, so that the (spade or) axe-head can be secured (yuştadd) to it' Kaş. I 469.

D tolğa:ğ (d-) Dev. N. fr. tolğa:-; lit. 'twisting, something twisted', and the like; Kaş. give three meanings; in the third 'snow-storm' it is vocalized talğa:ğ; this meaning is not found elsewhere, but there is no reasonable doubt that it is the same word in the sense of 'something swirling'. It is possible that the Uyğ. word was a parallel Dev. N. in -k, tolğak:, which would have the same meaning, and most modern forms seem to go back to this word rather than tolğa:ğ; they include NE Şor tolğak; Khak. tolğax; Tuv. dolğak 'twisted, intertwined,' and the like; SE Türki tolğak 'birth pangs'; NC Kir. tolğo:tolğok ditto, and 'the act of twisting; pressing, urgent' Kzx. tolğak ditto; SC Üzb. tölğok 'birth pangs'; NW Kh., Nog. tolğak ditto; SW Az. dolağ; Osm., Tkm. dolak 'puttees'. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. tolğağ (or tolğak?) 'pain, distress', occurs both by itself, e.g. ayığ adalığ tolğağ 'evil, dangerous pain' Usp. 99 II b. 10, and in lists of near synonyms, e.g. İğ kern sıkığ tapığ ada tuda tolğağlarında 'in diseases (Hend.), constrictions (Hend.), dangers (Hend.), and pains' U II 73, 2 (iii) ff.; and in Priv. D talkıt- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of talk-; this must be the correct form, it is the vocalization of the Aor., elsewhere the vowel signs are absent or wrong. Xak. ol anıñ işin talkıttı: 'he urged someone to obstruct ('awwaqa) his business'; and one says ol yükni talkıttı: 'he urged someone to push the load into position' (yuşdimu'l-haml); also used when one orders someone to secure it (bi-işlahihi) with a rod (mirba'a) which is inserted between the cord and the load and twisted (yuftal) until the load is straight (yastaqim) *Kaş. D tolğan- (d-) Refl. f. of tolğa-; s.i.m.m.l.g. with extended meanings; in SW Az., Osm.,

Tkm. dolan- 'to rotate, revolve; to circulate, saunter about', and the like. Uyg. VIII ff. Man.-A kim etöz üçün emğenser tolğansar 'whoever undergoes pain and suffering for the sake of his body' M III 11, 11-12 (ii); Bud. U II 24, 1 (ulın-): *Xak. (bulğan- and) tolğan- Tuh. 26a. 3 (these descriptions should be reversed?).

VUD tolğar- Pec. to Kaş.; the vocalization and etymology of this verb are most obscure; of the six occurrences the first syllable is vocalized tal- six times with the alternative (two vowel signs) tol- once, nevertheless considering the meanings tol- is almost certainly right; the second syllable is -ğur- four times and -ğır- twice. The word can hardly be a Caus. f. since it is Intrans., and the likeliest explanation is that tolğa- is a Trans. Den. V. and this verb an Intrans. Den. V. from tolğ* in which case the correct form of this verb should be tolğar-. Xak. XI köñlüm tolğardı: 'my constitution (nafsi) was almost thoroughly upset (read tatamawvac for tatahawvac in MS.) when it was revolted (laqısat) by eating putrid food' (tolğarur, tolğarma:k): art başı: tolğardı: 'a snowstorm rose (qāmati'l-damaq) over the head of the pass' (etc.) *Kaş. D talkış- Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of talk-. Xak. XI ol maña: uyma: talkışdı: 'he helped me to twist (fi layy) the felt out of which boots are made'; also used of anything that is twisted (yulwā wa yuftal) Kaş. II 207 (talkışu:r, talkışma:k).

XI ol meniñ birle: yuň tolğaşdı*: 'he competed with me in wrapping together (fi ta'mit) hanks of wool'; also used of twisting (fi layy) anything, and also of colic (al-luwi) when it attacks the stomach *Kaş. talım an Adj. used to qualify words for animals, prob. 'predatory', or the like. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. talım kara: kuš 'a predatory (?) eagle' Irkb 3, 43, 51; talım urı: in do. 40 makes no sense and is prob. an error for telım urı: 'many ravines': Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. talım kara kuš in Kuan. 142 (U II 20, 23) corresponds to Sanskrit garuḍa 'a mythical bird, king of the birds and enemy of serpents'; talım balık PP 17, 1 represents Sanskrit makara 'a mythical but dangerous sea monster'.

telım (?d-) 'many', one of the commonest words with this meaning down to XI, but now obsolete everywhere. Uyg. VIII ff. Man. TT III 21, 145 (üküş); Bud. telım is common, both by itself, e.g. nom bitiglerin telım yıgyuk men 'I have collected many scriptures' Hüen-ts. 58-9, and in the phr. üküş telım Suv. 140, 22 etc. and telım üküš U III 40, 28 etc.; Civ. (if an eye) üküş telım yaş aksar 'waters profusely' H I 65; Xak. XI telım al-katır 'many'; one says telım yarma:k 'many dirhams' Kaş. I 397; nearly 40 o.o.: KB méni emgetür tıl idl ök telım 'my tongue very often injures me' 166;

kişide kişi adruki bar telim 'there are many differences between one man and another' 201; o.o. 272, 404, 761, etc.; telimrek 2148; XIII (?) At. telim er kanı 'many men's blood' 142; 3 o.o.; Tef. telim 'many, much' 297; Xwar. XIII ditto 'Ali 52: XIII(?) köp telim 'very many' Oğ. 119, 120, etc.; XIV telim/télim 'many' Qutb 174-6; MN 366; Nahc. 336, 7; Tkm. XIII al-kañir (Kıp. köp/üküş) te:lim Hou. 25, 13: XIV delim al-kañir; and one says bu delim dur 'this is too much', on finding something excessive ('ind istikñari'l-şay') Id. 50: Osm. XIV ff. delim 'many, much'; very common in XIV and XV, once in XVI TTS I 191; II 275; III 177; IV 201: XVIII telim, in Rümi, farāvān wa bisyār 'much, many' San. 160v. 25.

D tilim (d-) N.S.A. fr. tıl-; 'a (single) slice' and the like. S.i.a.m.l.g.; in SW Az., Osm., Tkm. dilim; a l.-w. in Pe.; see Doerfer II 932; cf. tilge. Xak. XI blr tilim et 'a slice (filda) of meat'; also used of anything cut or split lengthways Kaş. I 397: Çağ. xv ff. tilim qāburida 'cut in slices' San. 200r. 29 (quotns.); a.o. do. 198v. 9 (til-) Kom. XIV 'a slice of bread' tilim CCG; Gr.

VU(?D) 1 tulum the only meaning in Xak. is 'weapons, military equipment'; fr. the medieval period onwards the only meaning, except when it is a Sec. f. of tuług, is 'a skin container, inflated skin used as a float', etc. It is, of course, poss. but not very likely that these are two different words. In both cases the word might semantically be regarded as a N.S.A. fr. tol-, but it is consistently pronounced tulum in all the modern languages in which it survives and is a l.-w. in this form and the second meaning in Mong. (Kow. 1855, Haltod 431). The evidence against any connection with tol- seems to be overwhelming, but there is no semantic connection w. tul-. A l.-w. in Pe. and other foreign languages, see Doerfer II 931. Xak. XI tulum al-silāh ism cāmī 'a generic term for weapons (or military equipment)' *Kaş. ?D tilmaç (d-) 'interpreter'; prima facie der. fr. til, but morphologically obscure since -maç is otherwise a Dev. Suff. forming names of foodstuffs; the possibility that it is a l.-w. cannot therefore be excluded, particularly since in a slightly different form it exists in Old Church Slavonic, while in Turkish it is not traceable earlier than KB; the reading tlmçı in U II 19, 9 (Kuan. 127) is a misreading of normçı. S.i.a.m.l.g.; the forms which it takes in Turkish and various foreign languages are discussed at length in Doerfer II

F taluy (?d-) originally specifically 'the sea', later used for any large body of water. A Chinese l.-w. In 'Nachworte zur Inschrift von Tonjukuk' (in Radloff, Die alttürkischen Inschriften von Mongolei, zweite Folge, St.-Petersbourg, 1899) p. 18, Hirth made the plausible suggestion that it represented the Chinese phr. ta 'great' (Giles 10,470) and lei (Giles 6,843 v. the 'water radical' attached). This lei (Middle Chinese lywi i.e. ?lui) was a medieval name of the Sang-kan River in Chih-li (NE China) down which the Türkü advanced in their raids towards the sea in late VII. As they had never before approached the sea they may well have thought that it was the Great Lui River. An early l.-w. in Mong. as dalay (Haenisch 31) perhaps borrowed direct fr. Chinese. The word in Oğ. below and NE, most dialects, talay R III 878 and 'Uv. dalay are re-borrowings fr. Mong. Dis. V. DMR-

VU?D 1 tomur- (of the nose, etc.) 'to bleed'; n.o.a.b. This meaning would be very appropriate for a Caus. f. of tam-, and it is tempting to regard this as a Sec. f. of tamur-, particularly since the word is occasionally so vocalized in Kaş., but there is no doubt that the first vowel was rounded, and a sound change -a->-o- is unlikely at this period even before -m-. Uyg. VIII ff. Civ. kan tomurmakka em 'a remedy for nose bleeding' H I 126, 129 (specifically the nose, in both cases the remedy is inserted in it); a.o. do. 181 (bertin-): Xak. (but see tomrum, tomruş-) unless it survives in NE Tel. tomur- 'to cut through (a log)' R III 1238. The first vowel is uncertain; SW Osm. tomruk 'a bud; a boulder; a lump of wood' seems to be a Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. it, and this, taken with the Tel. V. would point to -o-, but in Osm. 'the rounded beak (of a bird)' is pronounced tomşuk, whereas in all other languages, including Tkm., it is pronounced tumşuk, and this looks like a parallel Dev. N. fr. tumış-, Recip. f. of tum-. Xak. VU 3 taḡ onomatopoeic in the phr. taḡ toḡ; pec. to Kaḡ.? The vowel in the main entry is damma, but see daḡ. Xak. xi taḡ (or toḡ?) toḡ etti 'the heavy thing made a noise (taḡawata) when it fell on a solid object' Kaḡ. III 356; a.o. III 357 (daḡ).

VU 4 taḡ (ḡéḡ) Hap. leg.; the vowel is fatha, but this word comes after 1 and 2 toḡ where damma or kasra might be expected; perhaps a l.-w. Xak. xi taḡ 'any building (binā)' which once existed, of which the superstructure (MS. 'amātuḡu, ? read 'imārātuḡu) has disappeared and the foundations (aḡluḡu) remain as a high mound (tall); it is the foundations of any ancient town (MS. qāḡandar, read quḡandiz) and the like Kaḡ. III 356.

?F 5 taḡ Hap. leg.; almost certainly a l.-w.; 'sieve' is normally éḡgek. Arḡu: xi taḡ bi'l-iḡbā 'with a back vowel', al-munxul 'a sieve' Kaḡ. III 355.

VU?F 6 taḡ occurs several times in commercial documents in Uyḡ. VIII ff. Civ. as a measure of capacity for seed cotton; it must have been a fairly large measure since in USp. 2 the rent of a piece of ground for growing cotton was 'ten taḡ kebez', and USp. 70, 6 (bütḡür-) relates to a transaction involving borrowing four taḡ kebez in the spring and returning seven in the autumn. Perhaps to be connected with Pe. tang 'a donkey load', but this word also means 'half a load', and in this sense looks like a l.-w. fr. 1 teḡ, q.v. It is, however, unlikely that 1 teḡ should be read in these Uyḡ. passages.

1 teḡ (d-) basically 'equal' (to something else), hence 'equivalent' (to something else) and, of the two pans on a pair of scales 'level' (equal to one another). S.i.a.m.l.g.; in NE Tuv.; SW Osm., Tkm. dep. A l.-w. in various foreign languages including Pe. (see Doerfer II 941) where in the forms tang/dang it acquired the special meaning of 'half a load' on an animal's back (i.e. one equal to the other half), hence more generally 'a load, or package'. With these forms and meanings these Pe. words were reborrowed by some modern Turkish languages, e.g. Rep., Turkish denk. While there is no reasonable doubt that the Chinese word tēng was a l.-w. in some early languages, see 2 teḡ, the theory that it was also the origin of this word (see Doerfer, loc. cit.) is untenable since the meanings are quite different. Türkü VIII ff. Yen. yaḡ [ka:]: teḡmi:ḡ sü teḡi: yeti: biḡ oḡlan erti: 'the (size-of) the army which attacked the enemy was equal to seven thousand young men' Mal. 26, 8.; boḡun: teḡin bilir erti: 'he knew the value (?) of the people' du. 2, 3 (both readings very dubious): Uyḡ. VIII ff. Man.-A (the fourth

If you ask why?) nızvanılaray etözke teḡ teḡ tataḡ tataḡ üçün inça küçlüḡ bolurlar 'your passions become so strong because taste is equivalent to the body (?)' M III 12, 17(ii) (in Buddhists terminology 'taste' is the fourth of the six viḡayas, the point seems to be that it is as strong as the body and so may overpower it): Bud. bodisatvamlarñi köḡülü birle teḡ köḡülüḡ bulmaki ertür 'it is acquiring a mind equal to the minds of the Bodhisattvas' U II 48, 12-13; (if when engaged in trading I have cheated) teḡin tarazukin 'with a pair of scales' (measures of length and volume and so on) U II 77, 25; 86, 42; TT IV 10, 4; Suv. 135, 8; (for a ruler) sülli aḡlı kértḡünçli üḡeḡü teḡ kerḡek 'the army, the food supply and faith (or confidence?) are all three equally necessary' TT V 26, 105-6; (all people in the world) bir ikintike tuḡın teḡin körip 'seeing that they are equal (Hend.) to one another' VI 307-8: Civ. teḡ ülüḡlüḡ 'in equal shares' USp. 11, 5; 29, 9; bu borluk teḡince iki borluk 'two vineyards each equal to this vineyard' do. 13, 14; o.o. do. 28, 6 (üleş-); 98, 17 (ülüḡ), etc.: Xak. xi teḡ al-'idl wa'l-qirn 'equal, equivalent'; hence one says teḡ tuḡ al-'adl wa'l-qarin 'an equal, companion': teḡ imkānu'l-ḡay wa mawdi'uhu wa fursatuḡu 'the possibility, proper place, and proper turn of something' (prov., 'if you erect a mill' teḡsizde: fi ḡayr mawdi'ih wa imkānih 'in an unsuitable place and conditions') Kaḡ. III 355; küçl: teḡi: tokıḡı: ḡābara qadr ḡāḡatihi 'he fought as hard as he could' II 103, 26; KB teḡ is common, e.g. (if I bequeath gold and silver to you do not take them to be) bu sözke teḡ-e 'as valuable as this advice' 188; yıparlı bilḡḡli teḡi bir yaḡı 'perfume and knowledge are equally valuable and of the same kind' 311; (there is no one who is) saḡa tuḡ teḡ-e 'Thine equal (Hend.)' 7; teḡ tuḡ 4181; o.o. 186 (altın), 215, 413, 569, etc.: xııı (?) F 2 teḡ a word which seems to mean 'kind, sort' occurs in several early texts. It is plausibly suggested in TT VI, p. 90, s.v. teḡ, that in these passages it is a l.-w. fr. the synonymous Chinese word tēng (Giles 10, 877). The following passages seem the clearest cases of this word, but there are prob. others where it has been mistaken for 2 tağ and thus transcribed. Türkü VIII ff. Man. TT II 8, 58 (oyun): Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. teğ adınçığ erteni yinçü 'various kinds of jewels and pearls' PP 34, 1-2; o.o. of teğ adınçığ do. 71, 5; Kuan. 149.

E 3 teğ a word so transcribed and translated 'marsh(?)' (Brockelmann), 'lake' (Atalay) has been read in a verse in Kaş. I 528, 9-10; it is not vocalized; it is very unlikely that a word with this meaning should be a Hap. leg. Kaş.'s translation of the verse is 'it describes wild fowling and says "when the goose (should be "duck") saw me in that pool (al-ğudar) with a blunt arrow, this bird (the kaşğalak) dived into the water"'. It will be noticed that the last word of the first line (ata:r in the MS.) is not translated. The likeliest explanation is that al-ğudar is a scribal error for al-ğadā and that the verse read tağda: bile: körse: meni: ördek öter: kalva: körüp kaşğalakı suvka: batar: 'the duck seeing me at dawn quacks; the kaşğalak seeing (my) blunt arrow dives into the water'.

t:n (d-) Kaş. has two main entries t:n 'breath' and t:n 'rest', but it is unlikely that the distinction in length is semantically valid since elsewhere 'breath' is consistently spelt t:n (note also that there are two main entries for 'bridle', t:n and t:n). Indeed it is likely that the same word was used for 'breath' and 'rest' (i.e. stopping to take breath). It is significant that this is one of the rare cases of a homophonous N. and V. and that the V. is translated both 'to breathe' and 'to rest'. The two words have therefore been treated as identical. T:n 'breath', sometimes by extension 'spirit, life', survives in all NE languages; NC Kir. (also dim); NW Kaz., Kk. NE Tel. (R III 1342), Khak. also have a word t:n 'silent' which seems to be a Sec. f. Türkü VIII ff. Man. t:n tura tepri 'the God of the Zephyr(?)' *Chuas. 34, etc. (see I tura): Uyg. VIII ff. VU tığ Hap. leg.; meaning doubtful. It has been suggested that this is the basis of tuğla: but this is very dubious. Uyg. VIII ff. Civ. (the clatter of the ten-fold kaş ('jade?') game is heard . . . ; if you break off(?) the game, your property has gone as garlic goes) kaş tıñ teg edğün basdı (?read bezdl) 'your good things have been shaken(?) like the sound(?) of the kaş' TT I 97-8.

t:n: the exact meaning is doubtful; the likeliest is 'halter', or 'leading-rein', but 'bridle' and 'rein' cannot be excluded. Survives in NE several dialects (R III 1360), Khak., and Tuv. (d:n). Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. (then the prince) atın t:nın tartap (sic) 'reining in his horse' UŞp. 97, 3; a.o. do. 20 (ke:rü): Xak. xi t:n al-miqwad 'halter'; hence one says t:n tizğın miqwad wa 'inān 'halter and rein' *Kaş. VU tığ Hap. leg.; exactly synonymous with tık. Xak. xi one says er tığ turdı: intaşaba'l-racul qa'ima(n) 'the man stood upright' Kaş. III 356.

to:n (d-) 'garment, clothing'. S.i.a.m.l.g., in most modern languages for 'outer garment, overcoat'; in SW Az., Osm. don; Tkm. do:n. It has been usual for some years to describe this as a l.-w. fr. Saka ṭawna 'clothing', but it is unlikely that the Turks would have had no native word for 'clothing', and there are difficulties about the initial sound; the resemblance is therefore prob. due to coincidence. *Türkü VIII (tonsız, q.v.): VIII ff. Survives in SW Az. din- 'to speak, say' and Osm. tin- generally used in the Neg. f. tinma- 'to pay no attention, pretend not to see or hear'. Oğuz xi (after I tin-) and the Oğuz when they tell a man to stop talking (nahat . . . 'an'l-takallum) say tinma; this is the opposite (maqlûb) and really means lâ taskut 'do not be silent'; the Turks say tin meaning uskut 'be silent', and if they say tinma; they mean 'do not be silent'; the Oğuz are mistaken (axta'at) in this Kaş. II 28: xiii (?) Tef. tin- 'to speak, reply' 304; Kip. (or Tkm.?) xv natqaqa 'to speak' tin- Tuh. 37b. 4; wa natqaqa is added in the margin beside tanaffasa tin- do. 9a. 10; Osm. xiv ff. din-/dinma-, fr. xv onwards usually spelt tin-/tinma- 'to speak; to keep silence'; common fr. xiv to xvi TTS I 201; II 293; III 191; IV 218: (xvi in the entries of I tin- in Vel. 197-8 söyle- 'to speak' is consistently given as the first translation before diple-; this is an error, the word was not Çağ. in this sense); xviii tin- . . . and, in Rûmî, suxn guştan wa harf zadan 'to speak, talk' San. 200 v. 20.

VUD ton- 'to be closed, fastened', and the like; prima facie Refl. f. of to-; but survives in most NE dialects as ton- R III 1439 in this sense. F tana 'coriander seed', etc.; no doubt, as Kaş. says, an Iranian l.-w. and prob. specifically fr. the Pe. form dâna; interesting as showing that foreign initial d- was devoiced in the languages listed below. Uyg. VIII ff. D tanu: Hap. leg.; Imperat. of tanu:; the phr. quoted seems to mean 'see if I don't', see yamu:. Kaş.'s explanation suggests that he did not understand the grammar of the phr.;

there are several corruptions in the MS. Xak. XI tanu: yamu: (both unvocalized, t- for y- in the second word) 'two particles' (harfân) meaning hattâ tubşir (MS. yaşir); hence one says men barğaymen <tanu> yamu: 'I shall go hatta tubşir, see (if I don't)' Kaş. III 236.

VU toğa: with back vowels but whether -o- or -u- in the first syllable is uncertain. Kaş.'s statement that the word originally meant 'tiger' is not confirmed by any other authority (the evidence in the case of U I 39, 15/IV 8, 15 is not conclusive) and is improbable. If it did, it is odd that the Indian word for 'tigress' was translated tişi bars (a l.-w.) in U III 63, 4-5; Suv. 609, 17. When not used as a component in P.N.s it seems to mean, rather vaguely, 'hero, outstanding warrior', or the like. N.o.a.b. Cf. toğalığ, toğala:-. Uyg. VIII ff. Man. tanu:- this V. presents some difficulties, since it is hard to reconcile its various meanings; there may in fact have been two almost homophonous V.s, tanu:- (d-) 'to suggest, recommend, discuss', and the like, and tani:- (t-) 'to be acquainted with (someone)', the latter not noted before xv. VU?D tançu: 'a gobbet or lump', of meat, earth, and the like. N.o.a.b. See yértinçü. The evidence points strongly towards -a- in the first syllable, but the main entry in Kaṣ. has -o- and the word perhaps occurs once in this form in Uyg. Civ. The suggestion in TT III, p. 26, footnote 5, that this is a Dev. N. in -u: may well be right although the suggested etymology of tançgala-, q.v., is prob. an error, but there is no other trace of tanç-. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. U III 37, 26 ('a lump of earth', ülüş); TM IV 253, 63 (of flesh, ösul-); Civ. yėti tançu 'seven lumps' (of raw and cooked meat) TT VII 24, 9; 25, 10; (a sound rose from the brown earth) tonçudaki (sic) . . . kutrultı 'the . . . in the clods(?) were liberated' TT I 91-2: Xak. xi tançu: (vocalized tonçu:) al-huqna 'a gobbet' I 417; tançu: al-huqna II 16 (kev-); III 392 (şıḡür-): xiv Muh.(?) huqna tançu: Rif. 165 (only; MS. tanhum).

VU tıncı:- 'to be, or become, putrid; to smell foul'. There is some doubt about the first vowel; in the main entry, it is shown twice as -i- and once unmarked; in II 281, 12 it is -o-/u- but perhaps only because the word rhymes with yunçı:-; in III 303, 11 it is -i-, but a philological note is added in which it is given as -a-; and in the Co-op. f. it is three times given as -a-. N.o.a.b. Xak. xi et tıncıdi: 'the meat putrefied, smelt bad' (aşalla) Kaṣ. III 276 (tıncı:r, tıncı:mek); II 281 (1 tatık-); (in a verse) erdem eti: tıncıdi: 'the flesh of good breeding and virtue putrefied' (aşalla) . . . tançadı: its origin was tançga:di: but the -ğ- was omitted owing to the exigencies of the metre; this is in the Oğuz and Kip. languages permissible (cā'iz) because they elide medial -ğ- in nouns and verbs alike III 303, 11 ff. (this seems to be correct, there is no other trace of final -a- in this Verb).

VUD tonçuk- (d-) Intrans. Den. V. fr. tonç Dev. N. fr. ton-, cf. tinç; regarding the first vowel see ton-. ʔE tañçğala-/tañçkıla- this V. has been read in the two passages below, and it was suggested in TT III, p. 26, footnote 5, that it is a Freq. f. in -ğala- of tañç-. Such Freq. f.s do exist in some modern languages, but seem to be unknown in Uyğ. There can be little doubt that this is merely tañçula: mis-transcribed. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. sansız üküş tınığlarığ azığları üze tañçğalayu (read tañçulayu) öñürüp 'killing innumerable people and tearing them to pieces with their fangs' UI 45, 17-18/IV 10, 71-2; (the dying man loses consciousness) öz érinin tañçkılayu (read tañçulayu) 'tears his own lips to pieces' TT III, p. 26, note 5, l. 12.

D töğdi: pec. to Kaş.; morphology obscure, as in the case of öğdi:; comparison with töpre: suggests that it is a Den. N.; töğit- is at first sight a Caus. f. of töğ-, but its Caus. f. töğder- suggests that it was originally töğid- and also a Den. formation; on the other hand töğüş- is clearly the Co-op. f. of töğ-. Neither töğ nor töğ- have survived, and it is possible that originally both existed in parallel cf. tin/tun-, ton/ton-. The basic meaning in any event is 'opposite, upside down'; and the like. Xak. XI KB (that is the way this old world works, that is its traditional custom) kerek öğdi tutğil kerek töğdisi 'either accept its traditional custom or take the opposite' 1547, 4720.

Dis. V. DND-

D tanut- Caus. f. of tanu-, q.v.; with various meanings. S.i.m.m.l.g. as tanit-, properly 'to make (someone) acquainted with (someone else)', but also 'to make (something) known'. Xak. XI ol mağa: sö:z tanuttı: amaranı bi-ışā'i'l-kalām li-ğayri 'he ordered me to convey the command (or recommendation) to someone else' Kaş. II 312 (tanutu:r, tanutma:k): Çağ. xv ff. tanit- Caus. f. şināsāndan 'to make acquainted' San. 162v. 2 (quotns.).

VUD teğit- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of teğ-, q.v.; in the MS. the first vowel is -e- everywhere. Xak. XI er okın teğitti: 'the man launched (a'lā) his arrow upwards in the direction of the sky' Kaş. III 396 (teğitür, teğitme:k, corrected fr. -ma:k).

D tonat- (d-) Caus. f. of tona- Den. V. fr. to:n. Tona-, which is not noted in Turkish before xv, Çağ. San. 185v. 7, but was old enough to become a XIII l.-w. in Mong. as tono- (Haenisch 151), could etymologically have two opposite meanings 'to put clothes on (oneself or someone else)' and 'to strip clothes off (ditto)'. The two early occurrences are both in the latter sense, and the V. survives for 'to rob' as tona- in NE Khak., NC Kzx. and tono- in Kır., and as tonna- (? for tonla-) in Tuv., but NE Şor tona- means 'to dress oneself'. Most of these words have a Caus. f. Xak. XI ol meni: tonattı: 'he dressed me in a garment (albasani'l-tawb) as a gift from himself' Kaş. II 312 (tonatu:r, tonatma:k); its origin is to:n idti: 'he sent him a garment': Osm. xiv ff. donat- (occasionally tonat-) (1) 'to dress, fit out (someone)'; (2) 'to cover with abuse'; (3) 'to equip' (e.g. a ship); fairly common TTS I 218; III 205; IV 237.

D tünét- (d-) Caus. f. of tüne-; 'to put (someone) up for the night'. S.i.s.m.l. in this meaning. Xak. XI ol konukuğ evde: tünetti: 'he put up (abāta) the guest in the house for the night' Kaş. II 312 (tünétür, tünétme:k); xiii(?) At. tünétür tünüñi künüñ kéterip 'he makes your night dark, taking away your sun (or day?)' 15: Tef. Makkani tünetti 'he spent the night in Mecca' 318.

D töğit- (töğid-) n.o.a.b. but see toğta-; for the etymology see töğdi:; as the Caus. f. töğder- means 'to invert' and the like this V. is presumably Intrans. meaning 'to bow down, bend down, move downwards', and the like, başın in the quotns. below being in the Instr. and not the Acc. with Poss. Suff. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. PP 19, 4 (1 baş): Xak. XI er başın töğitti: 'the man lowered (ta'ja'a) his head' (etc.) Kaş. III 396 (töğitür, töğitme:k; spelt töğüt- everywhere): KB yétigen kötürdi yana baş örü töğitti yana yıldırik adğır naru 'the Great Bear raised its head upwards again; Procyon(?) and Sirius(?) moved downwards again' 6220.

E toṅta- has been read in the passage below but certainly mistranslated. The letters to and ṁṣ are quite clear, the slim letter between them is not. It cannot be a front -s/-ṣ- as Radloff originally suggested, both because it would be out of place here and because there is no known V. tosat-/toṣat-. Malov's 1959 reading tokta- is impossible both because there is no room for -k- and because tokta- is a Mong. l.-w. which did not occur in Turkish before XIII at earliest. The obvious course is to read it as toṅit- and take it as an alternative form with back vowels of töṅit- parallel to the Uyğ. form with back vowels of töṅder-. Türkü VIII (when I ascended the throne the Türkü people, who were expecting to die soon) öğürüp sevinip toṅitmiş közi: yügerü: körti: 'rejoicing and being glad raised their downcast eyes and looked up' II E 2.

D tantur- Caus. f. of ta:n-; survives in some of the same languages. Xak. XI ol maṣa: alımn tanturdi: aḥadani'l-dān 'he made (or allowed) me to disclaim his debt' Kaṣ. II 176 (tanturur, tanturma:k).

VUD teṅtūr- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of teṅ-, q.v.; the tā is vocalized with damma in the Perf. and fatha elsewhere. Xak. XI ol kuṣ teṅ-türdi: azcala bi'l-tayr wa bi'l-nabl 'he set the bird, or the arrow, in motion' Kaṣ. III 397 (teṅtūrür, teṅtürme:k; cf. the translation of teṅür-).

D tındur- (d-) Caus. f. of I tın-; survives in some of the same languages, usually meaning 'to cause to rest'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (the prince led the old guide to an island) ötrü tınturğalı sakıntı 'and then thought that he would let him rest' PP 36, 8; bir ödün sönmöz tınturmaz emgetirler (the pains of hell) 'torture him without abating or letting him rest for a moment' TT VI 446-7; a.o. TT X 95 (damaged): Xak. XI ol meni: tındurdi: aḥqa'ani fi'l-rāha wa acanmani 'he allowed me to rest and released me from work'; its origin is the word tındı: tanaffasa 'he breathed' Kaṣ. II 176 (no Aor. or Infin.): Xwar. XIV (VU) tındur- 'to pacify, allow to rest' Qutb 193; tındür-(g)il 'to bring (a boat) to rest' Nahc. 378, 14.

S toṅtar- See töṅder-.

VUD tondur- Caus. f. of ton-, q.v. regarding the first vowel. Survives as tundur- in several NE languages and NC Kır., Kzx. but the semantic connection with the latter is dubious. In Kaṣ. the word is listed among V.s with -ḍ- as the penultimate letter, but spelt in the MS. with -t-. Xak. XI ol anıṣ közln tondurdi: (tonurdi): 'the drug made his eye shut' (ḡaṣṣā 'aynahu); also used of anything which covers (or conceals, satarā) something *Kaṣ. (?) radda al-hāb 'to shut a door' kapıḡ (VU) tondur- Rif. 109 (only; tā unvocalized).

D töṅder- Caus. f. of töṅit-; 'to turn (something) over, to invert', and the like. In Uyğ. the word is consistently spelt toṅtar- (or toṅdar-) although töṅit- had front vowels in that language and this V. has front vowels everywhere else. Survives with the same meanings in NC Kır. töṅkör-; Kzx. töṅker-; SC Uzb. tünkar-; NW Kaz. tünter-; Kk. töṅker-; Nog. töṅter-; SW Tkm. düṅder-. Uyğ. VIII ff. PU taḡa:n the first letter is undotted and unvocalized in the main entry, which immediately follows the heading -N in a list of words containing three consonants of which the second is -ḡ- and the first anything except y-; as for practical purposes b- never precedes -ḡ- in Xak., the word can hardly be anything except taḡa:n. In the second occurrence the first letter is y- but this is certainly an error. The translation suggests that it was 'a hooded crow, Corvus cornix', or 'a jackdaw, Corvus monedula'. teḡri: a very old word, prob. pre-Turkish, which can be traced back to the language of the Hsiung-nu, III B.C., if not earlier. It seems originally to have meant 'the physical sky', but very early acquired religious overtones and came to mean 'Heaven' as a kind of impersonal deity, the commoner meaning in the earlier texts. It was the normal word for 'God' in Man. and Bud. texts and was retained in this sense in the Moslem period, although it is rare in KB, where the normal word for 'God' is ḡayat, and was later largely displaced by l.-w.s like Allāh and xudāy. An early l.-w. in Mong. as teygeri (Haenisch 148, Kov. 1697; but often spelt tyri, as in Turkish, in religious texts and always dēyri in the hP'ags-pa texts). The second consonant is fairly clearly -n- in the facsimile, but in a word which was almost certainly unknown to the scribe this might well be a miscopying of -f-, for -v-; tevrı- would in fact suit the meaning well, if taken as cognate to teviür- although the morphological connection is obscure. Xak. tar- 'to disperse, or divide up (something)', and the like. N.o.a.b. The supposed Sec. f. tara- is rather dubious, and may be based on nothing more than the fact that tara-, q.v., has a vaguely cognate meaning. It is unlikely that there is any real etymological connection between this word and Mong. tarka- 'to scatter, disperse' (Intrans.; Haenisch 145) which became a l.-w. in Xwar. xiv tarğa-, Qutb 171, and survives as tara- in several modern NE, NC, and NW languages, R III 837, etc. Xak. xi beg süs:in tar:di: 'the beg dispersed (farraqa) his army'; also used of anyone who disperses anything *Kağ. tér- (d-) 'to bring together, collect, assemble'; practically syn. w. yığ-, but there seem to be minor differences in shades of meaning in some modern languages, e.g. in SE Türki 'to gather in (the harvest) is yığ-, but 'to gather (berries)' is ter-. tir- (d-) the basis of tirig, tırgür-, tiril-; its exact nature is obscure; as it had a Pass. f. it was presumably Trans. and meant something like 'to bring to life, revive', but in that case the status of the Caus. f. tırgür- with precisely that meaning is obscure. The Kıp. word below looks more like a back-formation fr. tirig than a survival of the original verb. Kıp. xiv tiri- (sic) hayıya 'to live, be alive'; also pronounced with d- Id. 38.

I tur- (? d-) 'to stand', both in the sense of 'to stand upright' and 'to stand still' with various extended meanings. From an early date it was also used as an *Aux. C.i.a.p.a.l.; in SW Az., Osm. dur- in Tkm. both tur- and dur-; as the vowel is short in Tkm., Kağ.'s alternative form tur- is prob. an error or dialect form. Most Turkish grammars and some dicts. discuss the various idiomatic uses of this V. at great length. Türkü viii anta: kalımış: yer sayu: kop turu: ölü: yorıyu: ertig 'those of you who remained there all went to all sorts of countries and stayed or died (there)' I S 9, törü: (törö:) 'traditional, customary, unwritten law'; one of the basic political terms of the Turkish pagan period. It was closely associated with İ é:l and xağan in the sense that it could not exist without a 'realm' as its sphere and a 'ruler' to administer it. It was adopted as a religious term both by Buddhists and Manichaean missionaries in the sense of 'a rule' subordinate to the prescriptions of the true doctrine or religious law, no:m, q.v. In Xak., where it was still common, it meant 'custom, customary law', as opposed to the religious law of Islam (al-şari'a) and prob. also to the arbitrary decrees of rulers. It became an early l.-w. in Mong. as döre/töre. It is not clear whether the form töre current fr. the medieval period onwards, and still surviving in some NW languages including Kar. T., R III 1250, and SW Osm. is a direct survival of the old word or a borrowing fr. Mong. and some confusion arises from the fact that it is homophonous with the word for 'prince' and the like in these and other languages, see tör. Certainly in Osm. its true origin was so far forgotten that in Sami 449 it is spelt tura and described as a l.-w. fr. Hebrew torah. S tarak Sec tarǵak.

D tarıǵ Dev. N. (Conc. N.) fr. tarı-; has two basic meanings (1) 'cultivated land', which is somewhat attenuated in the phr. tariğ tari:-, almost syn. w. tari:-; (2) 'the produce of cultivated land', usually some kind of grain. Survives in NE Khak. tariğ 'sowing', as in spring sowing, sowing area; Tuv. tara: 'crop, grain crop, cereals, millet'. Elsewhere tari in most languages; NC Kir. taru:; SW Az., Osm., Tkm. darı means 'millet'. In modern times confused with Pe. dārū 'medicine, drug', which has come to mean 'gunpowder' and is a l.-w. in the last sense in several languages, usually as tari. This confusion may have produced the d- in the SW languages since tariğla: has become tarla not darla in those languages. Türkü VIII ff. (the black cloud rose and rained on everything) tariğ bişdi: 'the crops ripened' İrkB 53; Uyg. toruğ (d-) (of a horse) 'bay'. S.i.a.m.l.g.; NE Tuv. doruğ; SW Osm. dorur; Tkm. doir; a l.-w. in Pe. and other languages, see Doerfer II 881. Türkü VIII toruğ at 'a bay horse' I E 33; Uyg. IX marima: yüzer toruğ bertim 'I gave my teachers a hundred bay horses each' Suci 7 (this is the likeliest translation, others are possible): Xak. XI toruğ a word applied (yuntalıq) to horses; one says bu: oğlanıç blr: toruğka: aldım 'I bought this slave for one horse' (bi-faras); also used of camels and cattle metaphorically: toruğ (the ra) seems to carry a kasra and perhaps also a damma at al-farasu'l-kumayt 'a bay horse' Kaş. I 373 (it is not at all certain that the first word belongs here, if it does it is used metaph.; it might be a second meaning of toruğ which precedes it, but there is no obvious semantic connection with 1 tur-; the Türkü word above is likely to be the same); a.o. I 338 (2 tom): Kip. D toruğ (d-) Dev. N. fr. 1 tur-; lit. 'standing'; 'a place to stand or stay'. There is obvious room for confusion between this word, which only occurs certainly as below, and 1 turuk, q.v. Uyg. VIII ff. Civ. USp. 36 is a brief report that some sheep and goats had died toruğinta 'in their shelter(?)': Xak. D 1 turuk (d-). Intrans. Dev. N./A. fr. 1 tur-. Morphologically this word, and not toruğ, q.v., must be the earlier form of a word meaning 'place of residence, stopping place', NC Kir., Kzx.; NW Kk. Nogay turak; SW Osm. durak (Az. Dim. f. duracağ) and SC Uzb. turok 'a foot' (in the metrical sense). In the early period it means 'having stood still for some time', hence (of water) 'pure, clear, free from sediment' and, more generally, 'pure'. In some languages it also meant (milk) which has stood for some time, hence 'curds'. Cf. turuldur-. Türkü VIII ff. azu: turuk suv erser opa:yın 'or if it is clear water, I will swallow it' Toyok IIIr. 1-3 (ETY II 178): Uyg. F tarka:(/talka): 'bitter, sour', and the like, lit. and metaph. No doubt a l.-w. fr. some Indo-European language and cognate to the syn. Pe. word talx. In TT III, p. 27, note 39 it is pointed out that in two unpublished Uyg. Man. fragments the phr. açıġ tarka emgek and açıġ terke emgek alternate, which could hardly happen if this were not a l.-w. Uyg. viii ff. Bud. adruk adruk açıġ tarka emgek emgendeçiler 'suffering all kinds of bitter (Hend.) pains' TT VII 40, 25-6; a.o. Szv. 514, 15; Xak. xı tarka: al-hişrim 'unripe fruit'; an alternative form (luġa) of *talka: Kaş. ?F torku: (?torko): 'silk fabric'; one of many words with this general meaning, perhaps a l.-w. An early l.-w. in Mong. as torġa(n) (or torka(n); Haenisch 152), also in Pe. and other foreign languages, see Doerfer II 884. S.i.s.m.l.w. phonetic changes (-k-/-ġ-; -a/-ı/-o/-u). D turġa:k (d-) Conc. N. fr. 1 tur-; lit. 'constantly standing', in practice 'watchman, sentry'. An early l.-w. in Mong. as turġoġ (Haenisch 155), specifically 'the day watch' (the 'night watch' being kebt'eül a Mong. word); also in Pe., Doerfer II 882. Survived until xvii (Abül-Gâzi), but no longer in use. Xak. xı KB künün turdı turġak tünün yatġakin 'he stood sentry by day and at night on the night watch' 608; (the gate-keeper must get up early and take charge of the gate) keçe taġda turġaknı tepretmese 'he must not remove(?) the sentries at dusk and dawn' 2536.

D turkuġ Hap. leg., but cf. turkuġlan-, turkin-; presumably abbreviated Dev. N./A. fr. turuk- in the sense of 'being unable to move for shyness'. Xak. xı turkuġ al-haya' fi'l-amr 'shyness, or diffidence, about something'; one says ol mendin turkuġ 'bold!': > şara minni hayiyü li-fi'l badâ minhu 'he was shy of me because of what he had done' *Kaş. D tarġıl of cattle or other animals, 'striped'; ?Den. N./A. fr. 1 ta:r in the sense of 'with narrow (stripes)'. S.i.s.m.l.g. Xak. xı tarġıl yılki 'any animal with black and white stripes (xuġit) like freckles (al-namiş) on its back' is (called) tarġıl; this Adj. (al-şifa) applies to all animals except horses Kaş. I 482; (under 'the Suff. -l') 'anything black and white or speckled' (al-abraqul-a'ram) is called tarġıl, derived fr. the V. tarıdı: 'the thing was separated' (tafarraqa), as if black and white were mixed (ımtazaça), and then one was separated from the other I 15, 7; Osm. xiv, xvi tarġıl 'spots, spotty, dappled'; in two texts TTS I 679; IV 742.

F tarxa:n (?darxa:n) a title of great antiquity, prob. pre-Turkic discussed at great length (14½ pages) in Doerfer II 879. In spite of his scepticism, Prof. Pulleyblank's theory in 'The Consonantal System of Old Chinese', Asia Major, n.s. IX, 1962, p. 91, that it represents the Hsiung-nu title of their supreme ruler, shan-yü (in Old Chinese dän-γwaj* for darxan) seems the best explanation yet of its origin. Like tëġin it forms its Plur. in -t, tarxat, for tarxa(n)t*. It is likely that in this word the Runic and Uyg. k represented x, cf. the form in Kaş. In Turkish it had ceased to be the supreme title and was not even, like tëġin and şad, peculiar to the royal family, but it was still a high title, and prob. carried administrative responsibilities. In this sense it cannot be traced in Turkish after XI. It became an early l.-w. in Mong. as darxan (Haenisch 32, Kov. 1676) where it meant not much more than 'a person exempt from ordinary taxation', and later merely 'artisan, craftsman'. The occurrence in Çağ. is no doubt a reborrowing fr. Mong. Türkü VIII (in the list of persons to whom the inscription is addressed; my younger brothers, sons, united clan, people, in the east the şadapıt begs) yırya: tarxat buyruk begler 'in the west the tarxans, officials, and begs I S 1; otherwise only a component in P.N.s Inançın: Apa: Yarğan Tarxan I W 2; Apa: Tarxan II S 13; [gap] Taman Tarxan Toñukuk Boyla: Bağa: Tarxan (described as buyruk 'officials') II S 14; the last also in T 6; İşvara: Tamğan Tarxan Ongin 4: VIII ff. türk originally a N. meaning 'the culminating point of maturity' (of a fruit, human being, etc.), but more often used as an Adj. meaning (of a fruit) 'just fully ripe'; (of a human being) 'in the prime of life, young, and vigorous'. ?F terken a royal title slightly inferior to xāğan, often but not always applied to females, and in that case more or less equivalent to 'queen', discussed at length in Doerfer II 889. Survives in SW Osm. türlü (earlier dürlü), Tkm. dürlil; the consistent spellings with -ö- in TT VIII, however, suggest that this was the original vowel; the sound change ö > ü is common in SW. Etymology obscure; unlikely to be a P.N./A. in -lüg; there is no semantic connection with tö:r. It has no connection with the modern word tür, 'shape, form, exterior, appearance, pattern, type', which occurs in several languages in all groups except SW, and seems to be a corruption of the syn. taral-/taril Preliminary Note. Kaş. lists Pass. f. of tar:-, tara:-, and tarı:- which are easily distinguished, although the first and the third are homophonous. So far as modern languages are concerned there are two complicating factors; first some NE, NC, and NW languages have a Sec. f., tara- of tar:- so that in some of them taral- is the Pass. f. of tar:- and tara:-, and some languages have a *Den. D tarım N.S.A. fr. tar-; lit. 'a single act of dispersing'; Hap. leg. as a common N. but familiar as the name of a river. (VU) Usmı: is perhaps the pre-Turkish name for it. Xak. xi tarım 'branches (a'dād) of a river which

S (D) terim a royal title or form of address; a l.-w. in Pe., see Doerfer II 1000. In spite of his scepticism, Pelliot's suggestion that this is a crasis of tegrim, q.v., is the most plausible explanation of this word. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. terim component in a feminine P.N. Suv. 137, 18 (azğan): Civ. kız kelürgüçli iki terim 'the two ladies who brought the bride' *Fam. turma: Preliminary note. This word occurs in Uyğ. in contexts which suggest that it means 'an offering', prob. of food. In this sense it seems to be an Intrans. Dev. N. fr. I tur- in the sense of something which is set before a god. Elsewhere it means 'radish' both in Turkish and Pe. and other languages, see Doerfer II 897. It survives in one or two NW languages; elsewhere it has been displaced by Pe. turp. Doerfer is prob. right in suggesting that, in view of the resemblance between the two words and the impossibility of finding a Turkish etymology for the word in this sense, it is a l.-w.

D I turma: Dev. N. fr. I tur-; lit. 'standing'; 'an offering'. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. TT VII 16 is a fragment of a text prescribing the offerings to be made to various divine personages. Ll. 7-16 listing the offerings to be made to the planets is headed aşları erser 'as for their foods'; these offerings are vegetables and dairy products. Ll. 17 ff. listing similar offerings to be made to the yağsas is headed yağsaların turmaları erser; (and after preaching this sūtra) yavğan turma [gap] egsügsiz(?) yétgürgelli 'offering plain offerings without stint(?)' ¶F 2 turma: 'radish'. Xak. XI turma: al-fucl (MS. fiel) 'radish'; hence al-cazar 'carrot' is called sarığ turma: that is 'yellow radish', and the people of Arğu: call it ğezri: taken fr. the Pe. word for 'carrot', gazar, substituting front vowels (rakkakūhu); the Oğuz call it (VU) ğesür, also taken from the Persians; when they mingled with the Persians they forgot some of their language and used Persian instead (various examples follow) *Kaş. D tarmut Hap. leg. but see tarmutlğ, tarmutlan-; Active Dev. N. fr. tarma- with -a- elided; lit. 'something which branches out'. Xak. D tarma: K Conc. N. fr. tarma-; as that V. is a Den. V. fr. tarım the basic meaning must be 'something which branches out in several directions', but, perhaps because of its resemblance to tırpaq, it sometimes means 'claw', instead of 'a set of claws, a talon' which would etymologically be more correct. Survives in NE Şor tarbak 'leather glove'; Tel. tarmak

'rake'; Khak. tarbak 'forked, branching'; Tuv. dırbak 'nail, claw'; SE Türki tarmak 'branch, offshoot; harrow, grapple'; NC Kır., Kzx. tarmak 'branch'; tırmak 'claw'; SC Uzb. tarmok 'branch, handle; net'; NW Kk., Kaz., Nög. tarmak 'branch (of a river, railway line, etc.); section (of industry)'; SW Az. dirmiş; Osm. tırmık; Tkm. dirmiş 'rake'. Xak. VU?D tarmaz 'a gherkin'; in I 343 spelt turmuż. Unless this is a l.-w. cognate to 2 turma: it is prob. the Neg. Aor. Participle of tar-, lit. 'not branching', i.e. compact, as a gherkin is. Xak. XI tarmaz al-qa'ad 'gherkin' Kaş. I 457; a.o. I 343 (karş).

PUD tarisla- Hap. leg.; there is no doubt that Kaş. meant to spell this word with -s-, it immediately follows the cross-heading -S- and precedes tarusla-, but it is obviously der. ultimately fr. tar-, and it is likely that the -s- is an error by Kaş. himself for -ş-, since there is no known Dev. D tuşal:- (? d-) Pass. f. of tuşa:-; 'to be hobbled' and the like. The only occurrence in Kaş. is dubious, it is in a prov. quoted under tuşan-, and both the actual appearance of the word and the vocalization, where tuşalür would be expected, suggest that it is a correction of tuşanür by a later hand; but tuşal- s.i.s.m.l. Xak. x1(?) arşan kökrese: at ada:kı: tuşalür (sic) 'when the lion roars, the horse's legs are hobbled' (yataşukhal) Kaş. II 146, 26.

D 1 taşla:- (d-) Den. V. fr. 1 taş; etymologically this V. could be either Intrans. 'to go out' (a meaning pec. to Kaş.) or Trans. 'to send out'. In the meaning 'to throw' taşla- (taşla-, tasta-) s.i.s.m.l., but it is an open question whether in this sense it represents this V. or 2 taşla:- in the lit. sense of 'to throw stones'; the two V.s seem to be distinguished in San., but the translation in Kav. clearly suggests that 2 taşla:- meant, in general, 'to throw'. Xak. x1 er taşla:di: ığtaraba'l-raçul 'the man went abroad' Kaş. II 294 (taşlar: taşla:mak): Çağ. xv ff. taşla- (-di) at- 'to throw out' Vel. 169 (quotns.); in one taşkarı taşla- clearly implies an etymological connection with 1 taş; taşla- (t) birün andāxtan 'to throw out' San. 156v. 7 (quotns.). Xwar. xiv taşla- 'to throw away' Qutb 173.

D 2 taşla:- (? d-) Den. V. fr. 2 taş; 'to throw stones (at someone), to stone' and in some modern languages 'to pave (a place) with stones'. D tişle:- (d-) Den. V. fr. tiş (1 tr:ş); 'to bite'. See tişlat-. S.i.a.m.l.g. as the normal word for 'to bite', but some NE, NW languages use ısır- as well or instead; SW Az., Osm. dişle-; Tkm. dişle-. Uyğ. D tuşla- (?d-) Den. V. fr. I tuş-; survives in some NE languages as tušta-/tusta- 'to meet'. Xak. XI men anı: tuşla:dim tahad-đaytulu wa qumtu bi-ñiđāyihī wa muwāca-hatihi 'I confronted him and stood opposite to, and facing, him' Kaş. III 294 (tuşla:rmen, tuşla:ma:k).

D tuşlat- (d-) Caus. f. of tuşla- (tişle-); the Infin. has quite clearly -ma:k, which suggests that in the original MS. of Kaş. all the cognate words had back vowels. S.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI ol anı: tuşlattı: 'he ordered him to bite' (a'adđahu bi'l-sinn) Kaş. II 343 (tuşlatu:r, tuşlatma:k; versc 'he sent a greyhound, ordering it to bite').

In Mong. it is a very high title (Kov. 1551 'vizir, prime minister'; Halhot 389 ditto). The first syllable is certainly t'ai 'great' (Giles 10,573); 'chief minister' is t'ai tsai (Giles 11,490); this might be the word in Türkü, if it was transcribed taysı, but can hardly be the word in Çağ. which looks more like t'ai shih (Giles 9,683) 'chief historiographer' (or 'astrologer'); v. G. (Index to TT I-V, p. 42) suggested that the Türkü word was t'ai tzu (Giles 12,317) 'prince', but this phr. actually means 'senior prince, heir apparent', and could hardly be used in the Plur. Türkü VIII ff. Man. kuŋçular taysılar (or taysılar?) uluğ atlığlar 'the royal consorts, chief ministers(?)', and notables' TT II 8, 64: Çağ. xv ff. tayşı (spelt) in the language of the Chinese (Xitâ'i-yân) دابیر وا ہادیق وا مہیر وا اُستاد 'secretary, expert, master-craftsman', also spelt tayşı San. 167r. 17; tayşı in Mongolian, 'scribe (niwisanda), expert, master-craftsman' do. 261r. 25.

tuzak (?d-) 'trap, snare', and the like. S.i.a.m.l.g.; NE Tuv. duzak; NW Kk. duzak; SW Az. duzağ; Tkm. duzak but Osm. tuzak; l.-w. in Pe., Doerfer II 962. Türkü viii ff. Irkb 61 (İlin-): Xak. xi tuzak al-facc wa'l-hibalatu'llati yuşād bihi 'a trap or noose used in hunting' (verse): tuzak a word (kalima) used by a man to his beloved when he is complementing her (istamlahahā); it is emphasized by attaching -ı; tuzakı: Kaş. I 380; o.o. I 204 (İlin-); 425, 19; I 380, etc. (oğrı:); III 304 (yapsa:-, spelt tuza:k); 358, 25 (tuza:k): KB tuzakka ilinme 'do not get caught in the trap' 4824; a.o. 3637 (2 ağ:); xiii(?) At. 456 (elik); xiv Muh. al-facc tuza:k Mel. 61, 5; Rif. 160 (al-ğalaq 'wooden lock' tuzak: Rif. 179 is an error for yuzak: Mel. 76, 8, a medieval word also occurring in CCI): Çağ. xv ff. tuzag/tuzak dām 'trap' San. 175v. 19 (quotn.): Xwar. xiv tuzak 'trap' Qutb 188. Kom. xiv ditto CCG; Gr.; a.o. under İlin- Gr. 106: Kıp. xiii al-facc tuza:k Hou. 10, 17; xiv tuzak al-şarak 'snare' İd. 63; Bul. 12, 6; xv ditto Tuh. 20b. 12; facc tuza:k do. 28a. 1: Osm. xiv in a verse quoted in TTS II 910 tuzak 'snare' rhymes with tuzak for Pe. dūzax 'hell' (as there is no Turkish etymology for tuzak the possibility of some such foreign origin might be explored, but obviously 'trap' cannot be derived directly fr. 'hell').

?D tuzğu: 'a gift of food given to a traveller', not quite syn. w. ertüt or armağān:. In Turkish n.o.a.b., but a l.-w. in Pe., Mong., and other languages, see Doerfer II 900; its form in these languages makes -u- in the first syllable certain; it is therefore perhaps a Den. N. fr. tu:z, salt being a traditional form of food gift. Xak. xi tuzğu: 'a gift of food-stuffs' (al-hadiya mina'l-ařima) brought to a man who is going on a journey by his neighbours or acquaintances Kaş. I 424; tuzğu: mançu: sēzimmeñ 'do not suspect (lā tazunn) that a gift of food is (intended as) wages for (some) task' (ucrata'l-'amal) I 419, 10: KB (all the workmen came and appeared) tapuğ tuzğu birle neğ ertüt kılıp 'presenting their services, gifts of food and (other) things' 1769: Xwar. xiv tuzğu 'a gift' (said to be of money, but this seems doubtful) Qutb 183 (tozğu).

D tozğak Dev. N. (connoting repeated action) fr. toz-; 'powder' and the like. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. (to me this whole great universe is as unimportant as) İgen tozğakı U III 71, 1; (the Sanskrit original suggests that the meaning is 'the pollen of maize cobs'; İgen is otherwise unknown and may be a misreading of ekin): Çağ. xv ff. tozğak (spelt) 'a spherical fungus the size of a small melon (dastanbuh) which grows in the fields; it has a thin outer skin and its interior is full of a soft powdery substance; when the outer skin is touched it bursts' San. 175v. 22 (i.e. the fungus called in English 'puff-ball').

D tüzger- (d-) Trans. Den. V. fr. tüz; n.o.a.b. See tüzgerinçsiz. So spelt in Kaş. in the Perf. but the Aor. and prob. the Infin. have -gür-, which is the Türkü form. It is unlikely that this is tüzgür- Caus. f. of tüz-, which is itself Trans., and the -ü- is prob. due to labial attraction. Türkü VIII ff. Man. özerin saklanu arıtı tüzgürü (spelt tüzgürü) tutzun[ar] 'let them keep themselves, protecting themselves and guiding themselves strictly' M III 38, 5-6 (i): Xak. x1 men anı:

D tüzgerinçsiz formerly misread as two separate words tüz herinçsiz, and discussed at length in TTIX, p. 20, notes 7-8; X, p. 15, note 96; clearly a Priv. N./A. fr. a Dev. N. fr. the Refl. f. of a Den. V. in -ger-; the suggestion there is that it is a Den. V., more or less syn. w. tübger-, fr. töz:. This is semantically unconvincing; there is no other trace of such a V., while tüzger-, q.v., is well established. Etymologically the word should mean 'without being guided', but in practice it corresponds to Sanskrit anuttara 'unsurpassable'; the connotation is perhaps 'requiring no guidance'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (you came down to earth after the four(?) prophets) tüzgerinçsiz burxan kutın bultuğuz 'you have acquired the unsurpassable majestic position(?) of prophet' TT III 66; o.o. do. 153, 178; IX 8 (habitually spelt tüzherinçsiz in Man. Syriac script): Bud. the word normally occurs in the phr. tüzgerinçsiz (yég or yég üstünki sometimes added here) burxan kutı translating Sanskrit anuttarasamyaksambodhi 'unsurpassable perfect awareness' (or 'knowledge') TT IV 12, 57; V 20, 10; VI 223, 305; X 96; tüzgerinçsiz tuymak 'unsurpassable awareness' VI 137; tüzgerinçsiz burxan yolu 'the unsurpassable way of the Buddha' VI 118.

ka: Preliminary note. Von G. was no doubt right in suggesting in TTT X, p. 47 that ka: in the phr. ka: kadaş is a l.-w. fr. Chinese chia 'family' (Pulleblank, Middle Chinese ka; Giles 1, 139). Kaş.'s etymology of kadaş is therefore demonstrably wrong, and the question arises whether the word ka: 'vessel' was not invented to justify this false etymology. Kaş. is the only authority for the word, and it seems likely that if it really existed it, too, was a Chinese l.-w., but there is no obvious origin for it.

F 1 ka: 'family'; see above. Found only in the phr. ka: kadaş, which is n.o.a.b. The evolution of this phr. into kab kadaş, also n.o.a.b., is odd and perhaps due to the false etymology mentioned above. It should be noted that both elements in the phr. are declined separately. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. ka kadaş 'family and kinsmen' is common, e.g. ka kadaş oğul kız ed tavar 'family and kinsmen, sons and daughters, movable property, and livestock' U III 6, 2 (i); kamın kadaşının do. 36, 35; kaşı kadaşı Suv. 5, 7; a.o.o.: Civ. ka kadaşka tartınguçı bolur 'he becomes closely attached to his family and kinsmen' TT VII 37, 13 (note ka not declined); in the provisions in commercial documents prohibiting relatives from objecting to an agreement one typical list is ëçim inim kam kadaşım 'my elder and younger brothers, my family and relations' USp. 107, 11; 108, 11; 110, 9-10: Xak. XI KB (a man must associate) kab (sic in MSS.) kadaşlar bile 3209; a.o. 3213: XIII(?) Tef. kab kadaşımını (sic) 'my family and kinsmen'; kabı kadaşını 198: Xwar. XIV kab kadaşım Qutb 126.

?F 2 ka: 'vessel, container'; see above. N.o.a.b. Cf. ka:b. Xak. XI ka: al-zarf wa'l-ri'ā 'a vessel or container' but used only for vessels containing liquids; hence one says ka: kaça: zarf wa'ri'ā as a Hend. Kaş. III 211 (followed by a para. on -ka: as the Dat. Suff.); (under tü:des) hence (i.e. by using the Suff. -des) one says kadaş for 'brother, kinsman' (li'l-ax wa'l-qarib); the base is ka: and -daş is attached to it, the meaning is that both relatives come from the same vessel (zarf) that is their mother's womb I 407; a.o. III 238 (ka:ça:).

ki: Exclamation; Atalay in Kaş. III 212, note says that it is still used in Anatolia. Xak. XI ki: exclamation (harfu'l-nidā) corresponding to the (Ar.) yā'u'l-nidā; hence one says ki: berü: kel 'hi! come here'; pronounced with a very long vowel (?); yumadd bayna'l-qāf wa'l-cārr) Kaş. III 212 (followed by a para. on -ki: as an affectionate Suff. attached to terms of relationship, e.g. ata:ki: yā ubayyā 'my dear father').

kop when qualifying a V. connotes comprehensive action; when qualifying an Adj. means 'thoroughly, completely'; when qualifying a N. means 'all'; v. VU(D) kovı: n.o.a.b.; cognate to kovuk, kovğa: which seems to indicate that the first vowel was -o-; morphologically both could be Dev. N.s fr. kov-, but there is no semantic connection. VU?D kowuç Hap. leg.; the -w- suggests that the word is Oğuz; if so, prob. a crasis of kovğuç Dev. N. fr. kov-, meaning lit. something like 'persecution'; the alternative form kowuz, specifically described as Oğuz, looks like the Imperat. of a Caus. f. of kov- used as a Pass. Kaş.'s etymology is, of course, preposterous. Oğuz(?) XI kowuç atar kull sa'fa minal-cinn 'the symptoms of demoniacal possession'; the victim is given treatment (yu'ālac), cold water is thrown in his face, and at the same time the words kowuç kowuç are recited, then he is fumigated with rue and aloes-wood (bi-harmal wa 'ūd); I reckon that the word is taken from the expression kaç kaç 'go away and clear out, evil spirit' (uhruḫ wa firr yā cinni): . . . kowuz alternative form of kowuç; an Oğuz word; hence one says yéi: kowuz bitigi: 'üdatu'l-cinn wa'l-sa'fa' 'an amulet against evil spirits and demoniacal possession' Kaş. III 163.

D kapçak Hap. leg.; Dev. N. fr. kap-; perhaps a crasis of kapışak lit. 'grasping one another', which suits the actual meaning. Xak. XI kapçak 'the place at which the waters from the branches of a river (minal-sawā'id), flow into one another' (yatanātaḫ) Kaş. I 471.

PU?F kıftu: 'scissors'; discussed at length in Doerfer I 318; prob. a l.-w., but as Doerfer points out, no plausible Chinese origin has been suggested. Survives as kıptı and the like in most NE and some NW languages, Yakut kıptıy, Peč. 1403. Most other languages for 'scissors' have (the Mong. l.-w.?) kayıçı. kabak/kapak Preliminary note. Morphologically kabak Dim. f. of ka:b, and kapak Dev. N. fr. 2 kap-* are quite different words. They are still distinguished phonetically in SW Az. (ğabağ/ğapağ) and Osm. (kabak/kapak) but in early texts they are spelt and, in some modern languages, pronounced exactly the same, and it is not always easy to determine which word is intended. Exceptionally, in SW Tkm. 'pumpkin' is sometimes ka:bak, but ğa:bak means 'eyelid' and ğapak 'cover, lid'.

D kabak Dim. f. of ka:b; lit. 'a small container', in practice 'gourd, pumpkin, marrow', and the like (but not 'sweet melon'). S.i.s.m.l.g. except NE(?) w. some phonetic changes. L.-w. in Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1419. Xak. XI kabak al-dubba' waha'w'al-qar 'a pumpkin', that is a gourd which is eaten fresh (rañb) Kaş. I 382 (between two translations of kapak): Çağ. XV ff. kabağ/kabak (with -b-) (1) kadū 'gourd'; (2) metaph. 'a target' (nişāna-nāma) which they fasten on the top of a tall pole and shoot at (quotn.); originally in shooting competitions they put a pumpkin on the top of a tall pole and so the word came to be used for 'target' San. 265r. 14: Kom. XIV 'pumpkin' kabak CC1; Gr.: Kıp. XIII al-qar' wa'l-yaqñin ('marrow') kabak Hou. 8, 11: XIV kabak 'a pumpkin at which they shoot arrows' Id. 68: XV al-qar' kabak Kav. 63, 13; Tuh. 29a. 3. Osm. XIV ff. see Kapak.

D kabarçak, etc.; words of this general form are recorded in forms and with meanings so various that it is at first sight doubtful whether they can all be traced back to a single origin. If they can it must be a Dev. N. fr. kabar- and should mean etymologically 'blister, pustule', and the like. Such a word could be used metaph. for 'the carapace' of a tortoise, and perhaps even for 'box', but it is hard to see how it could have come to mean 'puppet, doll'. The modern words NE Alt. kabırçık; Bar. kabırđzak; Tel. kabırçak R II 451; NC Kir. kabırçık; Kzx. kabırşak all meaning 'fish-scale; mollusc shell; a thin layer (of ice on water, of skin on milk)' seem to be survivals of such a word, but show the unusual sound change -a->-ı- in the second syllable; how old the change is is uncertain, the vowel points in the MS. of Kaş. look like later additions. The situation is complicated by the fact that Mong. koboğor 'hollowed out', hence 'container, case, quiver' (the change in meaning may have arisen from confusion with kobağal kobağo, the Mong. form of kovğa; q.v.)

D kuçak Conc. N. fr. kuç-; 'the bosom, lap', hence by extension 'an armful' and the like. S.i.a.m.l.g.; in SW Az., Tkm. ğucak, Osm. kuçak. L.-w. in Pe., etc. Doerfer III 1432. Xak. xı one says bir kuçak böz 'an armful (ıdbāra) of linen' (etc.) Kaş. I 382: Çağ. xv ff. kuçağ (sic?) ağış 'bosom' San. 283v. 28: Kıp. xııı al-hıdn 'bosom' ku:sa:k (sic) Hou. 21, 5; ditto (after kuç-) kuçak (misvocalized kuçuk) do. 41, 11: xiv kuçak (-c-) ditto Id. 69: xv al-gadd 'package, bale' (i.e. 'armful?') kuşak Kav. 63, 18; ditto kuçak (-c-) Tuh. 21a. 1 (not to be confused in Kıp. with kuşak < kurşa:ğ, q.v.).

?D kuçık 'the constellation Cancer, the Crab'; noted only in KB and the quotn. from KB in Rbğ.; 'crab' is normally yeñgeç, q.v., and this word like sevıt may have been invented by the author of KB as a Dev. kat Preliminary note. Apart from 1 kat and 2 ka:t below kat has also been read as the name of the mythological monster in Xwar. XIII(?) Oğ. 22 ff. This is certainly an error. Sinor has pointed out that thesecriptions are attempts to represent one or other of two Sanskrit words gaṇḍa and khadga or Prakrit forms of them, all meaning 'rhinoceros'. Khadga (prob. in a 'Togharian' form) appears in U III 74, 7 as ktkl and also in the Chin.-Uyğ. Dict. where ch'i lin, usually translated 'unicorn' (Giles 1,044 7,186) is translated kat R II 273; Ligeti 164.

1 kat basically 'a layer' of something, hence 'a fold' (of a blanket), 'a story' (of a house) and the like; thence, on the analogy of a number of layers, 'times' in such expressions as 'so many times'. C.i.a.p.a.l. L.-w. in Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1429. Türkü VIII ff. (a great house was burnt) katı:ğa: teği: kalmaduk 'down to the (ground) floor nothing remained' İrkB 9 (cf. 2 bük); a.o. do. 50 (öçürgü:); Man. on kat kök 'the tenfold heavens' M I 14, 6-14; a.o. Chuos. 42-3 (asra): *Uyğ. 2 ka:t (ka:d) a generic term for 'berry'; survives in some NE languages R II 275 and

Tuv., the particular kind being indicated by an Attributive. Xak. XI ka:t hamlu'l-ıdāh acma 'a generic term for the fruit of thorn bushes'; one says avlıg: ka:ti: 'the fruit of the qurm tree', and (VU) sanççan: ka:ti: hamlu'l-ıdāh; this fruit is crushed and mixed with curdled milk and used to colour tutmaç; in Yeme:k, Kıp., Kay., Tata: it is used for 'the fruit' of any kind of tree *Kaş. kut originally in a rather mystical sense 'the favour of heaven', thence, less specifically 'good fortune' and the like, and thence, more generally, 'happiness'. In KB, where it is regarded as syn. w. Ar. dawla, it came to mean, more neutrally, 'fortune', either good or bad. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually for 'good fortune, happiness', and the like, but in one or two languages, esp. in NE, it seems rather to mean 'soul, life force'. More or less syn. w. kiv, q.v. In two late Uyg. Civ. texts the word transcribed kut is a transcription in TT VII 42, 4 of (Ar.) qırcwat 'strength', and in Usp. 88, 24 of qūt 'food'. Türkü VIII Umay teg ögürm xatun kutıña: 'because my lady mother, who resembles (the goddess) Umay, enjoyed the favour of heaven' IE 31; o.o. IS 9, IIN 7 (üçün); IE 35 (tapla-): VIII ff. in the astronomical texts TT VII 4, 10, 18, etc. kut (and less often töz) represents 'element' in the sense of the five elements, fire, water, earth, metal, and wood: Xak. XI kut al-dawla wa'l-cadd 'good fortune' (Hend.), hence a man is called kutluğ Kaş. I 320 (verse); the basic meaning of dawla is 'change, vicissitude', hence 'fortune' and esp. 'good fortune'; I 163 (I uç-) and about 10 o.o. translated dawla, cadd or baxt 'good fortune': KB kut, which is clearly syn. w. dawlat and is often associated with it, as in the title of Chap. XX (1045 ff.) kut kivilığı dawlat irselliki 'the fickleness of fortune and the untrustworthiness of luck', is very common, commonest for 'good fortune', but 'majesty' is also common; the two are combined in tirilsünl terken kutı mıy kutun 'may your Majesty live in all kinds of good fortune'; o.o. 109 (terken), 456, etc.: XIII(?) Tef. kut 'good fortune' 219: Çağ. xv ff. kut, in *Mong. D kađrak (kađra:k) Conc. N. in -k fr. *kađra-; Den. V. fr. kađır, see kađran-; lit. 'something hard, rough', and the like. Survives as kayrak 'whetstone' in NC Kir., Kzx.; SC Uzb. (kayrok) and several NW languages (cf. bileğü). In NC Kir. it also means 'hard, unirrigated land', and in SW Osm. 'shifting sandy soil', which seems a further development of this concept, but in Osm. it now more often means 'slippery ground', perhaps owing to some confusion with 2 *kađ-. The translation in Kaş. is perhaps influenced by a supposed etymological connection with 1 kat. L.-w. in Pe. and Mong., Doerfer III 1599. Xak. xı kađrak (MS. kađrak ma'ātifu'l-cibāl wa maḥāniḥā 'folds and contortions in the mountains'; hence one says kat kađrak (kađrak) ditto Kaş. I 471; a.o. I 320 (1 kat); Çağ. xv ff. kayrak sang-i faşan 'whetstone', also called bilew San. 281 v. 3.

(D) kuđruk 'the tail of an animal'; morphologically Pass. Dev. N. fr. *kuđur-, cf. kudurgak, kudurgun; the origin of Mong. kuđurğa 'crupper' (Haensch 70, Kow. 919). S.i.a.m.l.g., usually as kuyruk. Türktü viii ff. tiğ at kuđrukın 'the roan horse's tail' Irkb 50; a.o.(?) in a corrupt phr. in do. 16; Uyg. viii ff. Bud. (in a list of constellations) irbiş kuđruki 'the panther's tail' TT VI 93; Xak. xı kuđruk (MS. in the main entry kuđruk, elsewhere usually kuđruk) a generic term for 'the tails' (ađniāb) of all kinds of animals; one says koy kuđruki: 'a sheep's fat tail' (alya); at kuđruki: 'horse's tail' (danb) (verse); kuş kuđruki: 'bird's tail' (prov.): kuđruk used metaph. (yuknā bihi) for 'anus' (al-fağha), so one says kuđruki: ötğen (unvocalized) kişi: insān nabḥacu'l- (first two letters undotted, Atalay's emendation) fağha 'a man who is constantly breaking wind' *Kaş. DIS. V. ĞDR-

VUD katar- pec. to Kaş. and described as the Turkish (i.e. Xak.) equivalent of kaytar-, q.v.; prima facie a crasis of *kađtur- Caus. f. of 2 *kađ- or 2 kađit-, but the second -a- is a difficulty, perhaps a scribal error for -u- caused by a false analogy w. kaytar-; see katart- and katrum-. Xak. xı ol atığ katardı: radda'l-sayl wa şarafahā 'an wachhi 'he turned the horse back and prevented it from going in the direction in which it was going'; similarly one says (ol) yağı: katardı: 'he turned the enemy (etc.) back' Kaş. II 74 (verse); katarur, katarmak; a.o. III 193 (kaytar-); katargañ I 517, 16 (see kaytar-).

D kađır- 'to twist back, turn back' ('Frans.'), and the like; presumably Caus. f. of 2 *kađ-. S.i.a.m.l.g. as kayır- and the like, except SW where kayır- is a Sec. f. of kađğur-. Xak. xı ol anıñ boynın kađırdı: 'he twisted (lawwā) his neck' (etc.); and one says ol anıñ sözün kađırdı: 'he contradicted (or refuted, radda) his statement' Kaş. II 76 (kađırarı, kađırma:k); o.o. I 370, 22; 508, 2; II 74, 13; 164, 14 and I 144, 9, where the text is in some disorder: KB sözün kađra kördüm 'I tried to contradict (or refute) his statement' 6244; xııı(?) Tef. kađra/kayra Ger. used as an Adv. (to turn, send, come) 'back, backwards' 192-4; Xwar. xiv kayra Adv. (of movement) 'backwards'; (of time) 'again, afresh' 128; Kom. xiv 'to take back' kayra/kayrı/kayırı al- CCI; Gr.

D katur- Caus. f. of 2 kat-, 'to harden', lit. or metaph. S.i.m.m.l.g., not NE or SW. Xak. xı ol yumşak neğni: katurdı: 'he hardened (şallaba) the soft thing'; as soft iron is annealed (yudakkar); and one says taş yer anı: katurdı: 'foreign countries (i.e. travel abroad) hardened him', that is made him experienced (mucras muhakkak) Kaş. II 74 (katurur, katurma:k); (katurğa:n in I 516 is an error for katğurgā:n).

D katur- Hap. leg. ?; Caus. f. of I kat-; cf. kartur-. Xak. XI 01 y:ip katturdi: 'he ordered that the thread should be twisted (bi-falı'l-xayt) into the needle'; and one says of talika:nka: ya:ğ katturdi: 'he had the parched grain mixed (acdaħa) with oil'; also used of any two things when they are mixed (xulıfā) Kaş. II 189 (katturur, katturma:k).

D kutar- See kurtğar-.

VU kođur- (MS. kođur-, but between kađır and keđür-) Hap. leg. ?; morphologically obscure. Xak. XI 01 bu: i:şka: kođurdi: 'he took great trouble (cadda) over this affair and made strenuous efforts over it' (bālağa fihi) Kaş. II 76 (kođurur, kođurma:k); the word may also occur in I 144, 7 but is not translated there.

kuđur- See kuđruk, etc.

VUD I kutur- 'to pour out, empty', and the like; prima facie a crisis of kuđtur- Caus. f. of kuđ-; it is, however, odd that it survives as kotar- with the same meaning in NW Kk., Nög, and for 'to dish up (a meal)' in SW xx Anat. SDD 964, since this suggests an earlier form kotor-. Xak. XI 01 unuğ kuturdi: 'he poured (afrağa) the flour from one vessel into another' Kaş. II 71 (kuturur, kuturma:k); ka:b kuturdi: 'he emptied (farrağa) the vessel of its contents' II 164, 16; kuturmuş ka:b: 'an empty (mafrüğ) vessel' II 170, 6; KB sevinçin tolu tut sakınçın kutur: 'keep his joy full and pour away his anxiety' 117; a.o. 1455: Kom. XIV 'to pour out, empty' xotar- CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIII ǵarafa 'to dish up' (VU) kotir- Hou. 34, 5; xiv ǵarağa (VU) kořar- (the vocalization is chaotic and partly lacking, but this seems the likeliest) *Bul. 29r.: xv ǵarafa'l-ǵāam (VU) kotar- Kav. 74, 17; Tuh. 27a. 1; Osm. XIV to xvi (VU) kotar- (1) 'to empty'; (2) 'to dish up'; in several texts TTS I 487; III 479; IV 543.*

(D) 2 kutur- 'to be excessive, exceed reasonable limits' in various applications. Morphologically obscure but cognate to kutuz. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually 'to rave, be mad', and the like. Cf. Doerfer III 1439. Uyğ. viii ff. Man. övke nizvani üze kuturup: 'suffering from the passion of anger to excess' TT III 29-30; Xak. oğla:n kuturdi: 'the boy was light-hearted and persisted in his wantonness' (riřtāha . . . wa lacca fi mucūnīhi); and one says tarıǵ kuturdi: 'the crop, vegetation, etc. thrived' (zakā), originally (it meant that) something 'exceeded its due measure' (cāwaza 'an miđdārihi) Kaş. II 74 (Aor. omitted, kuturma:k); kuturma: lā ta'du řawrak: 'do not behave outrageously' I 508, 3; xiv Muh. (?) batrān 'pert, overbearing', and the like kuturmuş Rif. 149 (only): Çağ. xv ff. kutur- (spelt, 'with -u-') diwāna řudan 'to be mad'

Saħ. 282r. 27 (quoton.); kudur- ('with -u-') same as kutur- 284r. 3 (quoton.): Kom. xiv 'to be overbearing' kutur- CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIII al-kalab 'hydrophobia, rabies' kuřurmak Hou. 33, 4.

D kađirt- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of kađır-. Xak. XI 01 anıǵ boynun kađirtti: alwā 'unuǵahu: 'he had his neck twisted' Kaş. III 431 (kađirtur, kađirtma:k).

D katart- (?katirt-) Hap. leg.; vocalized as below; Caus. f. of katar- which was perhaps really katir-. Xak. XI 01 atıǵ katartti: 'he ordered that the horse should be turned back' (bi-radd) Kaş. III 430 (katirtur, katirtma:k; sic).

D kađırıl- Pass. f. of kađır-; 'to twist' (Intrans.); to be twisted (Pass.). S.i.a.m.l.g. usually as kayrıl-/kayırıl-. Xak. XI anıǵ bo:ynı: (mis-spelt bo:ynni); kađırıldı: 'his neck twisted' (iltawā), also used when it is twisted by someone else (alwāhu ǵayruhu); Intrans. and Pass. (yata'addā wa lā yata'addā) Kaş. II 235 (kađırılur, kađırılma:k); Kıp. xv lawā kayrıl- (and mayrıl-) Tuh. 32a. 12.

VUD I kutrul- Hap. leg. ?; Pass. f. of I kutur-. Xak. XI su:v olma:dın (MS. alma:dın) kuřruldı: 'the water (or any other liquid) was poured (uřriğa) from the jar' Kaş. II 234 (kuřrulur, kuřrulma:k).

S 2 kutrul- See kurtul-.

D kađran- Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of kađra-, which s.i.a.m.l.g. except SW as kayra-/kayıra- 'to whet, sharpen' and, less often, 'to gnash the teeth'. See kađrak. Xak. XI beg aǵar kađrandı: 'the beg was furious (harida) with him and his conduct and dealings with him were harsh' (asura) Kaş. II 249 (kađranur, kađranma:k; these two with -d-); a.o. II 267 (kađırılan-).

D katrun- Refl. f. of katar-, lit. 'to turn oneself back'. The form suggests that the basic V. must have been katir- or katur-; n.o.a.b. Uyğ. viii ff. Bud. (when he saw the demons King Cařtana) yürekın katrunup (assumed the form of the chief of the warriors) *U IV 8, 15; v. G. translated 'steeling his heart', implying a Refl. f. of katur-; this may be right, though the word would be Hap. leg., but the narrative implies some change and 'changing his mind' seems likelier. Xak. XI küler: er katrundı: 'the laughing man stopped himself' (laughing; imtañā); its origin is changing one's mind about something (al-harrān fi'l-amr); hence one says ol maǵa: yarmak: bérür erke:n katrundı: 'he was giving me money (etc.) and then changed his mind and refrained' (harına wa'mtañā minhu) Kaş. II 249 (katrunur, katrunma:k).*

(E) kuřrar- Atalay lists this as a Xak. word, but in fact Kaş. II 199, 21 ff. says that 'to save' might perhaps logically be kuřrar- but is in fact kuřğar- (kurtğar-) because kuřrar-, particularly in the Aor. kuṭrarur would have had too many rs in it.

D kaḍriş- Recip./Co-op. f. of kaḍır-; both forms Hap. leg. Xak. XI ol meniñ birle: boyun kaḍrişdi: 'he competed with me in twisting (fī layy) necks' (etc.); and one says ol ikki: söz kaḍrişdi: 'they two contradicted (or refuted, radda) one another's statements' Kaş. II 218 (verse; no Aor. or Infin.); olar ikki: boyun kayrişdi: 'they two competed in twisting necks' (etc.) III 194 (kayrişur, kayrişma:k).

VUD 1 kuṭruş- Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of I kuṭur-. Xak. XI ol maña: ka:b kuṭruşdi: 'he helped me to empty (fī ifrāğ) the vessel' (etc.) Kaş. II 218 (kuṭruşur, kuṭruşma:k).

D 2 kuṭruş- Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of 2 kuṭur-. Xak. XI oğlan kuṭruşdi: 'the boys played and enjoyed themselves' (la'iba . . . wa naşatū) Kaş. II 218 (kuṭruşur, kuṭruşma:k).

VUD koḍuru: Ger. of koḍur- used as an Adv. qualifying V.s and less often Adjs.; properly 'energetically, vigorously' and, more vaguely, 'extremely'. Pec. to Uyğ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. munça koḍuru inçıklayū 'lamenting so vigorously' U III 35, 27; a.o. 22, 17; koḍuru tıñlap 'listen attentively' TT VI 383; Kuan. 176; koḍuru tañlançığ erürler 'are extremely marvellous' Suv. 348, 3; o.o. U II 7, 6 etc. (kolula:-).

VUD koḍurçuk Hap. leg.; Dev. or Den.(?) N. origin obscure; al-kayd is normally an A.N. meaning 'cunning, deceit', and the like, but must here be a Conc. N. meaning 'doll'. Cf. kabarçak. Xak. XI koḍurçuk 'a doll' (al-kayd), and is models in the shape of people (tamāñil 'alā şirātī'l-nās) which girls make to play with Kaş. I 501.

PUD kuḍurçak Hap. leg.; this word appears in a section headed fa'al al of words containing five consonants of which one is -w- or -y-, e.g. buğayuk, sarkayuk but is spelt kudu:çak or kuru:çak; the meaning suggests that it is a Dev. N. fr. kuḍurçak, and the text perhaps originally had kuyurçak. Xak. XI kuḍurçak(?) al-'uşuş 'the tail-bone, coccyx' Kaş. III 179.

D kaḍırğak Hap. leg.; Dev. N. (connoting repeated action) fr. kaḍır-, lit. 'something constantly twisted, or wrinkled'. Xak. XI kaḍırğak maclu'l-yad minal-'amal 'a blister on the hand caused by manual labour' Kaş. I 502.

D kuḍurğak Pec. to Kaş.; Dev. N. fr. kuḍur-. Xak. XI kuḍurğak aḥad zaylayi'l-gabā xalfa(n) 'one of the two skirts of a robe at the back' Kaş. I 502; a.o. I 17, 3.

PUD kaḍırğam perhaps Dev. N. (connoting repeated action); since both in the Brahmi texts and Uyğ. script the same letter is used for t and ḍ it is uncertain whether it is derived fr. katır- or kaḍır-, both of which are semantically possible. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII see kaḍır: Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Sanskrit koṣāṭaki a kind of tree, Trichostanum dioeca TT VIII A.39 (spelt kāṭrīḡan): xiv Chin.-Uyğ. Dict. luai 'Sophora japonica, a kind of acacia' (Giles 5,028) R II 327; Ligeiti, p. 159 (transcribed ha-ti-ēr-han ?kaḍırğan or -kan).

PU katturğan See kakurğan.

D kuḍurğun N.o.a.b. Pass. or Intrans. Dev. N. fr. kuḍur-; 'crupper'. Xak. XI kuḍurğun tañaru'l-sarc 'the crupper of a saddle' Kaş. I 518; a.o. I 17, 6.

D katırılığ Hap. leg. ?; P.N./A. fr. katır. Xak. XI katırılığ er 'a man who owns mules' (bağl) Kaş. I 494.

D kuṭurma: Hap. leg.; Pass. Dev. N. presumably fr. 2 kuṭur-; the cap in question may be that worn by high Uyğ. dignitaries with vertical peaks described by v. G. in 'Die Dreizack-Kappe uigurischer Würdenträger', UAF 36 (1964), p. 331. Xak. XI kuṭurma: bōrk 'a cap which has two peaks (or flaps, canāhā, lit. 'wings') in front and behind' *Kaş. D kaḍırlan- Refl. Den. V. fr. kaḍır; survives in NE Sag., Şor, Tel. kazırlan- 'to rage, to be angry' R II 380. (Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. this word has been misread for katığlan- in U II 46, 58, see kın-; Xak. F xağan a title of great antiquity taken over by the Türkü in the specific sense of 'an independent ruler of a tribe or people'. Its earlier history is discussed by Pulleyblank in Asia Major IX, Part 2, pp. 260 ff. It is first noted in an immediately recognizable form as a royal title of the Juan-juan and T'u-yü-hun round about A.D. 400, but Pulleyblank believes that a Hsiung-nu royal title hu-yü (Ancient Chinese ywax-ywāy) mentioned in connection with events at the end of the 1st century B.C. is an earlier Chinese transcription of the same word. In Türkü and Uyğ. texts it is habitually transcribed kağan, but as both x- and k- would have been represented by the same letter in these texts it was almost certainly xağan. The relationship between it and xan, which is practically syn. w. it, is obscure; the two cannot morphologically be connected in Turkish but may have been alternative forms in the languages from which they passed to Turkish. It became an early l.-w. in Mong. as kağan/ka'an (Haenisch 54-6) and re-entered Çağ. in the latter form. It was Arabized as xāqān at an early date and in that form remained one of the imperial titles until the dissolution of the Ottoman Empire. Türkü VIII xağan is very common; it is normally used of the Türkü ruler himself, but also of the Emperor of China, tavğaç xağan I N 12, the King of Tibet Tüpüt xağan I N 12, and junior members of the royal family installed as the rulers of subject Turkish tribes, Türgeş xağan, Kırkız xağan I N 13: Uyğ. VIII xağan was the title assumed by Uyğ. rulers when they became independent in A.D. 742 Şu. I N 1, etc.: VIII ff. Bud. adınçığ idük xağan xan sıslı 'the army of our elect, sacred ruler (Hend.)' TT VII 40, 123-4: xiv *Chin.-Uyğ. ?D ka:ğun 'melon'. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE with great phonetic variations, but usually as kavun/kawun; morphologically could be a Dev. N. fr. ka:ğ- but except for xa:tu:n, which is a l.-w., this seems to be the only Turkish word with two long vowels, and it is perhaps also a l.-w. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. koğuş Preliminary note. Prima facie this word is a Dev. N. in -uş, but there is no trace of koğ-*, and even if this was taken to be an alternative form of kov- there is no semantic connection. Equally it seems impossible to find a common basis for the two meanings of the word.

2 ka:n See xan.

F xan a title at first practically syn. w. xağan, q.v., but later used mainly for a subordinate ruler; for the etymological connection between the two see xağan. There is no reasonable doubt that the original and normal pronunciation was xa:n. An early l.-w. in Mong. (Haenisch 59, Kow. 718); no longer a royal title, but still used as a title of honour in many Moslem countries, not all Turkish-speaking. Türkü VIII xan does not occur in I or II, but occurs six times in T in contexts where xağan, which also occurs in T, might have been expected, e.g. (the Türkü people) xan:n bulmayın 'because they had no xan of their own' (parted from the Chinese and appointed a xan; then) xan:n kođup 'abandoned their xan' (and submitted again) T 2: VIII ff. xan olu:rupan 'a ruler, taking the throne' Irkb 28; o.o. do. 34, 63; Man. él(ı)ıgler xanlar 'kings and rulers' M III 19, 14; él(ı)ıg Böğö Xan 'king Böğö Xan' TT II 6, 33; a.o. do. 10, 88; Yen. Tüpü:t xanka: 'to the king of Tibet' Mal. 29, 8; Kara: Xan do. 30, 4; 37, 1, prob. the eponymous founder of the Karakhanid dynasty; a.o.o.: Uyg. VIII xan occurs six times in Şu. referring to foreign rulers, including Tavğaç xanı 'the Emperor of China' W 3: IX xanka: tap 'serve (your) ruler' Suci 9; a.o. do. 1: VIII ff. Man.-A uluğ él(ı)ıg teprı xanı Ezrwa 'Zurván the great king, the ruler of the gods' M I 25, 32; Kaşu xanı 'the ruler of Kaşu' do. 27, 6; Chr. él(ı)ıg xan Maşıxa teprıke 'to the divine king (Hend.) the Messiah' U I 6, 16-17; a.o. do. 7, 2; Bud. erklıg xan lit. Dict.* chün 'ruler, prince' (Giles 3, 269) xan Liğeti 161: Xak. xi xa:n al-malıku'l-a'zam minhum 'their (the Turks') supreme ruler'; anyone who is descended from Afrāsiyāb is given this title, wahu'l-xa:kā:n; both the long and the short forms are used Kaş. III 157; over 20 o.o. translated al-malik: Çağ. xv ff. xan means 'emperor' (pādīşāh) and for this reason they call the emperors of the Turks xan; since the Sultans of Rüm are descended from the Türkmen people (él) they call themselves xan; after they captured Arabıstān and the Hıjāz they added to xan the title of sultān, which means 'emperor' in Ar. Now in Persia governors and notables of the realm (hukkām wa a'yān-i dawlat) are called xan; there can be no other reason than this for the fact that when the Sultans of Rüm as a sign of respect for their own amırs and notables gave them an imperial (pādīşāhi) title they called them paşa which is a shortened form of pādīşāh. After the empire of İrān passed to the Şafawı dynasty they too, contrary to the wishes of the Sultans of Rüm, called the notables of their realm xan and lower placed persons sultān. After the Sultanate of Hind passed to the house of Gurgān they called themselves pādīşāh, and the notables and chiefs of the realm they distinguished by the title of xan San. 222v. 1: Kom. xiv kan/xan 'emperor' CCI; 'king' CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIII (in the list of Proper Names) temür xan 'iron king' Hou. 30, 7; xiv kan ('blood', also used for) al-malıh Id. 74: xv sultān kan Tuh. 18b. 8; malik kan do. 32b. 3; 41b. 6.

1 kağ 'father'; the oldest Turkish word in this sense; it was gradually displaced in Uyg. by ata: q.v. and did not survive into Xak. although kağdaş, kağsık did. Cf. 1 öğ. Türkü VIII kağ is common in I and II, e.g. kağım Eterış Xağan IE 11, IE 10: VIII ff. öğ:ne: kağ:pa: tegü:rmı:ş 'it brought him to his mother and father' Irkb 35; o.o. do. 58 (2 ö), etc.: Uyg. VIII kağım xağan Şu. N. 12: VIII ff. 2 kağ onomatopoeic; ?Hap. leg. Xak. xi ka:z kağ ettı: 'the goose (Kaş., in error, 'duck') made a noise like that' (şawwata ka-dälıka); it is an onomatopoeic for any such sound Kaş. III 358.

1 kın 'sheath, scabbard'. S.i.a.m.l.g.; although Kaş. lists both kın and kın, the second form, which survives in SW Tkm., was no doubt the original one. Uyg. VIII ff. Bud. kınının yitli bıçekın [artıp] 'drawing his sharp knife from its sheath' U III 64, 9; Xak. xi kın cıfınu'l-sayf wa'l-sıkkın 'the scabbard of a sword and (sheath) of a knife'; one says kılıç kını: (sic) 'sword scabbard' *Kaş. restored as cafir 'sheath (kın; cāfi 'thick') kalin.

2 kın (kı:n) 'punishment, torture', and the like; the variations in spelling point clearly to an original form kı:n, cf. 1, 2 ko:n. Survives in NW Kaz. kıyn 'punishment' R II 718 and prob. NC Kir., Kzx.: NW Kk., Kumyk, Nog. kıyn 'difficult, embarrassing, complicated'. E kın in the phr. kıy közin in U IV 38, 128 is no doubt an error for kıyır, as suggested in a note thereon; the supposed Instr. form kıyn quoted therein is no doubt a misreading of that word.

1 ko:n generically 'sheep', and specifically 'ewe'. One of the animals of the 12-year cycle. An early l.-w. in Mong. as kon(n) (Haeusch 66). 2 ko:n* 'bosom' and the like; does not survive in this form, but the close parallelism between the later forms of this word and 1 ko:n strongly suggest that it, too, must originally have been ko:n; the earliest recorded form koy seems to exclude the possibility that it was originally ko:dn* *Dev. VU?F xu:n Hap. leg.; an unusual form, perhaps Persian xūn 'blood' used metaph., but not described as Oğuz, which is the language most likely to have such a l.-w. Xak. XI xu:n iş al-amru'llađi lā rişq fihī 'an action with no

koş survives in NC Kır./Kzx. koş/koş eti 'the thick part of the thigh'; there is also a Kır. phr. koş karğa 'rook'; the connection between the two meanings is not obvious. Xak. (D) kani: See kañu:.

kañu: (1) Interrog., 'which? what?'; (2) Indefinite 'some' and the like; with other Interrog. functions in oblique cases. The word is cognate to kaç, kaçan, kalı, kaltı, kanı; and the whole group seems to go back to an earlier stage in the language when different Suffs. were in use. kañu: became kayu: at a fairly early date, but the oblique cases, which, except kañça:, are included here, retained -n- side by side with -y- much longer, the two alternating in a most confusing fashion. D kana:- Den. V. fr. kan:; originally Trans., 'to bleed (a patient, animal, etc.)'. An early l.-w. in Mong. as kana-, also Trans. (Haenisch 59, Kow, 719). In the medieval period it became Intrans., the Caus. f. kanat- being used as Trans.; the first signs of this transition are in Kaş., q.v. D kaniğ n.o.a.b.; prima facie a Dev. D konak/konuk (konok) Preliminary note. *There is no reasonable doubt that etymologically the words meaning 'millet' and 'guest' and the like are identical, both representing an Intrans./Pass. Dev. N. fr. kon-, in the first case in the sense of 'something planted in the ground'. Both became early l.-w.s in Mong. as konok (konog) (Haenisch 66, Kow. 868), and survive in the same forms in modern languages, but it is more convenient to list them separately.*

D I konak (konok) some sort of cereal, originally 'millet', of which there are several kinds, but now sometimes used for other sorts. The normal Ar. word for 'millet' is al-duxn (see üyür, tarığ), al-cāwars is a l.-w. fr. Persian gāwars, also 'millet', perhaps of a different kind. Survives in NE Tuv. xonak 'Timothy grass'; SE Türki konak 'maize'; NC Kır. konok 'Italian millet' (in some places 'maize'; sorghum'); SC Uzb. künok ditto; NW Kk. konak 'a particular kind of millet'. kir Preliminary note. There are two common words of this form meaning respectively 'high ground' and the like, SW Tkm. Ğir, and 'grey', Tkm. Ğir: Kaş. gives two other meanings which can hardly be connected with either word. In a number of modern languages kir also means 'edge', see R II 733, but this may be an extension of the first meaning.

1 kir originally 'an isolated mountain or block of mountains'; in this sense and more generally for 'high ground' s.i.a.m.l.g., but in some languages, including NW Nog., SW Osm. it hardly means more than 'plain, steppe, wilderness' without any connotation of height. L.-w.

in Mong. kira (Kow. 2546) and Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1598. Xak. x1 kir al-hağba mina'l-cibâl 'an isolated mountain' Kaş. I 324; (you have crossed . . .) kir:ar ediz be:diik al-atwâda'l-ğum 'the high, lofty mountains' I 94, 3; (the clouds) kirka: kođtı: ol karin 'deposited snow on the mountain' (li'l-cabal) III 39, 14: KB 69, 96 (opri): xiv Muh. al-su'ud 'rising ground' kir ağış Mel. 74, 11; Rif. 177: Çağ. xv ff. kir (1) bulandı sar-i küh 'a height, the top of a mountain' (quon.) (2) the Turks of Kaşğar use it for bulandı-i hanâr-i kardü which is an expression for marad 'illness' (meaning uncertain, lit. ?'the height of the edge of a knife' (?reading kardü)) San. 295r. 4: Xwar. xiv kir occurs three times; (this world is like) kararmış kir 'mountains which have become dark'; (sometimes admiring her) kir teğ karakın 'eyes like ?'; kirđın kar 'snow from the mountains' Qutb 148: Kıp. XIII (between 'heaven' kök and 'sun' kün) al-falak kir Hou. 5, 2 (al-falak should here mean 'firmament', but there may be some confusion with its rarer meaning 'a rounded hill'): xiv kir ra'su'l-râbiya 'the top of a mountain'; and in Kıp. (sic) al-arđu'l-şahşâh 'level ground' Id. 70; al-arđu'l-şahşâh kir Bul. 3, 8: xv in Tuh. 7a. 12 kir is inserted in the margin opposite to barriya 'desert, waste ground': Osm. XVIII kir . . . (3) and, in Rümi, biyâbân-i bi-âbi 'waterless desert' San. 295r. 6.

2 kir (?kir) 'grey' and the like, particularly as the colour of a horse's coat. Survives in NE Koib., Sag., Şor kir R II 734; SW Az. ğir; Osm. kir; Tkm. ğir: L.-w. in Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1596. 3 kir Hap. leg., unless this is merely an extended meaning of 1 kir. Xak. x1 kir al-'arim wa'l-musannât 'a dam' (Hend.) Kaş. I 324.

4 kir Hap. leg. Xak. x1 kir yağı: al-'adiwu'l-mukâşih 'an enemy who bears a secret grudge' Kaş. I 324.

1 kor 'loss, damage', and the like. 2 kor: apparently both 'the residue of sour milk used to make yoğurt' and '(baker's) yeast, leaven'. 2 kur meaning rather indefinite, basically perhaps 'rank' (as in 'high rank') and 'stage' (one of a number), hence 'a line, a course of brick-work', and the like. In texts like KB it is easily confused with 1 kur, and some of the medieval translations are hard to fit into this framework though they seem to belong here. Survives at any rate in SE, SW. Cf. kurdaş-. Üyğ. viii ff. Bud. (faith is the primary requirement) kut bulmış tüzünler kurınta kezginte barmaknıñ 'of the progress of good men who have found divine favour through the various stages (of existence)' TT V 20, 6; (if they intend to embark) burxan kutılığ (sic) kurka kezıgke 'on the stages (leading to the blessed state of Buddha)' do. 22, 25: Xak. xi kur al-martaba 'rank'; hence one says menliñ kurım uluğ 'I have a high (aşima) rank'

?S 3 ku: this might be an unusual abbreviation of kurug as Kaş. suggests; but it is more prob. that it was inferred to provide a (false?) etymology for ku:rbaka, q.v. Oğuz xi ku: al-yābis 'dry'; an abbreviation of kurug; prov. ku:lan kuduğka: tüsse ku:rbaka: ayğır bolur 'if a wild ass falls into a well, the land frog (al-ğifda'u'l-barri, i.e. toad?) becomes a stallion' Kaş. III 122: xiii(?) Tef. (wherever that fish went) kurug yol 'the dry road' (behind him disclosed him . . . they went after him) kur yérde 'on dry land' 217 (perhaps a simple graphic error).

F kara- 'to look at', exactly syn. w. bak-. This common Mong. There is no reason to suppose that it is a native Turkish word and the base of 1 karak. Karak, translated 'looking at him', was read by R in USp. 97, 3, but is certainly one of several mistranscriptions in this text. ?F karwı: n.o.a.b.; there is hardly any doubt that Kaş. is right in describing this as an Ar. l.-w. Xak. xi karwı: ya: al-qawu'l-fucwâ 'a recurved (i.e. unstrung) bow'; and one says karwı: kaşlığ kiş: 'a man with arched (azacc) eyebrows'; this agrees with Ar. because al-qarw is the word for anything curved (muqawis) (Ar. quotn.) *Kaş. PU?C kırba:s Hap. leg.; this word is deliberately listed under final -s, preceding the cross-heading -Ş, but it must surely be an error for kırbaş compounded of 2 kır and 1 baş 'grey-head'. Kaş. xi kırba:s er 'a man whose hair is falling out, and thin not thick' (yatanâtar . . . fa-yasiff wa lâ yakattı) *Kaş. D kurtğar- 'to rescue' and the like. Obviously cognate to kurtul- 'to be rescued', q.v.; the latter is a quite regular Pass. f. of kurt-; but -ğar- is not a regular Caus. Suffs. in II 199 it is said that the -ğ- is introduced for the sake of euphony and that if this had not been done the word would have been kut-rardı; the basis of this statement is obscure but it may indicate that Kaş. was aware of the form kurtğar-: XIII(?) Tef. kurtar-/kutkar-/kutar- 'to rescue' (from sorrow, misfortune,

2 kurt (kurd) 'wolf'. A purely Western (Oğuz) word, early occurrences clearly representing Oğuz elements in the languages concerned. It is not clear whether both this and I kurt go back to some more general word for 'an unpleasant creature', or whether I kurt was given this additional meaning in Oğuz for some unknown reason, or whether the words are entirely independent from one another. Survives only in SW Az. ğurd; Osm. kurt (kurd- before vowels); Tkm. ğurrt (? a false long vowel). Oğuz XI Kaş. karğa: properly 'crow', but sometimes also used for other large black birds like 'rook' and 'raven'; an old animal name ending in -ğa: L.-w. in Pe., etc., see Doerfer III 1386. karğu: 'a watch-tower with a beacon on the top to give raid warnings'. Kaş.'s alternative form karğuy is Hap. leg. but perhaps an earlier form, since in II E 37 the word looks more like karğūñ than anything else and an evolution karğūñ > karğuy > karğu: is quite plausible. Türkü viii Selepe: kođı yorıpan karğūñ(?) kisılta: 'marching down the Selenga river I blocked the watch-towers' (and destroyed their dwellings and Survives in NW Kk., Kaz. karğaw; Kumyk, Nog. karğav; cf. karğış. Xak. x1 karğa:ğ (MS. karğa:k, but among words ending in -ğ) 'a curse' (al-la'n); 'hence one says teğri: karğa:ğıpa: İlme: 'do not incur the curse of God' *Kaş. D I kirğa:ğ Hap. leg.; Dev. N. fr. I kirğa:-. Xak. x1 kirğa:ğ 'the anger (ğadab) of a chief or king directed at his subordinates'; hence one says xan an: kirğa:di: 'the king was angry (ğadaba) with him, and shunned him' (a'rađa anhu); they distinguish between the curse of God on His servants and the curse of one servant (of God) on another of his own kind, by placing a fatha (on the qāf) in the first case and a kasra in the second; just as they distinguish between the envoy (rasul, i.e. Prophet) of God, and the envoy of a king, and call the first yala:vaç (-f-) and the second yala:var (-f-) in the Uyg. language Kaş. II 288.

D 2 kirğa:ğ Hap. leg. but see kirğa:ğlığ; Dev. N. fr. 2 kirğa:-*; there is an obvious connection with Çağ. kiriğ/kirik (see kırık) which looks like a Seg. f. of kıdığ; the sound change đ > r is not well attested in Turkish, but đ > z does occur in some languages and z > r in the whole l/r Turkish group (Studies, pp. 37 ff., etc.). Xak. x1 kirğa:ğ kifāfu'l-tawb wa turrāhi 'the selvages of a garment and its edge' *Kaş. Survives in NE, NC, NW kurğak; SC Uzb. kurğok; SW Az. ğurağ; Osm. kurak; Tkm. ğurak; Kaş.'s PU kurka:ğ seems to belong here, but is a dubious form, it is out of alphabetical order and the qāf is not vocalized; kurğag would be a more plausible form. Uyg. viii ff. Bud. korum 'a massive rock, or pile of rocks'; survives in NE Alt., Leb., Şor, Tel. korum R II 561; Khak. xorım Tuv. xorum; SE Turki koram/koyam/kuram Jarring 252; the second element in the well-known name of the town Karakorum, originally an Uyg. capital, but mentioned in Mong. as early as XIII (Haenisch 176). Xak. x1 korum al-saxr 'a massive rock'; and 'abundant wealth' (al-mâlu'l-camm) is called korum; one says ol korum buldı: wacada mâl camm 'he has made a pile' Kaş. I 398; o.o. III 61, 20; 105 (yuvluş-:); KB (whatever country my laws reach) ol él barça étlür taş erse korum 'that country is completely organized, even if it is (only) stone and rock' 830: XIII(?) Tef. korum taş 'a rock' 215.

?D karma: 'pillaging; theft'; etymologically connected with 2 karak; not connected with SW Osm. karma in the phr. karma karışık 'muddled, confused' which is a Dev. N./A. fr. 1 kar-; n.o.a.b. Xak. x1 karma: al-nahb 'pillaging, theft'; hence one says ne:ğ karma:la:dı: 'he stole (nahaba) the thing' Kaş. I 433; ka:ğun karma: bolsa: 'if a melon has been stolen' (muhiba) I 410, 11.

D kirma: Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. kır-; lit. 'scraped' i.e. to a particular shape. In Ar. xarafa means 'to turn (on a lathe)' and maxrūt normally 'conical', but with 'ball' it must mean 'spherical'. Survives in SW Az. ğırma 'pellet, shot'; Osm. kirma 'pleat, fold, crease; broken'. Xak. x1 kirma: al-maxrūt 'turned on a lathe' of anything; hence one says kirma: tobik kura maxrūta 'a spherical ball' Kaş. I 433.

F kurma:n 'bow-case'; there is an apparent etymological connection with kurugluk, same but the word itself, which is only 'dry', seems to be a corruption of

Pe. qurbân, and that word, though not so far traced in Ar. with this meaning, seems to be derived fr. qaraba, which inter alia means 'to put (something) in a sheath or case'. The word seems therefore to be by origin Ar., or at any r. e. Pe.-Ar., and one of a number of such words in Oğuz (see 2 turma:), and the connection with kurugluk illusory. The long note on the word in P. Pelliot, Notes sur l'histoire de la Horde d'Or, Paris, 1950, p. 42, must be corrected accordingly. See also the discussion of Pe. qurbân in Doerfer III 1451. N.o.a.b. Oğuz/Kıp. x1 kurma:n al-miqwas, 'bow case'; one says ké:ş kurma:n 'quiver and bow case'; its origin is fr. ku:rma:n (sic; error for ku:rma:k) şuddi'l-minṭaqa fi'l-wasaṭ 'to fasten a belt round the waist' Kaş. I 444; a.o. III 16 (yasık): (Xwar. xv kurban 'bow-case' Qutb 141); Kıp. xv tirkâş (Pe. l.-w.) There is no widely accepted word for 'bark' in Turkish, most modern languages use kabık/kabuk a Dim. f. of ka:b and not an ancient word. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. kas 'bark' H II 16, 17: Xak. XI ka:z 'the bark (qırf) of any tree'; hence it is quoted in the prov. ka:dıñ ka:şıña ('the birch tree for its bark'); [the zāy] was changed [into] sin, because the zāy came first (?sabaqaḥā) and improved the euphony in speech (?istawfat hażzahā min'a'l-kalām) but when sin followed it there was no room (maḍl) for it in speech and the zāy was changed into sin, just as [in Ar. zāy and şād interchange]; (examples follow) Kaş. III 151 (the text is partially corrupt, but Kaş. seems to have been confused by the fact that after words ending in vowels an euphonic -s- is introduced before Poss. Suffs. and suspected the presence of a similar -s- in ka:şıña); o.o. of the same prov. I 356, 21; III 134, 14; 369, 22; a.o. I 382, 26 (kasuk, q.v.).

Kir.* and occurs in Türkü viii ff. Yen. It is also prob. that it reappears in Uyğ. as küy, but Müller transcribed this as kün, and was perhaps right, see 2 kün. It is possible that, with their different social arrangements, the Turks took this l.-w. as meaning merely 'a secluded spot' and that 2 kuy below is the same word.

VUD kayığ Dev. N./A. fr. kay- (2 *ka:ğ-); the existence of this word is doubtful; in the entry in Kaş. the qif carries a fatha and the yā is unvocalized, but this entry follows koyuğ and the normal order of words with the same consonants in Kaş. is the usual one, fatha, damma, kasra; in this position therefore kıyığ, a Sec. f. of kıdığ, would be expected, and the resemblance between the translations of this word and kıyıık in Kaş. makes this all the more probable. The word in Vel., if correctly translated, is more likely to be a Pass. Dev. N./A., but San. does not mention this meaning and lists only kayuk (kayğuk), and it is very prob. that Vel.'s is a mistranslation. Xak. xi kayığ (?kıyığ) yér al-mawđi'u'l-muhkari 'anıl-cadda wa ğayrihi' 'a place at an angle from the (main) road, etc.' Kaş. III 166: Çağ. xv ff. kayıık/kayuk kayki . . . ardına egilmiş ma'nāsınā 'bent backwards' Vel. 329.

D kıyıık (kıdıık) Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. kıy-; 'crooked, cut on a slant', and the like. Easily confused with kıyığ (kıdığ) in some modern languages. NE Tel. kıyıık 'anger' R II 716; Khak. ıyııx 'injury, insult' may belong here; the word certainly survives in SW Osm. kıyıık 'minced, chopped up' (the translation 'fainting fit' in R II 716 is not confirmed elsewhere); Tkm. ğıyık 'crooked'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. kım-niğ közın ağızın yél tartıp kıyıık kılmuş erser 'if a man's eyes or mouth are made crooked by demoniacal possession' (i.e. a paralytic stroke) H I 124: Xak. xi 'a breach of promise' (xulful-wa'd) is called kıyıık; and it is used as an Adj. (yüşaf), one says kıyıık kış: 'a man who breaks his promises' (muxlāf li'l-ida): kıyıık ne:ğ 'anything crooked', for example a reed-pen cut at an angle (muhbarraf) Kaş. III 167; a.o. I 70, 10: KB (he served his master faithfully and) kayıırça kıyıık kılmađı 'did nothing which was as crooked as a sand-dune' 1723: Çağ. xv ff. kıyıık sıh kışa 'triangular' (quotn.); also used for a triangular towel or woman's veil (quotn.) San. 300r. 4.

kuyağ 'breastplate, cuirass'; an early l.-w. in Mong. (Haenisch 74, Kow. 945); survives as kuyak in most NE languages (including Tuv.); SE Tar.; NC Kzx. R II 901. Cf. küpe:, 2 yarık. Xak. xi KB (he gave him the rank of wazir, a seal, a title, and together with a standard a drum and) kuyağ 'a breastplate' 1036: Çağ. xv ff. kuyak 'a piece of armour (şilāh) like a katlaw which they wear on the day of battle'; the difference between it and the katlaw is that they sew the scales (barghā) of the latter on its surface, and those of the former they put between (the layers of fabric, dar miyān mi-ğudarand) San. 292r. 6 (katlaw is a medieval word, presumably der. fr. 1 kat 'layer, fold').

D koyuğ (kođuğ) Dev. N./A. fr. koy- (ko:d-); of a liquid, 'thick, viscid'; the semantic connection is not close, but cf. koyul-. S.i.a.m.l.g. with minor phonetic changes and extended meanings. L.-w. in Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1589. Uyğ. xiv Chin.-Uyğ. Dict. 'thick, viscid' koyuğ Liğeti 168; R II 528: Xak. xi koyuğ ne:ğ al-taxını'l-ğalız minā'l-māyi'āt 'a thick, viscid liquid'; hence al-rubb 'fruit syrup' is called koyuğ süçiğ sarāb raqiğ ğalız 'a weak (?non-alcoholic) thick drink' Kaş. III 166: KB (listen to the man) bilgi koyuğ 'with profound knowledge' 3829; XIII(?) Tef. koyu yaşıl 'dark green' 211: Çağ. xv ff. koyuk 'viscid' (ğalız) of a liquid, also 'what has sediment at the bottom' San. 292v. 18: Xwar. xiv koyuğ kan takı iriğ kustu 'she vomited thick blood and pus' Nahc. 395. 5.

kuyka: 'skin; fur'. A l.-w. in Mong. kuyika 'the skin of the scalp' (Kow. 853, Haltod 212). NE Kaç., Koib., Sag. (and Tuv.) kuyğa R II 890; NC Kir., Kzx. kuyka, with the latter meaning, seem to be reborrowings fr. Mong. Xak. xi kuyka: basically (fi ašli'l-luğā) 'skin' (al-cild); 'fur' (al-furwa) is called kuyka: after it; hence one says ol koyuğ kuyka:lād: 'he burnt (ahraqa) the hair off the sheep so that the skin appeared, but did not flay it' (lam yashux); that is the process of roasting (al-tasmit) Kaş. III 173: (kuyğa: 'town gate' in Rif. 179 is an error for kapğa: and koyğa in Vel. 334 a misprint of kobğa (kovğa)).

D kayğuk Dev. N. (Conc. N.) fr. kay-; 'a small boat'; etymologically perhaps (a boat of which the prow, and perhaps stern are) 'turned upwards'; smaller than a kemi:. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE (where only keme (sic) is used) w. some phonetic changes. L.-w. in Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1415. Cf. uçan: Xak. xi kayğuk al-zawraq 'a small boat' Kaş. III 175; o.o. I 100 (böğ-); 186, 13: xiv Muh. (?) (after 'ship' kemi:) al-zawraqul-kabir 'a large boat' kayğak (MS. ka:ğnā:k); 'small boat' kıç: kemi: (Rif. 161 (only)); Çağ. xv ff. kayuk (spelt) 'a small boat' (zawraq); the Rümi spell it kayıık San. 281v. 14 (quotn.).
